EPPS'S

(BREAKFAST)

C O C O A.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps provided our breakfast-tables with a delicate flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up, until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us, ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—The Civil Service Gazette.

"MANUFACTURE OF COCOA.—We will now give an account of the process adopted by James Epps & Co., manufacturers of dietetic articles, at their works in Holland Street, Black London."—See Article in "Cassell's Household Guide."

MADE SIMPLY WITH BOILING WATER OR MILK.

SOLD ONLY IN PACKETS LABELLED

PREFACE.

THE PROPRIETORS, in submitting to their Subscribers and the Public the eighth Edition of KELLY'S DIRECTORY OF CAMBRIDGESHIRE, NORFOLK AND SUFFOLK, trust that it may be found equal in accuracy to the previous Editions.

Every effort has been made to render it as perfect as possible. Lists of Hundreds and Poor Law Unions are included in the Topography of each County; it is stated under each Parish in what Hundred, Union and County Court District, and Division of the County, as also in what Diocese, Archdeaconry, and Rural Deanery it is situate, and the College and University and date of appointment of every Beneficed Clergyman have been given, as far as they can be ascertained; the population from the census for 1881 is stated, and the Post Office Savings Banks and Government Annuity and Insurance and Telegraph Offices have been noticed; the names of the Parish Clerks are given under each Parish; lists of Farm Bailiffs of Gentlemen farming their own land are included.

An Enlarged Map of each County has been prepared, on which the new Lines of Railway are laid down.

A sketch of the Geological features of each County is added, for which the Proprietors are indebted to Mr. W. J. Harrison, of the School Board, Birmingham.

The Proprietors have to thank those Clergymen and other Gentlemen who have given the work the benefit of their local knowledge by the assistance rendered to their agents while collecting the information.

mate of Norfolk is on the average decidedly dry. The amount of rainfall are taken at over 100 in the county, many of which belong to the Rev. Port. The average rainfall may be taken at 23½ in annum, i.e. 2,350 tons of rain-water fall on every square foot of the county in the course of an ordinary year. The rainfall for the whole of England is about 36 inches in annum. In 1878, however, the rainfall at Norwich was 45, or 35 per cent above the average! The cold, easterly winds which blow in winter and spring form a feature in the meteorology of Norfolk. They owe their existence to the great extent of land—the plains of North Germany and Russia—which these winds have passed over coming to this country, their brief passage over the Sea not having been sufficient to mitigate their piercing character. There can be no doubt but that the extensive planting of trees, which has been a marked feature in the cultivation of Norfolk during the last decade, will exercise a favourable influence on the climate, both in increasing the rainfall and diminishing the evil effects of the winds.

The soil of Norfolk is of a very varied character; that of the north and west may be said to be sandy, while loams and clays predominate in the centre and east. If left in a natural condition, much of the ground would be poor and barren, but the Norfolk farmers have long been famous for their skill in agriculture, and by mixing the soils, by digging and marling, and adding these to the sandy soils, together with the liberal use of manure, they have rendered this county the most fertile and fruitful in England. The Norfolk system of husbandry is the four-course, i.e. wheat, then root, then barley, then clover or mixed seed ley; on the land the crop of barley every eighth year is followed by peas or beans, then wheat, and so on, so that the hay is cut once in eight years.

The produce of Norfolk consists of chalk, building chalk, flint, stone, bricks, marl, sand for glass making, malt, wheat and other cereals, fruit, and cider, turnips, swedes, flax, seeds; horses, oxen, sheep, pigs, turkeys, game, butter. The fisheries are of vast importance: mackerel, cod, soles, turbot, lobsters and crabs are caught, but the Herring fishery is that for which this county is famous, Yarmouth being the head-quarters, having the largest fleet of smacks engaged, and the produce is about one-third of the entire take in the Kingdom, the numbers being reckoned by "lasts," each "last" comprising 13,000 herrings, for which is from September to end of November; 1,000 persons are employed on shore in the curing of this fish, the supply of distant markets. The manufactures are on the silk, crape, silk, woollen and linen fabrics, hats, and shoes (principally at Norwich), coarse tobacco pipes. The exports of most of these commodities are here also some shipbuilding.

Communication in this county is chiefly by the Great Eastern system. The main line, through Cambridge, enters the county a little north of Brandon, and branches off at Thetford, Attleborough and Wymondham, and thence to Yarmouth and Lowestoft. There is another route from London to Norwich, Yarmouth, and Lowestoft, by the Eastern Union line, via Colchester and the East Suffolk railway to Yarmouth and Lowestoft. The Bungay and Beccles, starts from Tivetshall on the Eastern Union line which is now connected with Wymondham on the main line via Fornsett and Ashwellthorpe; there is a line to Yarmouth and also a branch to Cromer and Cromer, and from Wroxham, on this line to Aylsham, thence to Reepham and Broome in Elmham parish. From Ely is a line through the branch to Stoke Ferry to Lynn, with a branch to Magdalen road to Wisbech; from Lynn the line goes to Hunstanton and Wells, where it joins that to Aylsham, which passes through East Dereham and Fakenham. The Lynn and East Dereham railway connects the two towns, passing through Swaffham on its route; from Swaffham is the line to Watton, which there meets the line from Thetford, from which latter town is a branch to Edmunds, in Suffolk. Communication with the counties and the north is effected by the Midland and Northern London and North Western railways, via March and Peterborough.

The Great Eastern and Midlands railway has its terminus at the town of Yarmouth. This railway company has been the amalgamation of the Lynn and Fakenham, and North Norfolk, Midland and Eastern, Peterborough and Sutton and Yarmouth Union Companies crossing the northern part of the county from Choseby, by this means a new and direct communication is established between the county and the north and north-west.

of North Walsham, Aylsham, Melton Constable and Fakenham in direct communication with Yarmouth, and provides an alternative route to Norwich and Lynn. The celebrated Norfolk Broads are easily accessible by this railway.

Norfolk seems to have been first occupied by an Iberian race, afterwards by Britons, and then by Belgians; in Cæsar's time it was held by the powerful tribe of the Iceni, who were finally subdued by the Romans; afterwards it was settled by several commonwealths of the East English, who seem to have been of the same clans or tribes as those who settled in Middlesex and Surrey.

The duchy of Norfolk has for a long time been held by the powerful house of Howard, who descend from the several ancient princes who have inherited the earldom and duchy. The Duke of Norfolk still exercises a peculiar and permanent jurisdiction over his large domains in this county, and appoints two coroners for his liberties.

Norfolk is in the province of Canterbury, diocese of Norwich, divided into the archdeacons of Norfolk and Norwich. Norfolk archdeaconry is sub-divided into the rural deaneries of Brooke, Burnham, Cranwise or Cranwich, Depwade, Fincham, Heacham, Hingham, Humbleyard, Redenhall, Repp, Rockland and Waxham. Norwich archdeaconry is sub-divided into the rural deaneries of Blofield, Breccles, Brisley, Flegg, Holt, Ingworth, Lynn (Norfolk), Lynn (Marshland), Norwich, Sparham, Taverham, Thetford, Toftrees and Walsingham. Norfolk includes the county of the city of Norwich, and contains about 800 parishes.

The municipal and parliamentary boroughs are:—

	pop. 1881
Norwich City .....	87,843
King's Lynn .....	18,454

Municipal boroughs only are:—

Thetford .....	4,032
Great Yarmouth .....	46,159

Other towns are Aylsham, pop. 2,647; Dereham, 5,640; Diss, 3,845; Downham Market, 3,264; Fakenham, 2,746; Swaffham, 3,643; North Walsham, 3,233; Wells-next-Sea, 2,647; Wymondham, 4,566.

The county, for Parliamentary purposes, was formerly divided into East and West Norfolk, but by the "Representation of the People Act, 1867," it was divided into three divisions, viz., North East, South East and West; each returns two members, and by the "Boundary Act, 1868," the first two were altered to North and South respectively. The population in 1881 was, of North Norfolk, 116,714; South Norfolk, 200,934; West Norfolk, 127,177. The city of Norwich and the borough of King's Lynn each returns two members. Yarmouth was disfranchised by the "Representation of the People Act, 1867," and the borough of Thetford was disfranchised on the passing of the "Representation of the People, (Scotland) Act, 1868," by the clause which took seven members from England and gave them to Scotland.

Norfolk is in the South Eastern circuit; the county and assize town is Norwich; quarter sessions are holden at Norwich, and by adjournments also at Swaffham. Norwich, Yarmouth and Lynn have separate jurisdictions.

NORFOLK.

NORFOLK is a seacoast county, in the East of England, on the shores of the North Sea, close to the Great Wash: it took its name from the East English settlers, who called their people in these parts the "North folk," now Norfolk, and in the southern parts of their kingdom "South folk," now Suffolk. The county is of an egg shape, the ends lying east and west; the northern half being bounded by the Wash and the North Sea, and the southern half abutting on the county of Suffolk, with a small part to the west joining Cambridgeshire. The boundary between Norfolk and Suffolk is the river Waveney, from its mouth at Yarmouth, south-westerly, to near its spring, and then by the Thet, or Little Ouse, flowing north-westerly. From Cambridgeshire, Norfolk is divided by the Nene. The greatest length is 67 miles, and the greatest breadth 43. The area is 1,356,173 acres, making it the fourth shire in size, Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and Devonshire being larger. The population was in 1801, 273,479; in 1811, 291,947; in 1821, 344,368; in 1831, 390,654; in 1841, 412,664; in 1851, 442,714; in 1861, 434,798; in 1871, 428,656; in 1881, 444,825, of which the males were 215,007, females, 229,818. The number of houses were, inhabited, 99,439; uninhabited, 6,059; building 468.

The county is very level, containing no elevations worthy of notice, while the coast only rises into cliffs of any height at Hunstanton and Cromer. Chalk forms the foundation of nearly the whole county, but except in the west it is covered by beds of clay and sand so that it can only be reached in deep wells and borings.

On the west, the Cambridgeshire border is very low, and much of the land is fen, belonging to the Bedford Level. This part is watered by the Great Ouse, the Nene, and drained by many fen dykes. Wisbech is the port on the extreme west, on the Nene; it is in Cambridgeshire, but on the border of Norfolk; Lynn, on the Great Ouse and the navigable Nar, close to the Wash, is the great port of the western parts of the county, and of all the neighbouring fen lands. The northern shore has no rivers, and the cliffs are bluff; but there are landing and shipping places at Hunstanton, Burnham, Wells, Blakeney, Cromer, Brancaster Staith, Mundesley, and some other places for the local supply, and the shore is thickly set with fishing stations; the inner part of the county is intersected by spreading streams, which water a wide district, and flow to the sea at Yarmouth, where, in former times, was a great estuary, now filled up. These rivers are the Bure, the Ant, the Wensum, passing Norwich, the Yare, and the Waveney; near the sea they expand into large pools, called broads or meres, forming excellent preserves for fishing, and being a peculiar characteristic of this county. In the south-west the country is watered by the Thet, the Little Ouse, and the Wissey, feeders of the Great Ouse. About a mile east of South Lopham, in the fen or low lands, is Lopham Gate, where there are two springs, from which flow the little Ouse and Waveney; the former takes a course through Thetford, Brandon and Lynn, and the latter flows to Yarmouth, and both divide the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk.

The names of the Norfolk rivers—the Ouse, the Nene, the Nar, the Thet, the Glaven, the Thurn, the Bure, the Yare, the Waveney, the Great Ouse, the Ant—are mostly Euskardian or Saxon names of the towns and hamlets are English, except in the east, where they are generally Danish, the population being largely mixed with the latter race, and their dialect differing from that of the other English by the frequent adoption of Danish words, accents, and pronunciation.

The Great Ouse, Nene, Wissey, Little Ouse, and Nar, are navigable, as are also the Yare, Bure, Ant, Thurn, Wensum and Waveney. There are no canal works of importance except the dykes in the fens. There are havens at Yarmouth, Lynn and Yarmouth; the two latter are much frequented by vessels of various tonnage, which take out agricultural produce and bring in foreign goods. Yarmouth is one of the chief towns in England for the herring and oyster fisheries, which are carried on all along the Norfolk coast. Yarmouth is also the port of the manufacturing town of Norwich, and a popular bathing place. Lowestoft is a busy harbour and fishing and bathing town on the Suffolk coast. Hunstanton, Burnham, Blakeney, Cley, Cromer and Yarmouth are small ports, fishing towns, or bathing places.

In the North Sea the flood tide wave enters from the Atlantic Ocean between the coast of Norway and the Fens, and passing through various channels enters the Great Ouse, and on quitting which it divides into two branches, of which the western swells along the Scottish and English coasts, making high water in all their rivers and harbours successively until it arrives in the Thames. Near the mouth of the Great Ouse, the streams of tide run parallel to the shore; off Wells the flood runs to the westward till 9 o'clock, or three hours after high water at the shore; 4 miles off Cromer, and the same distance off Burnham, the flood stream runs alongshore to the south till 10h. 15m. or 1h. 45m. before high water at Harwich; the ebb in a contrary direction. At 2½ miles off Lowestoft the flood stream continues to run to the S.W. till 1h. 15m. before high water at Harwich, and at Orfordness till 1h. 30m. before high water at Harwich; the flood setting W.S.W. at the ebb E.N.E.

The Norfolk County Lunatic Asylum is at Thorpe, near Norwich: it was erected in 1814, and consists of an extensive range of buildings of white brick, which have undergone extensive alterations: the interior is exceedingly light and clean, the grounds are spacious, and the air salubrious: additional buildings were erected in 1869-70, and in 1873-4: the house at present contains 175 male and 313 women inmates: a large red brick building has been erected for chronic imbecile and harmless patients; William Charles Hills M.D. resident medical superintendent; Thomas J. Compton M.B. assistant medical officer; Alexander McWilliam M.A., M.B. junior assistant medical officer; Charles Williams, hon. visiting medical officer; Rev. Edward Ram, chaplain; R. W. Hoddy, examiner of accounts; W. M. Girling, clerk and house steward; R. M. Phipson, architect, William Birkbeck, treasurer; P. E. Hansell, clerk to the committee of visitors; Mrs. Arnoup, housekeeper. The committee meet on the last Tuesday in every month, at 11 o'clock, at the Asylum.

The Naval Lunatic Asylum at Great Yarmouth is situated at the southern extremity of the town; the inmates consist of 40 officers and 160 seamen.

The Norfolk and Norwich Hospital, Norwich, was founded in 1770, and re-built in 1882, the first stone having been laid by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, 17th June, 1872. The new building was opened by T.R.H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, on Monday, August 20th, 1883. Peter Eade M.D. Frederic Bateman M.D. and Shepherd Thomas Taylor M.B. physicians; William Cadge, Thomas William Crosse and Charles Williams, surgeons; Michael Beverley and Haynes Sparrow Robinson, assistant surgeons; Donald Douglas Day M.B. resident surgeon; Rev. John Callis, chaplain; T. R. Tallack, secretary; and W. G. Crook, dispenser and analyst.

The West Norfolk and Lynn Hospital, near the London road, Lynn, a spacious and handsome building of white brick, was established December, 1834, at a cost of more than £3,000, and in 1847 two wings were added, called the Harwood and Hankinson Wards: the building will now accommodate 52 inmates: it is supported by voluntary contributions; a separate ward for contagious cases was erected in 1877 as a memorial of the late Rev. John Freeman, the biographer of Kirby the entomologist. The Marquis of Cholmondeley, president; Francis Joseph Cresswell esq. treasurer; Dr. William Dale, physician; John Lowe M.D. and G. B. Sweeting M.D. consulting surgeons; G. B. Sweeting M.D. S. M. W. Wilson and Charles B. Plowright, surgeons; G. F. Hayes, dentist; Sydney H. Lindeman, house surgeon and secretary; Mrs. E. Brightman, matron.

The castle at Norwich is of ancient foundation, and from its height is one of the most striking buildings in the city: there are some Saxon arches and a great Norman keep, 110 feet long, 92 feet wide and 70 feet 9 inches high : this, with the other buildings, is now used as her Majesty's prison for the county; Arthur Edmund Dent, acting governor; Rev. H. M. Thomson M.A. chaplain; Haynes S. Robinson, surgeon; Miss Eliza Candler, matron; A. H. Hollingdale, chief warder.

The Norfolk county school is situated about 2 miles from Elmham station, on the summit of a hill near the river Wensum, standing in 57 acres in this and Bintry parishes. The foundation stone was laid on Easter Monday, 1873, by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the school was opened in 1874: it is a handsome range of building in the Domestic Gothic style, consisting of a great central hall, a school-room, dining-hall (each being 80 ft. by 40), library, class room and dormitories, having the head master's residence so situated as to have direct communication with all parts of the school: it is owned by a limited liability association (capital, £15,000), and is conducted on the Public school system: the educational staff comprises the head master, second master, and six assistant masters: pupils may be admitted after the age of 8 years. The Prince of Wales has marked his wish to be permanently considered a founder and benefactor, by presenting £250 for annual scholarships: a scholarship of £10 yearly value has been founded as a memorial of the late Mr. Robert Overman, of Egmere, and there are seventeen other scholarships and numerous endowed prizes. The school is a centre for the Cambridge local examinations. A chapel for the use of the scholars has been erected in connection with the school. H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, patron; the Earl of Leicester K.G. president; Rev. William Watson M.A. head master; William Henry Hill B.Sc. second master; P. P. Ransom, medical officer.

 Jones and Mr. Brady.

THE strata of Norfolk have long been the subject of diligent investigation by local workers. Mr. Samuel Woodward published an excellent "Outline of the Geology of Norfolk," in 1833, and before his time Mr. R. C. Taylor had done good work at the Crag and Cliff sections. In the Journal of the Geological Society we have since had excellent papers on the Red Chalk of Hunstanton by the Rev. T.
 Wiltshire, on the Crag by Professors Prestwich, Boyd
 Dawkins and Messrs. Whitaker, Gunn, the Rev. O. Fisher
 &c. Mr. Searles V. Wood's account of the Crag Mollusca, published by the Palaeontographical Society, in which every species is figured, was a grand contribution, whilst for the same Society Professor Duncan has described the Corals, Professor Forbes the Echinoderms, Professor Busk the Polyzoa, and Rupert Jones and Brady the Foraminifera.
 Mr. S. V. Wood, jun. assisted by Mr. Harmer, has described the Glacial Deposits with a skill and care which are worthy of the highest praise, and among other workers we may mention Messrs. Trimmer, Rose, John Evans, Flower, Norton and Breese.

In the Norwich Museum there is a splendid collection of local fossils, and the Norwich Geological and Natural History Societies and the Norwich Science Gossip Club have done and are doing good work.

It is, however, to the Government Geological Survey that we look for a full and decisive account of the rocks of any part of England. The officers of the Survey, however, began their work some forty years ago in the south-west of England and in Wales, and have ever since been advancing eastwards, until quite lately they have begun to examine the counties which border on the North Sea, the geological map of Norfolk, on the scale of one inch to one mile, which they will prepare, together with the memoirs published to describe the country, will, doubtless, set at rest many vexed questions and form a noble contribution to the science of Geology. Already Mr. S. B. J. Skerchly has written an excellent account of the "Fenland," together with a most interesting memoir on the gun-flint manufacture at Brandon, whilst valuable notes have been issued by Messrs. W. Whitaker, Clement Reid, Horace B. Woodward, W. H. Penning and J. H. Blake.

As a resident of a county, two-thirds of whose outline is encompassed by the sea, the geologist dwelling in Norfolk enjoys a great advantage; indeed, but for the fine sections of the glacial deposits exposed in the cliffs it is almost certain that these puzzling beds could never have been satisfactorily examined or understood. The coast line undulates both in height and outline: King's Lynn (St. John's church) is 16 feet above the sea, Holkham (church) 94 feet, Cromer Lighthouse 248 feet, Cromer Church 68 feet, Mundesley (church) 115 feet, Trimmingham (church) 195 feet, Husborough (church) 70 feet and Winterton Lighthouse 61 feet.

The surface of the county generally is flat and undulating: along a line across the centre from west to east the Ordnance Survey levelling gave the following heights:—Walsoken (church) 13 feet, West Bilney 54 feet, Swaffham (church) 238 feet, East Dereham (church) 165 feet, Hockering (church) 163 feet, Norwich Castle 111 feet, St. Mary's Church 18 feet, and Great Yarmouth (St. Peter's Church) 23 feet.

Taking a general view we find, on the extreme west, a small portion, just the edge, of the Fen district, extending from Welney and Hilgay fen to the Wash; then comes a gently rising slope leading up to a line of low chalk hills, which run from Hunstanton and Burnham Westgate southwards by Swaffham to Thetford: east of this line the chalk stretches right across to the sea, but is so covered over by later deposits as to be rarely visible at the surface, except in the valleys of the principal rivers. The watershed of the county lies nearly in the centre, along a line passing from Brancaster through Litcham, Dereham, Hingham and Attleborough to Lopham Ford, where the Waveney and Little Ouse rise within a few yards of each other and then flow in diametrically opposite directions.

The rocks of Norfolk fall naturally into two divisions: the first includes those of great age, which form what we may call the solid geology of the county; these have a general easterly dip, so that the oldest rocks crop out on the west side of the county: the second division comprises all those surface accumulations, whether of glacial, alluvial or marine origin, which lie upon the older beds (from which they are separated by an immense interval of time) in an unconformable and irregular manner.

THE OOLITIC FORMATION.—On the east side of King's Lynn and running northwards along the Wash nearly to Hunstanton and southwards past Watlington to near Downham Market we have a narrow strip of Kimmeridge Clay; this is the Oaktree Clay of William Smith, who noticed that oaks grow remarkably well upon it: it is a tenacious dark-coloured clay, but exposures are scanty in this neighbourhood: dipping eastwardly it passes under the chalk &c. and was probably reached at a depth of 743 feet in a deep well-boring at Holkham; but before we reach the east coast it is absent, having thinned out or been denuded, as the deep boring at Harwich showed no trace of it. The Purbeck and Portland beds, which rest upon the Kimmeridge Clay in the south of England, are here absent.

THE NEOCOMIAN FORMATION.—The Wealden strata being also absent, the Lower Greensand reposes directly on the Kimmeridge Clay: it is locally termed Carstone, a word which may be derived from "Quernstone," as some beds were formerly used to make the querns or stone hand-mills in which our ancestors ground their corn. This Lower Greensand consists of alternating beds of red and white sand and sandstone about 70 feet in thickness: it forms the lower portion of Hunstanton Cliff where it is of a yellow tint above and dark-brown below, loose and sandy and full of small pebbles: near the base is a line of nodules containing Ammonites Deshayesi, Perna mulletti &c. From this point the sandstone can be traced southward by Snettisham and Castle Rising to Downham Market. The hard beds are used for building purposes, and the white sands in the manufacture of glass. At one place there is a seam of fullers' earth.

THE GAULT (AND RED CHALK).—One of the most attractive geological sections on the coast of England is exhibited in Hunstanton Cliff: its base—formed of Carstone—we have just described: upon the yellow sands which constitute the top of this division there rests a band of bright "Red Chalk," four feet thick, above which, forming the top of the cliff, comes the White Chalk 40 feet thick: the extreme height of the section is only 60 feet, but as all the beds slope or dip to the north and east at an angle of about two degrees, a much greater thickness of strata is visible than if they were all horizontal. The bed of Red Chalk, as it has been named, has attracted much attention: it is full of fossils—Belemnites minimus, Spongia (or Siphonia) paradoxia, Terebratula biplicata, Ammonites auritus, and about 50 other species, of which two—Bourgueticrinus rugosus and Terebratula capillata—are in England, confined to this deposit. This red bed can be readily traced for 8 miles southwards to Sandringham; a little further south at Fritcham, a red clay was found to underlie the white chalk, and further south still a stiff blue clay—the well-known Gault—had taken the place of this red clay. Thus the Gault and the Red Chalk would seem to be of the same age, and this impression is confirmed by a study of the fossils, which are to a large extent common to both formations: the colour is no objection, but rather tends to confirm this opinion: analyses by Mr. David Forbes showed that ordinary Gault contained nearly 6 per cent. of protoxide of iron, while the Red Chalk contained almost exactly the same amount of peroxide of iron: now the former salt of iron readily changes into the latter, as we see when the Gault Clay is burnt into red bricks; the change is brought about by the simple addition of oxygen.

It is possible that the upper portion of the Red Chalk may represent the Upper Greensand of the southern counties, and this is a point to which the attention of local geologists may well be directed, as its proof or disproof must rest mainly on extensive collections of fossils made with great care and with special reference to the position in the bed in which they occur. In the Holkham boring, after passing through 20 feet of gravel and 635 of chalk, the Red Chalk was found to be 8 feet thick, and to rest on 10 feet of "Blue Gault," so that here the red bed would seem to represent the upper part of the Gault only.

At Norwich the boring showed 12 feet of alluvium, then 1,042 feet of chalk, 6 feet of "Upper Greensand" and 36 feet of Gault, in which the boring stopped: the stratum termed "Upper Greensand" may only have been an upper sandy division of the Gault.

THE CHALK.—This rock is seen on an ordinary geological map to form a larger proportion of Norfolk than of any other English county; yet the portion of which it is the actual surface is comparatively small: this arises from the fact that in such maps the Drift—as the glacial deposits are termed—is not shown, and the Drift lies thickly upon the chalk in this county. Every person is familiar with the appearance of ordinary white chalk: it is a soft white earthy limestone—nearly pure carbonate of lime in fact, which the microscope shews to be largely composed of the minute shells of foraminifera: these are minute animals, occupying a very low place in the scale of creation—mere specks of jelly to look at—which construct for themselves a calcareous covering or shell: they seem to live chiefly near the surface and at a considerable distance from land. Many soundings of late years have shown that the bed of the North Atlantic and other portions of the ocean floor is composed of a whitish ooze formed of the shells of forams which have sunk to the bottom after the death of the inhabitant: in this manner the chalk was probably formed, and the period required for the accumulation of this deposit, having a thickness in Norfolk of about 1,000 feet, must have been of immense duration. Three divisions can be made in the chalk of this district.

The Chalk Marl.—In the Hunstanton Cliff section about four feet of a greyish-white limestone is seen to rest on the red band; this white bed is the chalk marl: it is only about four feet in thickness, and in the lower part we find the same branching sponge which occurs in the Red Chalk; the upper portion is full of the fragments of a shell called Inoceramus; some large ammonites also occur in it.

The Lower or Hard Chalk.—This forms the upper portion of Hunstanton Cliff. Passing inland, we can follow it by means of quarries through Snettisham, Gayton, Marham, Narborough, Whittington and Stoke Ferry to Feltwell and Hockwold-cum-Wilton: it is much used in western Norfolk, together with carstone, for the construction of cottages and farm buildings; many carvings and monuments for the interior of churches have also been executed in it. No flints occur in this Lower Chalk: its thickness in the deep boring executed by Mather and Platt for Messrs. Colman, at Norwich, was found to be 102 feet, and in the Holkham boring 116 feet. Of fossils it has yielded bones of a large saurian—Ichthyosaurus campylodon—and two ammonites—Ammonites peramplus and A. austenii—large species about two feet in diameter.

The Upper Chalk or Chalk with Flints.—This division comes on to the eastward of that last described and forms the great bulk of the formation: in the Norwich boring it was found to attain the great thickness of 940 feet, and at Holkham (where the upper portion has been denuded) 519 feet: it yields a large supply of good but hard water. The dip of the Chalk is to the eastwards, about 48 feet per mile, or half a degree. The lower part of this division is exposed at Brancaster, Docking, Lexham, Litcham, Swaffham and Thetford; the texture of it more compact, and the flints fewer than in higher beds. As we pass eastwards we find numerous chalk-pits at Wells, Holt, Coltishall, Horstead, Whittingham, Postwick, Trimmingham, Trowse, &c. The flints mark the stratification well, and are usually arranged in horizontal layers about five feet apart. On the origin of flint, Mr. S. Woodward makes some acute remarks in the Geology of Norfolk, which, as we have already mentioned, he published in 1833. He writes:—"The fact of the regular parallelism and stratification of the flinty nodules is, we conceive, a sufficient refutation of their animal origin; added to which there is not a greater number of organic remains to be found in the flinty stratum than is seen distributed in the adjoining bed of Chalk. . . . In accounting for the different appearance of the Chalk formation in its upper and lower beds, we venture to advance it as our opinion, that, the whole being deposited in one homogeneous mass, in which about 12 per cent. of silex was equally distributed, the lower part . . . began to consolidate ere any arrangement of the siliceous particles could take place, whilst in the upper part these particles, by chemical attraction, congregated themselves into the nodular and tubular forms under which they appear." In several quarries near Norwich, as that famous one at Horstead, figured and described by Sir Charles Lyell, and at Trowse, immense pear-shaped flints, from two to five feet in length and half as much in breadth, are found, several often occurring one above the other; for these Dr. Buckland imported the name Paramoudra, an Irish word for similar masses occurring in the chalk near Belfast: they are often hollow, and seem to have been formed by the accumulation of flint round decaying gigantic sponges. Of shells, the commonest species, near Norwich, are Terebratula carnea and Rhynchonella plicatilis. At Bishop's Bridge fine specimens of a great reptile—the Mosasauros—have been met with, but these are usually so decayed that only the teeth can be extracted. "Remains of Dodon anceps, a Lacertilian reptile allied to Mosasauros, have been obtained by Mr. T. G. Bayfield, at Lollard's Pit, Norwich. But the very highest beds of chalk known in Norfolk are those which occur at Trimmingham and which contain fossil sponges in the flints, only found elsewhere in the coarse flint-gravel which caps Mousehold Heath."—(Woodward.)

In many sections the upper 5 to 20 feet of the chalk appears to be re-arranged, mixed up with clay and sand, and containing broken flints with pebbles of quartzite, &c.: the beds beneath, too, are often tilted and disturbed: these appearances are due to the passage of glaciers over the surface, as will be described further on.

TERTIARY PERIOD.—An interval of time, whose duration must have been great indeed, elapsed after the formation of the chalk before any fresh deposits were laid down in this area: the best proof of this great interregnum is found in the entire change of life which took place in this interval. In the strata we are now about to describe not one fossil is identically the same as those which occur in the older beds: this point then is selected by geologists as a great line of demarcation; the chalk is assigned to the Secondary Period, and the beds which rest upon it to the Tertiary.

Eocene Formation.—The presence of beds of this age in Norfolk was not suspected until the cores brought up from a deep well-boring at Great Yarmouth in 1840 (for Sir E. Lacy & Co.) were examined many years later by Professor Prestwich together with the Rev. John Gunn and Mr. Rose: the boring passed first through 50 feet of blown sand, then through 120 feet of recent estuarine deposits: at a depth of 170 feet a light-brown clay with numerous concretions was found, and proved to be 310 feet thick; this, though no fossils were brought up, Professor Prestwich states is undoubtedly London Clay; beneath it came 46 feet of Woolwich and Reading Beds: the chalk was found at a depth of 526 feet, and pierced to a depth of 57 feet. These Eocene beds are nowhere exposed at the surface in Norfolk, and they probably occur only along the coast, covered over and concealed by newer deposits.

Pliocene Formation.—In the neighbourhood of Norwich, and along a narrow strip on the north side of the river Waveney, near Buqay, we see resting on the chalk some beds of sand, clay and shingle, not more than 30 feet in thickness, and often containing seams or banks of shells: these beds are termed the Norwich Crag (crag is derived from the Celtic craggan, a shell, the beds being often so shelly as to be used for improving land): they were first well described by Mr. E. Charlesworth in 1835, and the names Mammaliferous Crag and Fluvio-marine Crag have also been applied to them. In Suffolk and Essex beds called Red Crag and Coralline Crag also occur, which were deposited (the latter at all events) before the time of the Norwich Crag, although the Norfolk series may perhaps be coeval with the upper part of the Red Crag of Suffolk: in the large chalk-pits near Norwich, as at Trowse, Whittingham, Thorpe Lincolne, Horstead, Colishall, and at Bramerton and Postwick Grove, the Norwich Crag is well exposed: here, resting on the chalk, can be seen the "stone-bed," showing an eroded surface of chalk, bored by Pholas, on which lie large flints, upon and between which are many bones of large mammals, as Mastodon arvernensis, Elephas meridionalis, the Horse, Stag, Ox, Beaver &c.: above comes the Norwich crag proper—laminated clay, sand and shingle, with here and there patches of shells; the commonest species are Tellina obliqua, Maetra ovalis, Purpura lapillus &c. Resting on the Norwich Crag, of which they may be regarded as a sub-division, we find the Chillesford Beds—sands and clays about 5 or 10 feet thick, containing such shells as Astarte borealis, Tellina lata &c. A fine section of the Chillesford Beds is exposed in a brick pit near Aldeby and about four miles from Beccles: this pit has been carefully searched by Messrs. Dowson and Crowfoot, who have obtained more than 70 species of mollusks from it. Altogether 111 species have been obtained from the Norwich Crag proper, 24 of which are land or fresh water forms, and there are 18 extinct species; from the Chillesford Beds 87 species have been obtained, 14 of which are not known as living.

All the above beds were probably deposited in a shallow sea, the coast line of which lay some few miles west of Norwich, and near or in the estuary of a large river. The shells show a gradual change of climate, the Mediterranean forms met with in the lower strata gradually disappearing, and those of colder seas taking their place.

QUATERNARY PERIOD.—The PLEISTOCENE FORMATION includes all the deposits connected with the last glacial period; of these Norfolk presents a series more complete than is to be met with in any other part of the British Isles. In a few places on the coast we see the PRE-GLACIAL BEDS exposed, as at Cromer, Runton and Weybourne: these include the Forest Bed, which can be traced from Runton by Cromer and Hasbro to Kessingland in Suffolk, a distance of about 40 miles. At low water, or after heavy storms, the stumps of trees may be seen imbedded in laminated clays and sands; cones of Scotch fir and spruce are common, with bones of such large mammals as Elephas antiquus, Hippopotamus, Rhinoceros, many species of deer &c.: it is now generally considered that these bones were washed out of some older deposit, and it is even doubtful whether the trees grew on the spot where we now see them. The Weybourne Sands and Bure Valley Beds are of the same age as the Forest Bed: they contain Tellina balthica, a characteristic glacial shell; they lie unconformably on the Chillesford Beds. Fossilized remains of large mammals have been obtained in large numbers by the fishermen who with their nets sweep the shallow floor of the German Ocean: of these the late Rev. James Layton formed a magnificent collection, which is now in the British Museum: it is stated that he had at one time as many as 600 grinders of the elephant in his possession. Fine collections have also been made by the late Miss Gurney, of North Repps, the Rev. John Gunn and Messrs. C. B. Rose, Owles, Steward and Nash. Many fine tusks of the mammoth, measuring from six to nine feet along the curve, have been dredged up from the Knole Sand, off Hasborough. Miss Gurney's collection is now in the Norwich Museum.

LOWER GLACIAL BEDS.—Next in the Lower Boulder Clay or Cromer Till we have a series, about 200 feet thick, showing an undoubted glacial origin: it is a greyish clay, containing rounded and scratched stones, such as chalk, flint, blue basalt, pink granite &c.: then we have the Contorted Drift, a yellowish, loamy and gravelly deposit, remarkable for the way in which it is seen to be bent "contorted" by some force acting after its deposition: it contains enormous masses of chalk, some of which measure hundreds of feet in length: the contortions and included chalk masses are believed to be due to the grounding of great icebergs floating slowly southwards. A few marine shells occur, among which Tellina balthica is recognisable. These Lower Glacial Beds stretch inland and cover the surface of a considerable area in the north-east of Norfolk, as far south as the course of the Yare and Wensum.

MIDDLE GLACIAL BEDS.—These are sands which appear to mark a comparatively warm or "inter-glacial" period: they are from 15 to 70 feet thick, and occupy large areas, cropping out from beneath the chalky boulder clay. Shells have been found at Billockby, 8 miles north-west of Yarmouth, in a thin shelly seam, about 4 or 5 feet below the top of the sand: great interest attaches to these beds; for, near Brandon, brick-earths of this period have yielded flint implements—the undoubted work of man.

UPPER GLACIAL BEDS.—The well-known Great Chalky Boulder Clay spreads over the centre, south, and south-west of this county: its extreme thickness here is above 100 feet: it is a stiff bluish clay, quite unstratified and containing fragments of chalk of all sizes, together with a heterogeneous collection of rocks and fossils, derived from almost every formation: it appears to have been formed beneath, or pushed before, a great glacier, advancing from the north. The boulders and meres, so distinctive of this county, are small sheets of water which probably occupy basins scooped out by ice-action.

Hill, Plateau, or Flood Gravels.—These are coarse gravels, which seem to have been formed by floods resulting from the melting of great glaciers: the "cannon-shot" gravel of Mousehold Heath is a good example: this is mainly composed of large much-battered flints, with quartz and quartzite pebbles.

POST-GLACIAL DEPOSITS:—

Valley Gravels.—Numerous beds, of very different ages, are included under this term: some belong to a system of rivers, which flowed nearly at right angles to those of the present day: these beds have yielded many flint implements.

In the cliffs at Mundesley there is an old filled-up river bed, which has lately yielded remains of a tortoise (Emys lutaria).

Blown Sand—forms the "Marram Hills," between Winterton and Hasborough: these form a natural barrier against the sea, and are kept up with great care.

The Fen-Beds.—The gravelly beds between Brandon and Huckwold-cum-Wilton, and the Nar Valley clays, which extend from Watlington to Narford, seem to be the oldest of the Fen deposits: the peat of Hilgay Fen comes next; and, as we follow this northwards, we find it becomes interstratified with a marine deposit of silt, which forms the land between Downham Market and Walsoken northwards to the Wash. This Fen district is the "Marshland" of Norfolk; and, in its flat surface, its remarkable drainage system, buried forests &c. has many points of interest all its own. Of the former condition of this region, Mr. Skeretchley has given us a striking picture.—"Great meres existed which received the surplus waters; and, surrounded with reed-brakes, such as even now the country produces with surpassing beauty, afforded shelter to myriads of wild birds, which found abundant food in the waters. Dank morasses, covered with sedge and rush and flags, abounded on the peat lands, and the cushion-clumps of sedge (Carex paniculata) afforded a hazardous foothold to the nimble wayfarer. On these morasses, and on the firmer, or rather drier soil, grass attained a rank luxuriance; and here the cattle grazed, and thrived wondrously. But in winter, nearly all the peat-land was drowned, or as the old fen-men say, "surrounded," and then the hardy inhabitants went from island to island in small boats, or travelled quickly over the smooth ice. The border-land was clothed with forest growth; and, seawards of the timber-trees, clumps of willow and sallow gave shelter to the wild-boar and the wolf. On the silt-lands the lower portions were surrounded in winter, and often far into the summer; and East and West Fens (and especially the former), almost always presented a lake-like appearance. The soil was fertile; the waters, the woods, and the air were tenanted with game. Famine could never be known, for the land literally overflowed with food, and, as a consequence, the people degenerated into a thriftless race, whose only strong passion was a love of freedom."

Now all this is changed; the great works which have been carried on, almost without intermission, from the time of Charles I. to the present day, have so drained the land, that in dry years (as 1874) there is a positive lack of water.

Denudation of the Coast.—The coast of Norfolk, especially where it rises into cliffs of any height, has suffered greatly from the action of the sea, combined with that of landsprings: the sea, by dashing against the base of the cliffs, using as missiles the fallen stones, rapidly undermines them, when the upper part falls in and is swept away by the waves: the springs flowing along the junction of previous beds (sands) with impervious ones (clays) loosen the adhesion of the beds and the upper part slides down on to the beach: in this way the whole coast is receding at the rate of perhaps one yard per annum. "Since the Conquest the villages of Shipden, Keswick, Clare, Wimpwell, Eccles, and Ness, or the greater part of them, have been washed away. The remains of Eccles Church are still to be seen, buried as it were within the Marram Hills." (S. Taylor). A letter by Mr. C. Reid in the "Geological Magazine," thus describes the damage done by the storm of January 30th, 1877: "I have examined the coast from Hasborough to beyond Sherringham, and the damage done is marvellous. Probably the loss of land along the whole line of coast mentioned may be estimated at a yard. At the life-boat gap at Bacton the amount that has gone is 15 yards, and a strip of about that width is missing as far as the Walcot gap (three furlongs). . . . The most serious loss is at Lower Sherringham, there Mr. Upscher has lost two acres; nearly all the sea-wall has been swept away; none of the gangways are left; a cottage and a shed have fallen into the sea, the inn on the cliffs has had the windows broken, and is in a very unsafe condition, and should another gale occur now much of the village will go. Mr. Upscher informs me that he reckons his loss of land during the past sixty years to be thirty acres at the very least."

PREHISTORIC MAN.—Of the comparatively rough flint implements which belong to the older or Palæolithic division of the Stone Age, many specimens have been found in the old river-gravels along the valley of the Little Ouse, at Lopham Ford, Shrub Hill near Feltwell, White Hill and Red Hill near Thetford, Bromehill near Weeting &c.: these were chipped into shape but never polished; they are either pointed or oval in form, and the average size is from 5 to 7 inches long and 2 to 4 broad. Of the later or Neolithic Stone Age numerous specimens of celts (axe-heads), arrow-heads, flakes &c. have been found on or near the surface, or in barrows at Attleborough, Aylsham, Cromer, Neeton, North Walsham, Pentney, Sporle near Swaffham, Norwich &c. In the meres at Wretham, 5 miles north of Thetford, traces of undoubted lake-dwellings were met with; these have been described by Professor A. Newton and Sir C. Bunbury. The Neolithic tools are of delicate and varied shapes, and often bear marks of rubbing or polishing. The flints, of which these tools are almost invariably composed, were of course obtained from the chalk, and at a place called "Grimes' Graves" in the parish of Weeting, about 3 miles north-east of Brandon, it seems probable that we have pits sunk by these old Neolithic workers for the purpose of obtaining this material. One of the pits here was explored by Canon Greenwell in 1870: he found some of the old tools—picks formed of deer horn—which in one place had been buried underneath a falling of the chalk. "The day's work over, the men had laid down each his tool, ready for the next day's work; meanwhile the roof had fallen in, and the picks had never been recovered. . . . It was a most impressive sight, and one never to be forgotten, to look, after a lapse, it may be of 3,000 years, upon a piece of work unfinished, with the tools of the workmen still lying where they had been placed so many centuries before." These picks still retained upon their chalky incrustation, the impressions of the workmen's fingers.

There is no passage from the Palæolithic to the Neolithic period; the two stand distinctly apart with no links between them: this great gap is now accounted for by Dr. Geikie, Mr. Skeretchley and other eminent geologists, by the supposition that the Glacial Period intervened and drove man out of this country to warmer climes: the men who made and used the Palæolithic implements were Pre-glacial, the Neoliths were Post-glacial.

ACLE is a parish and small town, with a station on the Yarmouth, Acle and Norwich line,  $8\frac{1}{2}$  miles west from Yarmouth, a road having been cut through the marshes in 1833, which shortened the distance from the latter place  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles, 126 from London, and 11 east from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Walsham hundred, Blofield union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Blofield and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich: the navigable river Bure flows on the east of the parish and is here crossed by a bridge, called Acle bridge. The church of St. Edmund was erected in the 14th century: it has chancel, nave and round tower with octagonal top and a peal of 5 bells: there is an old oak screen: a stained east window has been put up in memory of William Last esq. and there is a mural monument to Benjamin Heath Baker, erected by the family: the font, which dates from 1410, must originally have been very handsome. The register dates from the year 1664. The living is a rectory, yearly value £693, with residence and 11 acres of glebe, in the gift of Lord Calthorpe and held since 1858 by the Rev. Robert Winter Kennion M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The rectory, which is in the Elizabethan style, is pleasantly situated on a slight elevation facing the Norwich road, and close to the church. There are a few charities. Richard II. granted the town some immunities, now of little value. A market was formerly held here, but it has long been obsolete. The fairs have also been abolished. Weekly cattle sales are held here on Mondays

CASTLE ACRE is a village and parish,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles north from Swaffham station, in the Western division of the county, hundred and union of Freebridge Lynn, county court district of Swaffham, rural deanery of Freebridge Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, situated on the river Nar, not here navigable: the stream abounds with trout. The church of St. James is a flint structure of the fourteenth century, in the Early English and Perpendicular style: it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, transept and tower with 5 bells and porch, and contains a clock, a remarkable font cover and a curious shrine: here was originally a remarkable oak rod screen the panels of which now alone remain, each panel containing a painted portrait of a Saint with tracery in imitation of stained glass: the pulpit is a panelled hexagon resting on a single pedestal and stone steps, the panels being painted to correspond with the screen: the church was restored in 1875. The register dates from about 1598, but is very imperfect till the year 1783. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £108, with three acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Leicester, and held since 1873 by the Rev. Daniel Collyer B.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. It has been proposed to annex the living to that of Newton by Castle Acre. There are chapels for Baptists, Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The charities are of £2 10s. yearly value. Fairs are held on the 1st of May and the 5th of August, for toys. There are extensive remains of British, Roman and Norman work: the ruins of a castle, supposed

ATTLEBOROUGH is a small market town, parish, head of a county court district, and station on the Great Eastern railway, 110 miles from London, 15 south-west from Norwich, 5½ south-west from Wymondham, and 14 north-east from Thetford, in the Southern division of the county, Wayland union, hundred of Shropham, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich.

The church of St. Mary, a noble stone building, in the Norman and Early English styles, was once a cruciform structure, and possessed a spire, which fell some years back, and destroyed the chancel, which has never been rebuilt: it consists at present of nave, aisles, two chapels and a porch, with a tower at the east end, which has an embattled parapet of red brick, and contains 6 bells and a clock: the interior was repaired and newly seated in 1844: there is a fine organ, also a stained window; and there are several handsome monuments and tablets to the families of the Ratcliffes, Mortimers, and Chanticiers. The register dates from the year 1572. The living is a rectory, yearly value £1,504 tithes rent charge, with 17 acres of glebe and house, in the gift of Sir William Bowyer-Smith bart. and held since 1866 by the Rev. William Chartres Safford M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. Here are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists and Baptists, and a Friends' meeting-house. The Wesleyan chapel, in the Station road, was opened in 1872: it is of red brick with stone dressings, and will seat about 400 person: total cost about £1,000. The charities consist of Nerford's, for educating six poor children, value about £20, now given as prizes at the Board School, and £2 12s. a year given to six poor widows in bread every Sunday; Sir F. Bickley's, the proceeds of six acres of land, and Andrew Reader's the proceeds of 2A. 3R. 23P. given to the poor of the parish; and the rent of fuel allotment, comprising 57A. 2R. given in money; there are also 11A. 3R. 14P. left for beautifying the church, and the rent of 1A. 2R. 32P. for ringing the morning and evening bells. A corn market with hall and reading room has been erected by a limited liability company, at a cost of £1,000, for the farmers who attend Attleborough market: it is a white brick building, and was opened in August, 1863; there is a library of about 300 volumes in connection with the reading room. The market is on Thursday; and fairs are occasionally held here. There is a banking agency. The principal landowners are Sir W. Bowyer-Smith bart. who is lord of the manor, Sir T. Beevor bart. Arthur Temple Cockell, esq. Thomas W. Daniel esq. and George Shepherd esq. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are barley and wheat. The area is 5,260 acres; rateable value £13,471; the population in 1881 was 2,244.

ATTLEBRIDGE is a parish and village, on the river
Wensum, with a station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, 141 miles from London, 8 north-west from Norwich and 4 south-east from Reepham, in the Southern division of the county. Taverham hundred, St. Faith's union, county court district of Norwich, rural deanery of Taverham and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St.
Andrew is a small flint building in the Perpendicular style:
it has chancel, nave, north aisle, with a square western tower, which is partly covered with ivy, and contains 1 bell, and a porch on the south side: the interior was restored in 1864. The register dates from the year 1712. The living is a vicarage, consolidated with the rectory of Alderford; the vicarial tithes were commuted in 1839 at £70, and the rectorial at £169 yearly, with 13 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and held since 1873 by road from Holt to Cromer, in the Northern division of the county, North Erpingham hundred, Erpingham union, Holt county court district, rural deanery of Repps, archdeaconry of Norfolk, and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. John the Baptist is a flint building in the Perpendicular style, having chancel, nave, an embattled round tower (dating as early as the thirteenth century), containing 1 bell, and porch: there is a handsome old oak rood-screen and chancel rail, with poppy heads, of the age of the church: the building was partially restored in 1835, and fully restored by the present rector in 1876: there are three memorial windows with handsome stonework, and the windows throughout the church are of cathedral tinted glass. The register dates from the year 1690. The living is a discharged rectory, with that of Runtun annexed, joint yearly value £450, with residence and 62 acres of glebe, viz. 42 in Aylmerton and 20 in Runtun, in the gift of R. W. Ketton esq. and held since 1872 by the Rev. William Woodward Mills M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. The views of the ocean from the high grounds are exceedingly fine, and the surrounding scenery picturesque. R. W. Ketton esq. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, brick earth. The chief crops are wheat, turnips, barley and grass. The area is 1,679 acres; rateable

AYLSHAM is a parish, market and union town, head of a county court district, and polling-place for the Northern division of the county, having a station on the Great Eastern railway, and another on the Eastern and Midlands railway, 12½ miles from London, 12 north from Norwich and 7 west from North Walsham; the town is on the banks of the river Bure, which is navigable hence to Yarmouth, in South Erpingham hundred, rural deanery of Ingworth and arch-deaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Michael is of flint, in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, and was built by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, the court of whose duchy was once held in this town: it consists of chancel, nave and aisles, tower with steeple, containing 10 bells, clock, and has an organ; the font is enriched with bas-reliefs of the four emblems of the Evangelists, the instruments of the Passion, and the arms of Gaunt, with other armorial insignia: the screens were painted with saints, martyrs and confessors in 1507, principally at the cost of Thomas Wymer, who, on his monument is represented in a winding-sheet: here is a monument to Richard Howard, sheriff of Norwich, who, in 1488, built the church porch: the east window, the tracery of which has been restored, is decorated with stained glass, representing the four most favoured disciples of our Blessed Lord, with various devices, and armorial bearings of the late Earl of Buckingham and heir of Blickling, the Bishop of Norwich, the Dean and Chapter of Norwich and Canterbury: a stained side window is to the memory of eight former vicars; another contains some beautiful specimens of old glass, inserted at the expense of the Rev. E. T. Yates, a former vicar, containing the armorial bearings of his family, and of the lay impropriator of the parish, S. Pitman esq. together with those of the Dowager Lady Suffield: in a recess in the churchyard, in a piece of lawn enclosed with iron rails, planted with roses, heartsease and other flowers, is the grave of Humphrey Repton, the celebrated landscape gardener, who died March 24th, 1818. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £685, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury and held since 1867 by the Rev. Robert Hake M.A. Precentor of Canterbury. The Dean and Chapter of Canterbury hold the great tithes, which are leased to S. Pitman esq. There is a Baptist chapel in White Hart street, a Primitive Methodist in Hungate; a Wesleyan in White Hart street, and a Reformed Wesleyan in Millgate street. A Cemetery of two acres was formed in 1855 at a cost of £600; it is under the control of a Burial Board of nine members. The Town Hall, in the Market place, is a red brick building with reading-room and literary institute attached. Fairs are held yearly on March 23rd and last Tuesday in September, and a hiring for servants on the first Tuesday in October. A Savings bank was established in 1818; here is also a Literary Institution, H. G. Wright, secretary. A short distance from the town is a mineral spring. Cressey's charity of £34 yearly is for clothing. There are four manors, belonging severally to Constance Marchioness of Lothian, the Vicar, Thomas Copeman and W. S. Calvert esqrs. The landowners are Constance Marchioness of Lothian, R. J. W. Purdy esq. Charles Louis Buxton esq. J.P. E. J. C. Stracey esq. Mrs. Elizabeth Clover, the trustees of the Rev. James Bulwer, the trustees of the late W. W. Wickes esq. B. B. Sapwell esq. Rev. R. A. Rackham, Thomas Henry Case esq. and a few smaller owners. The area is 4,308 acres; rateable value, £11,612; in 1881 the population of the parish was 2,674.

BABINGLEY is a parish, situated on the Babingley river,  $\frac{5}{8}$  miles north-north-east from Lynn station, and 2 miles east from Wolferton station on the Lynn and Hunstanton railway, in the Western division of the county, Freebridge Lynn hundred and union, county court district of Lynn, rural deanery of Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Felix is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, small south aisle, porch and square western tower: the chancel is in ruins, and contains the remains of a Norman sedile, and the walls, which are still standing, covered with ivy, are supposed to occupy the site where the first Christian church was erected in East Anglia, by St. Felix, the Burgundian, on his landing here about A.D. 600. The registers date from the year 1662, but they are missing between 1773 and 1812. The living is a rectory, annexed to that of Sandringham and West Newton and the vicarage of Appleton, joint gross yearly value £403, in the gift of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and held since 1878 by the Rev. Frederick Alfred John Hervey M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, domestic chaplain to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and honorary chaplain in ordinary to the Queen, who resides at Sandringham. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales owns the whole of the land, and is lord of the manor. The soil is partly sand; the parts under cultivation are some light and peaty, and some alluvial. The land is partly in pasture and partly cropped upon the four-course system. The area is 850 acres; rateable value, £994; the population in 1881 was 58.

Parish Clerk, Henry Lane.

Betts Edward William, farmer, Babingley hall

Letters received through Lynn, via Castle Rising. Dersingham is the nearest money order & telegraph office. The children attend the school at West Newton, about 2 miles distant

Colman Edward, herdsman to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales

BACONSTHORPE is a parish, about 3 miles east-south-east from Holt station, and 7 south-west from Cromer, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Erpingham union, Holt county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary is chiefly in the Perpendicular style, and is a large handsome building, with chancel, nave and aisles and a square tower containing 1 bell: it was partly destroyed by the fall of the steeple in 1729, but repaired in 1779, and again thoroughly restored at a cost of £1,300, under the superintendence of the present rector, in the year 1869: it contains an organ, an interesting monument to the Heydon family, and several fine stained windows. The register dates from the year 1692, the old rectory house and registers having been burnt just before that date. The living is a rectory (the tithes having been commuted for a rent-charge of £340, and there are 33 acres of glebe, with a good rectory-house), in the gift of John Thomas Mott esq. and held since 1882 by the Rev. Seymour Richard Coxo M.A.

BACTON is a large parish on the sea coast, comprising the hamlets of BACTON GREEN and BROMHOLM, 5 miles north-east from North Walsham and 11 south-east from Cromer, in the Northern division of the county, Tunstead hundred, union of Smallburgh, North Walsham county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is of flint, and stands on an eminence, and has a chancel, nave, south porch and an embattled square tower containing 5 bells: the church has undergone considerable repairs and been thoroughly restored, at an expense of about £800. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £219, with residence and 30 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Kimberley and held since 1873 by the Rev. Thomas Warner Moeran B.A. Trinity College, Dublin. Here is a Baptist chapel. In 1836 and 1845 the sea made considerable encroachments on this coast. Near Keswick are the ruins of Bromholm Priory. BAGTHORPE is a parish and village, 9 miles west-by-north from Fakenham, 8 south-west from Burnham Market, 6 south-east from Docking station and 16 north-east-by-north from Lynn, in the Western division of the county, Gallow hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary, rebuilt about 1856, is a small structure of flint, with stone dressings, in the Pointed style, consisting of chancel, nave, small northern porch and vestry: there is a turret over the chancel arch containing 2 bells: the east window is stained, the seats all open and the font very large and ancient. The register dates from the year 1549. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted for £140 yearly with 10 acres of glebe, in the gift of Henry J. D. Dugmore esq. and held since 1875 by the Rev. Edward Martin Pitt M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford, who resides at Hunstanton; the Rev. James Tarbuck is curate in charge. There is a charity of about £100 invested in £3 per cent. Consols, the interest of which is given in money. Bagthorpe Hall, which has been enlarged and restored, is a fine red brick mansion, standing in well-wooded grounds and is the seat of Henry John Dennis Dugmore esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is light and sandy; subsoil, principally gravel. The crops are on the four-course system. The area is 763 acres; rateable value, £788 7s.; the population in 1881 was 85.

Dugmore Henry John Dennis J.P. Bagthorpe hall

Parish Clerk, John Nicholls.

Letters are received through Lynn, via Great Bircham. The nearest money order office is at Docking

BALE is a parish about 8 miles north-east from Fakenham, 2 from Thursford station and 5 west from Holt, in the North-eastern division of the county, Holt hundred, Walsingham union and county court district, rural deanery of Walsingham and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of All Saints is in the Later English and Decorated styles, and was repaired and re-peaved in 1863-4: it has chancel, nave, north transept, south porch and square embattled tower containing 5 bells: the south side of the chancel is filled with ancient stained glass and in the chancel is a piscina. The register dates from the year 1533. The living is a discharged rectory, annexed to that of Gunthorpe, joint yearly value £629, with 45 acres of glebe, in the gift of Edward Bowyer Sparke esq. J.P., D.L. and held since 1870 by the Rev. Robert Arbuthnot Law M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The rectory is a handsome brick building erected in 1872. Here was formerly a chapel dedicated to St. Botolph. Charities amounting to £7 annually are distributed to the poor of the parish in blankets. Sir Willoughby Jones bart. lord of the manor, and Edward Bowyer Sparke esq. J.P., D.L. are the principal landowners.

BANHAM is a picturesque village and parish situated 6 miles north-west from Diss station, 6 east-by-north from Harling Road station, and 6 south from Attleborough, in the Southern division of the county, Guiltcross hundred and union, Attleborough county court district, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a beautiful flint structure, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, and square tower (containing 6 bells) with handsome leaden spire: on the south side is a fine Gothic porch: there are two very handsome stained windows in the chancel to the wife and son of the present rector, erected in 1877: the interior was restored in 1865 and re-seated with open benches, the expense being defrayed by the rector; the carved work of the pulpit (which is of oak) and seats are considered unusually beautiful: the east window and a mortuary window in the south aisle to the Gall family, are executed in Powell's patent glass: the chancel contains a very old wooden effigy of Sir Hugh Bardolph, the reputed founder of this church; there is also a small brass in the floor of the nave in memory of Dame Elizabeth Wastneys. The register dates from the year 1558, and is in excellent preservation. The living is a rectory, tithe rent charge £1,261 with 35 acres of glebe and residence in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1856 by the Rev. John George Fardell M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. About half a mile west of the town is 1½ acres of land given by the rector as an addition to the churchyard; it has a mortuary chapel. Here are a Wesleyan and a Primitive Methodist chapel. The charities are the "town lands," about 3 acres in Banham Heath producing £7 yearly, fuel allotment pro-

The church of St. Mary is an old Gothic flint building, consisting of chancel, nave, transept and square tower with 1 bell: in the transept are monuments to the Reeve and Phillippo families. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value about £148 with residence, in the gift of Lord Hastings, who is the lay impropriator, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Dashwood Pratt B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge: the vicarage house was rebuilt in 1848; the vicarial rent-charge is commuted at £108 12s. 6d. and the rectorial at £108, and there are 38½ acres of vicarial glebe. The rents of two cottages and of a small portion of land are carried to the poor rates, and the rent of 4 acres, allotted at the enclosure in 1811, is carried to the highway rates. The Wesleyans have places of worship here. Bricks, tiles and pots are made in this neighbourhood; the quality of the material for this purpose found here is very superior. Lord

Hastings is lord of the manor, the tenure of which is by "smockhold;" he also is the principal landowner: there are several other owners, among whom are Mr. John William Butler of Barney Lodge, and Mr. Robert Elgar of the Manor farm. J. S. Scott-Chadd and W. S. Phillippo esqrs. have estates here. The soil is mixed, with a subsoil chiefly of brick-earth and clay. The crops are wheat, oats and barley. BARTON BENDISH (with the hamlet of EASTMOOR) is a parish and village, 8 miles east from Downham Market, in the Western division of the county, Clackclose hundred, Downham union and county court district, rural deanery of Fincham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is a finely-proportioned structure, built of flint and freestone, mainly in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, porch and tower, in which are 5 bells: the porch front is diversified with shields and St. Andrew crosses wrought in stone, and a niche, with mutilated effigy of St. Andrew: the doorway into the church is a fine specimen of late Norman work: a massive roof, of plain open timber work and slate, of the original lofty pitch, was erected over the nave by subscription and at the expense of the parish in 1868, replacing a dilapidated one of thatch: two Norman windows in the north side of nave, and one other of late date, were repaired by a former rector and filled with stained glass: the old staircase to the rood-loft is perfect, and a niche is partially visible behind the pulpit: a solid oak screen separates the tower from the nave, and the east wall of the chancel below the window is lined with oak panelling: open sittings prevail in this church, dating from 1623: in the chancel south wall are traces (visible only from the outside) of a lepers' window: a few relics of the ancient tessellated pavement of the church may still be seen within the communion rails. The register dates from the year 1695. The living is a rectory, yearly value £385, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1856 by the Rev. John Holley M.A. of St. Peter's College, Cambridge. The church of St. Mary is of about the same period as St. Andrew's: the tower fell, in Queen Anne's reign, beating down a portion of the nave, and marred thereby the proportions of the church: a stone campanile was erected in memory of Sir Hanson and Lady Berney in 1871: in the modern western gable is a fine Norman arch, once forming the north entry to All Saints church in this parish, and over this arch is a stained window, representing Christ Teaching Little Children and Healing the Sick, erected in memory of M. A. Read: on the south wall of the nave are the remains of a mediæval painting of St. Catherine's Wheel, representing a human figure, bound alive to the wheel, descending head downwards towards a bier, on which a corpse lies stretched: the tracery in the windows of this church merits attention for the flowing and graceful lines: in the chancel south wall is a priest's door, embellished outside with a carved canopy: on the north side of the Communion table is a flat stone, believed to have originally covered the remains of Walter Baldwin, rector of this church, A.D. 1349. The register dates from the year 1726. The living is a rectory, consolidated with All Saints, joint yearly value £380, with 10 acres of glebe, in the gift of Sir Henry Hanson Berney bart. and held since 1865 by the Rev. Stephen Gooch Read M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The rectory house of St. Mary-cum-All Saints was rebuilt in 1866 in the Domestic Gothic style, of white and red brick, with stone dressings. A little to the south-west of St. Andrew formerly stood the church of All Saints, described in Bloomfield as a venerable pile: this church was pulled down in the summer of 1877, and part of its materials used for the repair of St. Mary's, but the greater part to make a new road; its three large ancient bells were sold at the same time. A Gothic Wesleyan chapel was erected in 1875. The poor's allotment lands now let for £30 and £6 respectively. Here was anciently a seat of the Berney family, who became possessors of this manor by purchase from the Hare family, in the reign of Charles II.: the present Hall is part of the old mansion, and has been restored, with some new work added, in the Elizabethan style: it is a fine old family house, and is occupied at the present time by Mr. George Read. Sir Henry Hanson Berney bart. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. In the hamlet of EASTMOOR stood anciently a chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, the patronage of which was vested in the Abbot of Dereham, but at the dissolution of monastic houses it was turned into a farmhouse, and scarcely a vestige remains. The soil is chalk; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, roots, and seeds. The area is 4,390 acres; rateable value, £4,626; the population in 1881 was 437, of which 100 are in Eastmoor.

BAWBURGH is a small parish and village, situated on the river Yare, 4 miles west from Hethersett station and 5 west from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Forehoe hundred and union, county court district of Norwich, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Walstan is a small old stone building chiefly in the Perpendicular style: it has a chancel and nave (the roof of the nave dates from the reign of King Edward IV.), round Norman tower containing 1 bell, and south porch: it contains some ancient brasses, one bearing date 1483: the chancel was restored by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the porch by the vicar in 1879. The register dates from the year 1555. The living is a vicarage, tithes commuted at £260, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich and held since 1860 by the Rev. Hicks Thomas Deacle M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel in the village. To the north of the church, on the Rectory farm, is St. Walstan's well, supposed to possess extraordinary healing virtues: some hundreds of persons used to visit it in the course of the year for the cure of scrofulous diseases. Lord Stafford, who is lord of the manor, the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and C. Unthank esq. are the chief landowners. The soil is very various, but mostly light; subsoil, the same. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and hay. The area is 1,440 acres; rateable value, £2,212; and the population in 1881 was 440.

The name of this parish is variously spelt in old documents, Bilchamwell, Bychamwell and Beechamwell. The churches of All Saints and St. John are picturesque ruins. The church of St. Mary is a small building in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave with a thatched roof, south aisle and ancient round tower (supposed to date before the Norman conquest) with 2 bells; the chalice and paten are ancient, the date on the former being 1569: there are two brasses in the chancel, of two rectors in the fifteenth century. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a rectory, with that of Beechamwell St. John, Beechamwell All Saints, and Shingham annexed, yearly value £504, with 119 acres of glebe and house, and held since 1878 by the Rev. George Roberts B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The livings were united by Order in Council, December 30th 1878 and are to be in future in the alternate presentation of the several patrons, the Lord Chancellor and Joshua Fielden esq. the latter gentleman being entitled to the next presentation to the united benefice. The Wesleyans have a mission room here. Here are a few charities, distributed annually among the poor. John Motteux esq. left in 1791 £100 £3 per Cents.

BEESTON (or BEESTON-NEXT-MILEHAM) is a large and pleasant village, situated on high ground, 2½ miles north-east from the Fransham station on the Lynn branch of the Great Eastern railway, and 7 west from East Dereham, in the Western division of the county, Launditch hundred, Mitford and Launditch union, Dereham county court district, rural deanery of Brisley and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; it is purely agricultural, with the houses very much scattered. For civil purposes it is united with BITTERING PARVA, which is ecclesiastically a separate parish. The church of St. Mary is a handsome flint building with stone dressings in the Early Decorated style, consisting of chancel with chapel, nave and aisles, and tower and spire: it contains a beautifully carved screen: the tower was struck by lightning and burnt down in May, 1872, and rebuilt in 1873. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £550, settled in 1841 in lieu of the tithes, and 25 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. Charles B. Barnwell, and held since 1865, by the Rev. John Swaffield Orton T.A.K.C.L. The rectory-house, formerly surrounded by a moat, which has been filled in on one side, was burnt down in the reign of King James and rebuilt on the same site. Here is a Wesleyan Reform chapel. BEXWELL is a parish 1¼ miles east from Downham Market station, in the Western division of the county, Clackclose hundred, Downham union and county court district, rural deanery of Fincham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich, situated on the road from Downham to Swaffham and Brandon. The church of St. Mary is of rag-stone, dating from the Norman era, and contains some very good remains of Norman and Early English work: the tower is round, with a row of circular-headed windows around it in the upper compartment and is surmounted by an octagon portion of the Perpendicular period, supposed to have been added when a bell, as appears by an entry in the old register book, was sold to the then churchwarden of Downham Market, the proceeds being appropriated to repair the church: the pulpit, designed and executed by W. Lawrie, of Downham Market, is a handsome carved specimen, in Caen stone, of the Early English style, adorned with a figure in the purest Italian alabaster of our Lord Bearing His Cross: there are several monuments, and a tablet, to the memory of the old family of Bexwell, who resided in the parish for many generations, and some of whom are interred in the church: in 1878 a new three-light Early English window was put in the

BINHAM (or BINHAM ABBEY) is a parish and large village 5 miles north-east from Walsingham station and 5 south-east-by-east from Wells, in the Northern division of the county, North Greenhoe hundred, Walsingham union and county court district, rural deanery of Walsingham and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. In the vale, through which runs the Stiffkey rivulet, are the ruins of the once famous Benedictine priory of St. Mary, founded in the latter part of the 11th century by Peter de Valoines, a nephew of William the Conqueror, and finished in the reign of Henry I. by his son Roger de Valoines: it was subject to St. Peter's of Clugni, in France, and affiliated as a cell to St. Albans for a prior and not less than eight monks: in the second year of King John the patronage was claimed by Robert Lord Fitzwater, who besieged it in order to reinstate Thomas the prior, who had been deposed by the Prior of St. Albans, but the siege was successfully raised by the forces of King John sent for its defence: its dissolution occurred in the 31st year of King Henry VIII. soon after which it was granted to Thomas Paston esq. fifth son of Sir William Paston knight; it is now the property of Thomas Truesdale Clarke esq. of Swakeleys, near Uxbridge, Middlesex. The monastic church was formerly a stately cruciform edifice with a massive tower: the nave appears to have always been, and still is, appropriated as the parish church: the eastern portion, which formed the conventual church, and the rest of the buildings, though very considerable, are gradually disappearing: the nave and transepts of the parish church, and part of the south wall of the conventual church, are splendid examples of Norman architecture; the west end of both churches, refectory, chapter-house and jail gate are Early English, the west front of the existing church being very fine: the east end of the conventual church, chapter-house, and dormitories contain portions of the Decorated style, and in the north aisle of the conventual church precincts and other walls are traces of Perpendicular work: the present church comprises chancel and nave with clerestory and small bell cot with 1 bell; the font is of Perpendicular work, very old and mutilated, and divided into eight upper and eight lower panels, the upper containing carved representations of the Seven Sacraments of the Catholic Church and the Trinity, figures of saints in niches occupying its lower panels: there are also the remains of a very ancient and richly illuminated screen, with figures of saints. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £160, tithe rent charge with glebe, in the gift of T. T. Clarke esq. and held since 1865 by the Rev. Robert Corry Cavell. A Primitive Methodist chapel was erected in 1868. There is a public house and 27A. 3R. 23P. of land, the annual rental from which is devoted to apprenticing the children of the poor, the distribution of coats and coats, and also money to the widows; there are also two cottages for the occupation of deserving people, rent free. Henry I. gave this place a charter for a market and a fair; the former is obsolete but the latter is still held on the 26th of July. Part of the ancient market cross still remains. Thomas Truesdale Clarke esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner; the tenure in the manor is by "smockhold," that is, the wife possesses an equal claim in the copyhold with her husband and retains her claim in the event of his dying intestate. The soil is light; subsoil, marl. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 2,242 acres; rateable value, £3,058; the population in 1881 was 478.

BINTRY (or BINTREE) is a parish 4 miles north-east from Elmham station on the Dereham branch of the Great Eastern railway, and 8 south-east from Fakenham, in the Northern division of the county, Eynsford hundred, Mitford and Launditch union, East Dereham county court district, rural deanery of Sparham and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, situated on the river Wensum. The church of St. Swithin is an ancient flint structure in the Perpendicular style, of about the fifteenth century, consisting of chancel, nave and aisle and transept with square tower containing 3 bells: the stone font is in excellent condition: the chancel was rebuilt in 1806 and the whole church re-paved and re-seated in 1865; the east window is stained (subject Crucifixion of Our Lord), to the memory of Lady James Townshend; that in the transept is also stained, as a memorial of Lord J. Townshend and Captain Henderson. The register dates from the year 1609. The living is a rectory, consolidated with that of Themelthorpe, joint yearly value £585 gross, with residence, in the gift of Lord Hastings and held since 1871 by the Rev. Robert Reeve Rackham B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists. In the parish are three charitable trusts:—1st, The Church Trust, for the repair of the church and things concerning the same; 2nd,

BITTERING MAGNA (or GREAT BITTERING) was formerly a parish, between Beetley and Gressenhall, but of which nothing remains—except that adjoining the latter village are some cottages, the locality of which still bears the name of BITTERING STREET—the parish having been divided between those adjoining, Beetley and Gressenhall.

BITTERING PARVA (or LITTLE BITTERING) is a village and parish 3 miles north from the Wendling station on the Lynn branch of the Great Eastern railway and 5 north-west from East Dereham, in the Western division of the county, Launditch hundred, Mitford and Launditch union, East Dereham county court district, rural deanery of Brisley and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. For civil purposes Little Bittering is united with the adjoining parish of Beeston, but they are ecclesiastically separate parishes. The church of St. Peter is a small Gothic flint and rubble building, consisting of chancel, nave and bell-turret containing 1 bell; the reading desk and manorial pew have Jacobean panelling; against the north wall are two coped coffin stones, each about 6½ feet long; a few yards west of the church is a square moat, but there are no vestiges of any building within the area. The register dates from the year 1733. The living is a rectory, yearly value £100, in the gift of Philip and Arthur Leamon esqrs. and held since 1879 by the Rev. Walter Girling M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge, who resides at Dereham. Philip and Arthur Leamon esqrs. are lords of the manor and sole landowners. The soil is loam and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 398 acres of land, in one farm; rateable value, £643; and the population in 1881 was 37.

BIXLEY is a parish and pretty village, situated on an eminence, about 3 miles south-east from Norwich, on the high road from Norwich to Beccles, in the Southern division of the county, hundred and union of Henstead, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Waudgesilus is a small structure of flint, erected in 1874; it is in the Gothic style and consists of chancel, nave, and square tower, on the site of the old church of that name, built in 1272, of which the tower only remains. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a rectory, with that of Framingham Earl annexed, joint gross yearly value £579 with house, in the gift of Clement Brereton esq. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Charles Turner M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Bixley Hall and Bixley Lodge are two exceedingly pretty seats, the former occupied by Mrs. Martin and the latter (the property of J. J. Colman esq. M.P.) occupied by Henry Birkbeck, jun. esq. The trustees of the late F. W. Primrose own the land attached to Bixley Hall and are lords of the manor. The soil is mixed; subsoil, gravel. The crops are on the four-course system. The area is 760 acres; rateable value, £1,624; and the population in 1881 was 160.

BLAKENEY (anciently called SNITTERLEY) is a small coast town and parish, 5½ miles north-north-west from Holt station 8 east from Wells, 26 north-north-west from Norwich and 124 from London, in the northern division of the county, Holt hundred and county court district, Walsingham union, rural deanery of Holt and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Nicholas stands on a height a little to the south of the town, and is a handsome and spacious building, in the Early and Later English styles, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, with a lofty embattled tower at the west end, which serves as a landmark to mariners, and formerly contained a light for the guidance of vessels; there is also a small tower at the north-east corner of the chancel: the nave is lighted by clerestory windows, and the chancel has a groined roof, and a handsome east window of seven lights, in the Early Decorated style: on the north side are three stone sedilia: the nave is separated from the chancel by the remains of a carved screen: the font is handsome and a fine specimen of ancient sculpture: the church is now (1883) about to be restored and redecored. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, united to those of Glandford and Cockthorpe, joint yearly value £506, in the gift of Lord Calthorpe and held since 1858 by the Rev. Richard Henry Tillard M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Wesleyan Methodists and Primitive Methodists have places of worship here. Charities producing £11 yearly are distributed in fuel and clothing. Blakeney harbour is well situated for sheltering small vessels, and was improved under an Act of Parliament obtained in 1817, so that vessels of 150 tons burden can approach the quay; spring tides rise 10 feet. This was formerly a port called Blakeney and Cley; the jurisdiction extended 30 miles along the coast, from Morston on the west to Bacton Coal Gap on the east; but in 1880 it was made a part of the port of Lynn; the custom house is at Lynn, with a sub-office here for Blakeney and Cley. The trade is chiefly in coal, timber and deals, hemp, iron, tar, tallow and oil-cake, of which the importation was considerable; the exports are mostly corn and flour. A few vessels are employed in the oyster fishery, and the coasting trade is considerable. Henry III. granted a market, and in the 31st of Edward III. a statute was passed regulating the fish trade, which was then carried on to a considerable extent, and attracted a great number of Dutch merchants, several of whom fixed their residence in the town. Here are some remains, consisting principally of several fine arches, of an ancient monastery for Carmelites: in this monastery John de Baconthorpe, a learned divine and acute metaphysician, became a friar and ultimately Provincial of the English Carmelites; he was born here, and died in London 1340. Lord Calthorpe is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is mixed, chiefly of a sandy nature. The area is 1,630 acres of land, and 235 of water; rateable value, £2,460; the population in 1881 was 794.

BLICKLING is a parish and village 2 miles north-west from Aylsham station on the Great Eastern railway, and the same distance west from Aylsham Town station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient stone structure, in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and low square tower, and stands upon an eminence near the Hall: the church was almost entirely rebuilt in 1878, at the sole expense of Constance Marchioness of Lothian: it contains numerous inscriptions to the memory of former lords of the manor, together with some brasses and a monument of the Marquis of Lothian, who died at Blickling Hall in 1841: there is a handsome memorial window in the chancel to Caroline Ann. Dowager Lady Suffield, and a monument was erected in 1878, by Constance Marchioness of Lothian, to the late Marquis of Lothian: also a stained window by the parishioners. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, yearly value £428, consolidated with Erpingham, joint yearly value £918, in the gift of Constance Marchioness of Lothian and held since 1808 by the Rev. Frederick Meyrick M.A. late fellow of Trinity College, Oxford, and examining chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Lincoln and Preliminary of Lincoln. The manor was one of those belonging to King Harold II. and had great privileges: part of it was attached to the see of Norwich, whose bishops had a palace here: in the latter end of the fifteenth century this manor belonged to Sir William Boleyn, whose son, Sir Thomas Boleyn, was in 1526 advanced to the title of Viscount Rochford and in 1529 created Earl of Wiltshire, honours to which he had certain hereditary pretensions, but which were so rapidly conferred by reason of Henry VIII.'s courtship of his daughter Anne Boleyn, afterwards queen: subsequently the estate was purchased by Sir Henry Hobart, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas (1625), whose son, in 1629, built the present stately mansion. Sir John Hobart, third baronet, was knight of the shire for Norfolk in the last three Parliaments called by King Charles II. and had the honour of a visit from the king together with his queen at his seat in 1671, when his majesty knighted Henry Hobart, the eldest son. In some ancient poetry the following distich is extant:—

“Blickling two Monarchs and two Queens have seen,

inghamshire. Blickling Hall, the seat of Constance Marchioness of Lothian, in its ground plan is quadrangular, with two open courts in the centre, having a square turret at each angle of the building, surmounted by a vane: the clock tower over the entrance is of modern erection: the entrance from the court in front, formed by the offices and stables, is by a bridge of two arches crossing a moat, and on each side of the bridge, upon a pedestal, is represented a bull bearing a shield: the aspect of this massive pile as seen from this court, the bridge, the moat, the turrets, and the curiously formed gables—all serve to convey an adequate idea of the domestic building of former days: the library contains over 10,000 volumes and some rare books and manuscripts: the mansion contains numerous family portraits, ancient and modern pictures of considerable value, also statues of Queen Anne Boleyn and Queen Elizabeth, and some magnificent specimens of ancient tapestry adorn the walls of the various rooms; one piece, representing Peter the Great of Russia on horseback, was presented to a late member of the family by the Emperor of Russia, upon the occasion of his acting as ambassador to the Russian Court: the park and gardens comprise about 1,000 acres on three sides of the hall: the park is well stocked with deer, and is nearly divided by a wood of old forest trees, consisting of about 180 acres: the conduit and statues, which formerly adorned the platform of the gardens at Oxnead Hall, are preserved here; also a pyramid, upon a base 45 feet square, in which are the remains of John, Earl of Buckinghamshire and his two wives: here is a fine piece of water, in form of a crescent, extending about a mile in length and 400 yards in its greatest breadth: the pleasure gardens, about a mile in circumference, have on three sides a terrace commanding a pleasing though confined landscape, of which the adjacent town of Aylsham forms a principal feature. Constance Marchioness of Lothian is lady of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is sand and gravel; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, roots, barley and hay. The area is 2,084A. 2R. 15P.; rateable value, £2,637; and the population in 1881 was 311.

BLOFIELD is a parish, head of union and polling-place for the Southern division of the county, 7 miles east from Norwich, in the Blofield hundred, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Blofield and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, on the road from Norwich to Yarmouth: the Norwich and Yarmouth railway passes within one mile and a quarter, and has a station at Brundall, 119½ miles from London. The church of St. Andrew is a very fine specimen of the fifteenth century architecture, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and a handsome lofty tower, terminated with four statues as pinnacles, containing 6 bells, and was restored in 1878: the seats in the body of the church are all free; there are pews in the aisles, but it is proposed to substitute open seats for them: there are several monuments, one of which is in marble, with small kneeling figures, to the memory of one of the Paston family, a gentleman belonging to the Privy Chamber of Henry VIII.: the font, which is octagonal, is of stone, and appears to be of great antiquity, and has been sculptured, representing the Birth, different periods of the Life, Crucifixion, Resurrection and Ascension of Our Saviour, but is much defaced. The register dates from the year 1515. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £806 with residence, in the gift of Caius College, Cambridge, and held since 1880 by the Rev. James Percy Garrick M.A. late fellow and tutor of that college. Here is a Baptist chapel, and a Mission Room, and a Primitive Methodist chapel at the Heath. The Rev. Mr. Reve, a former rector of this parish, gave a house, situated near the church, and £10 a year, to be paid to a schoolmaster, to be chosen by the minister, churchwardens and overseers for the time being, for the better education of children whose parents were too poor to pay for the same; he also gave three different benefactions, amounting to £6 7s. to be paid yearly in bread and clothing to poor widows belonging to this parish. Since the formation of a School Board in this parish, this school has become obsolete, and a new scheme for management of the charity has been recently promulgated by Her Majesty's Charity Commissioners. The charities amount to £40 yearly for distribution, and there is a fuel allotment of 37 acres, let at £60. The trustees of the late Henry N. Burroughes esq. who are lords of the manor, and Charles Tuck esq. and W. H. Jary esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is good mixed; subsoil, brick earth, clay and sand. BODNEY is a parish 7 miles south from Swaffham and 6 west from Watton station, in the Western division of the county, Swaffham union and county court district, hundred of South Greenhoe, rural deanery of Cranwise, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary was a small, ancient thatched fabric of flint and pebbles, in the Early English style, with chancel and nave: some remains of the Saxon period are in the buttress at the north-east angle: the chancel has been thoroughly restored by W. Amhurst Tyssen Amherst esq. M.P.; Chester Cheston esq. of London, was the architect, and Mr. W. Laurie, of Downham, was the contractor: an ancient consecration cross, a piscina and sedilia, and the original staircase to the rood loft, were discovered during the works. The register dates from the year 1754. The living is a discharged rectory, annexed to that of Great Cressingham, joint gross yearly value £700,

The church of St. Nicholas is a small building of flint, stone and brick, plastered: it has chancel, nave, south aisle and north porch: the steeple has at some time unhappily fallen, and a cupola contains the solitary bell: the chancel is of the Decorated style, with very rare and rich internal embellishments: the nave and aisle are in the Perpendicular style. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a rectory, yearly value £245: the Rev. Thomas Berney M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, is patron and has been incumbent since 1855. Here is a church school, under the patronage of the rector. Lord Chancellor Thurlow was born here, in 1730. Bracon Ash Park (otherwise Bracone Ashe Parke), in extent 264 acres, is one of the most ancient in Norfolk: it pays to the rector a modus of £5, the commuted value of a buck and doe, in lieu of all tithes. Bracon Ash Hall, standing in the park, is a spacious modern brick mansion, standing on the site of a much older building, where Queen Elizabeth is said to have visited; it is the seat of the Rev. Thomas Berney M.A. who is lord of the manor. The manor includes Hethel Jernyngams, which lies contiguous to it, in the parish of Hethel. The family of Berney is of great antiquity, having originally come from Berney (now spelt Bernay), in Normandy, and settled in this county prior to the Conquest, and given name both to the manor and parish of Berney, in West Norfolk. BRINTON is a pleasant village and parish, 2 miles from Melton Constable station, 3½ west-south-west from Holt, 10 north-east from Fakenham and 13 west from Cromer, in the Northern division of the county, Holt hundred and county court district, Walsingham union, rural deanery of Holt and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew dates from Saxon times, when it was a small building with walls 7 feet high: in the Norman period the walls were heightened about 3 feet, and a semicircular-headed doorway (now blocked), projecting into this newly added portion, can be faintly traced: in the Early English period the walls were again raised by 4 feet 3 inches, the building extended 21 feet westward, the junction being masked by the east wall of the present south porch, a north aisle and porch, now ruined, and transept were added, probably with wooden arcading between the nave and them: a window and two buttresses of Early English design remain to attest date: from the faint indications of a beaten clay floor it is inferred that a circular tower was then added; but if so, it was replaced by a square one (which retains only one of its three bells) in the transition period from Decorated to Perpendicular (to which date the font is assigned); again the walls were elevated by 6½ feet and the present stone arcading, running in height into this last extension of elevation, built between nave and aisle and transept, Perpendicular windows inserted, and a little Early English image of St. Andrew, cross in hand, placed over the transept window, where it still remains; a veil of plaster, built so as to resemble a vertical crack and slip of the masonry, having hidden it in troublous times: the then rector, John Skye, set going the restoring of the church soon after the Reformation, when the present simple but handsome roof and poppy-headed benches were added: a portion of the chancel was probably at this time reduced, the shortening being indicated (as at Binham and Bessingham) by a square-headed east window, which was retained, and the Story of the Epiphany added in glass by Meyer of Munich in 1873, when the church was generally cleansed of whitewash and deal pewing, and otherwise repaired, the cleansing laying bare sundry writings of Scripture on the walls, in obedience to the canons of 1604:

the capacious water stoup, head of a Transition Norman pedestal piscina, till lately divided and used for quoining a buttress, and a carved oak chest, the gift of Mrs. Brereton, on leaving the parish, are worthy of notice, as are also the buttresses to transept of Gothic detail, which taper like a classic pillar, and therefore an interesting Transition feature. The village [preaching?] cross, in these parts very frequently outside the churchyard, as at Binham, Field Dalling, Sharrington, Brinton and Edgefield, in almost living memory stood on the plain just west of the church, still the rendezvous of the village youth, who here meet for social intercourse; a portion of the shaft protects the angle of a building hard by. The register dates from the year 1547. The living is a discharged rectory, annexed to that of Thornage, joint yearly value £508, with about 56 acres of glebe in the two parishes, in the gift of Lord Hastings and held since 1863 by the Rev. Charles John Brereton B.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who resides at Thornage. The United Methodist Free Church have a place of worship here. £3 10s. is distributed yearly from Rogers' charity. Lord Hastings, who is lord of the manor, A. E. Palmer esq. and the Rev. Shovell Brereton, are the principal landowners. The soil is light; subsoil, mixed. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 625 acres; rateable value, £1,040; and the population in 1881 was 161.

East Dereham county court district, rural deanery of Brisley and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Bartholomew is a fine large Gothic building of flint with stone dressings, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, a north porch and a very handsome and lofty buttressed tower containing 4 bells: the east end contains a beautiful stained window, representing the Crucifixion, the gift of the present rector, in memory of his wife: in the chancel are two brasses dating 1531, also a piscina and sedilia. The register dates from the year 1698. The living is a rectory, with the vicarage of Gateley annexed, joint gross yearly value £486, with residence and 22 acres of glebe, in the gift of Christ's College, Cambridge and held since 1851 by the Rev. BRISTON is a parish and small town 1 mile from the Melton Constable station and 4½ south-by-west from Holt, situated near one of the sources of the river Bure, in the Northern division of the county, Holt hundred and county court district, Erpingham union, rural deanery of Holt and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of All Saints is in the Decorated and Later English styles, consisting of chancel, nave, vestry, and bell turret at the west end containing 1 bell: there was formerly a round tower: the church has been re-seated with open oak benches, a handsome oak pulpit added, the chancel is paved with Minton's tiles and it is divided from the nave by a screen presented by the present vicar in 1875 in memory of his father. The register dates from the year 1689. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £240, with residence and 30 acres of glebe, in the gift of Lord Hastings and held since 1855 by the Rev. Charles Norris B.A. of Caius College, Cambridge, who is also rector of Melton Constable. Here are Congregational, United Methodist Free Church, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. A market for stock and pigs is held here every Tuesday, and a fair on the 26th of May, also a large cattle sale on the last Thursday in May; and a wake on the day after Old Michaelmas day. BROOKE is a parish and pleasant village 7 miles north-east from Flordon station, 7 south from Norwich and 7 north from Bungay, in the Southern division of the county, Clavering hundred, Loddon and Clavering union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of West Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter is an old building of flint with stone dressings, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and north aisle, with round tower containing 6 bells, and south porch: it was thoroughly restored in 1859. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage; the vicarial tithes were commuted in 1842 for £240 yearly, with 4A. 1R. 16P. of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1873 by the Rev. Henry Murray Downton M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel, built in 1839. The town lands are 43A. 3R. in the parish, let for £51 and Pevers Farm, in Kirstead, 53A. 2R. let for £75 yearly, which sums are applied in lieu of church rates and in the maintenance of schools. The fuel allotment is 5 acres, let for £15 which is distributed in coals amongst the poor, who have also some small allowances left by J. Kerrison, J. Fowle and W. Brereton. In this parish were originated, in 1853, the Harvest Festivals, now universally adopted. Brooke Hall, the seat of George John Holmes esq. J.P. is a large mansion, in the Grecian style, standing near the site of the old hall, and was built in 1830 by its late owner: it is pleasantly situated in the midst of a beautiful park, thickly studded with oak and other trees, and contains a fine piece of water. NEW BUCKENHAM is a parish and small town 8 miles north-west from Diss, 15 south-west from Norwich, and 5 south-by-east from Attleborough station, in the Southern division of the county, Shropham hundred, Giltcross union, county court district of Attleborough, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The town is irregularly built and consists of several small streets. The church of St. Martin is a noble structure of flint with stone dressings, in the Tudor style, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, with a square tower surmounted by four pinnacles and containing 6 bells; the nave was restored at the sole expense of John Gall esq. J.P. and the church re-seated with open benches in 1879. The register dates from the year 1459. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the inhabitants, yearly value, £110, with residence, and held since 1880 by the Rev. John Woods. The Wesleyan Methodists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship here. Fairs are held the last Thursday in May, and November 22nd for cattle. Here are almshouses, founded by William Barber, now occupied by four old women, each of whom has an allowance of coals, and receives a stipend of 2s. 6d. per week: these almshouses were rebuilt at the expense of the late Messrs. H. and J. J. Turner, in 1861. Arthur T. Clowes esq. is lord of the manors of Buckenham Borough and Buckenham Leet, and the vicar is lord of the manor of Buckenham Priory. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Edward Fisher Boud esq. The soil is mixed and very fertile; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 324 acres, of which 79 are common; rateable value, £1,344; and the population in 1881 was 548.

OLD BUCKENHAM is a village and parish, pleasantly situated, 3 miles north-east from Eccles road station and 3 south-by-east from Attleborough station, in the Southern division of the county, Shropham hundred, Guiltcross union, Attleborough county court district, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich: a common, or green, of about 40 acres forms the centre of this village. The church of All Saints is a plain and ancient thatched structure of flint with stone dressings in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle separated from the nave by an arcade of 4 arches, and octagonal tower containing 6 bells: the east window is stained. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £100, in the presentation of feoffees and he'd since 1850 by the Rev. Thomas Fulcher B.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel which was rebuilt and enlarged in 1857, and further improved in 1883, and also the Primitive Methodists: also the sect called Sandemanians. Robert Cox esq. founded, in 1860, ten almshouses for married and single poor born in this parish; each inhabitant receives 3s. weekly and one ton of coal yearly. There are charities of £76 yearly, for clothing and coal, and a fuel allotment of 70 acres, producing £30. A line of embankments, commonly called "Bunn's Bank," evidently the work of the Romans, when this was one of the minor military stations, has been discovered running through a farm here. Here was a castle, built by William de Albin in the time of

BURGH (or BURGH-NEXT AYLISHAM) is a village and parish on the navigable Bure, over which there is a bridge of one arch, 2 miles south-east from Aylsham station on the Great Eastern Railway (East Norfolk branch), 11 north from Norwich, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary is in the Early English style, and consists of chancel (restored in 1878), with north chapel, modern nave and porch (much out of repair) and Perpendicular tower containing 1 bell: the chancel of this church is one of peculiar beauty and interest, its southern side consisting on its upper and principal stage of a continuous range of beautiful and similar lancet lights, arched within and absolutely simple without; while its lower stage has a continuous arcade resting upon a stone seat; on the north wall similar arcading occurs, together with a very fine Early English archway, opening into a north chapel: these were pronounced by Sir Gilbert Scott as of the finest character, and probably of the same date with the work of St. Hugh, at Lincoln, circa 1200: the whole has been well restored and an attempt made to recover the original length of the chancel, chiefly through the liberality of the Rev. E. T. Yates, of Burgh Hall, the last incumbent. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a rectory, the tithes of which have been commuted for £255 yearly, with 12 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1879 by the Rev. Thomas Barnes, Scholæ Cancellarii, Lincoln. There is a chapel for the Primitive Methodists, which was erected in 1868. From the various urns and coins which have been found in this vicinity, it is supposed to have been a Roman station. Burgh Hall, the property of the Rev. Edmund Telfer Yates M.A., J.P. is a modern building of red brick with white stone dressings and occupied by C. T. Masters esq. Mrs. Burr, who is lady of the manor, and the Rev. E. T. Yates J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is sand and loam; subsoil, chalky. The chief crops are wheat, roots, barley and hay. The area is 789 acres; rateable value, £1,544; the population in 1881 was 219.

BURGH-APTON (or BERGH-APTON) is a parish and widely scattered village,  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles south-by-west from Buckenham Ferry station,  $\frac{7}{8}$  south-east from Norwich, and  $3\frac{1}{2}$  north-west from Loddon, in the Southern division of the county, Clavering hundred, Loddon and Clavering union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is an ancient cruciform structure of flint and stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts, with lofty square embattled tower containing 6 bells and a clock, presented by Lady Amelia Pelham in 1838: it has a south porch: the north porch now forms the vestry: the chancel was re-seated in 1865, at the expense of the Rev. W. F. Thursby, rector; and the stained east window was inserted in 1867, in memory of Clara Thursby: there are several monuments to the Cooke family, also tablets to the Rev. Neville Walter a former rector and his wife: the church was restored and re-seated in 1881, and a handsome oak pulpit and reading-desk were added at the expense of the rector and his friends. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a rectory, with that of Halverstone annexed, joint yearly value £598 with residence, in the gift of the Rev. William Thursby, of Ormerod House, Lancashire, and held since 1864 by the Rev. William Ford Thursby B.C.L. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Here was anciently another

BURGH ST. MARGARET and ST MARY (commonly called FLEGG BURGH), formerly distinct parishes, form one parish 3 miles west from Ormsby station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, 15 miles north-east from Norwich and  $7\frac{1}{2}$  north-west from Yarmouth railway station, in the Northern division of the county, incorporated hundreds and union of East and West Flegg, county court district of Great Yarmouth, rural deanery of Flegg and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The old church of St. Mary has gone to decay, with the exception of a small portion of the tower, which remains in the centre of a field. St. Margaret's, erected about the middle of the fourteenth century, is a structure of flint in the Decorated style, but it contains fragments of Norman work, and has curious quatrefoil ventilating holes under the windows: it has chancel, nave and square tower with 3 bells: it was, in 1876, thoroughly restored and re-seated to hold 170; the work was carried out at the sole expense of the rector, the Rev. Charles John Lucas. The parsonage was entirely gutted by fire about the year 1754, and the church register at that time consumed: the present register commences at that period, and is in excellent preservation. The livings are rectories, joint yearly value £160, with 22 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1862 by the Rev. Charles John Lucas M.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge, who is also rector of Billockby, and resides at Burgh House, a brick

The living is a rectory, tithes commuted at £374 yearly, with 15 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of and held since 1872 by the Rev. William Boycott B.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge; £3 is paid yearly to the rector of Toft Monks. Here is a small Primitive Methodist chapel; also a Wesleyan chapel with Sunday school, enlarged in 1835, and capable of seating about 200 people. The fuel allotment consists of 13 acres, let on an average for £29 yearly, which is distributed in coals among the poor. The greater portion of the land belongs to the trustees of the late R. H. BURNHAM MARKET (or BURNHAM (St. Mary de) WESTGATE) is a parish and small town, and station on the West Norfolk Junction railway, 123½ miles from London by rail, 24½ north-east-by-north from Lynn by rail, 10 north-west from Fakenham, 7 west from Wells-by-the-Sea, 36 north-west from Norwich by road, and 2½ south-by-west from the harbour and the fine and extensive sea-sands of Burnham Overy Staith; it is in the Western division of the county, Brothecross hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, Burnham rural deanery, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The town, which includes the parishes of BURNHAM WESTGATE, ULPH and SUTTON, is very pleasantly situated in a valley sheltered from the sea, in a rich agricultural district, on the old road from Lynn to Wells-by-the-Sea: a rivulet runs between it and Burnham Overy, falling into the harbour. The church of St. Mary the Virgin, built of flint with stone dressings, consists of chancel, nave, aisles and south porch: the clerestory windows are perfect, and a square tower at the west end contains 4 bells and a clock, and is surmounted by a stone battlement, ornamented with the old cipher of the Virgin, and figures representing the events from the Salutation of the Virgin to the Crucifixion; the interior has been carefully restored, the chancel also; and some other works of restoration performed; the windows in the north and two in the south aisle and tower have been restored and filled with memorial glass. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, in the gift of Christ's College, Cambridge, and consists of a mediety of the rectory of Burnham Westgate, united with mediets of the rectories of Burnham Norton and Burnham Ulph; there are 91 acres of glebe and a residence; and the rector's tithes have been commuted at £361: the other mediety of Burnham Westgate, together with 19 acres of land in that parish, belongs to the College: the Rev. James Henry Lamb M.A. late fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, has held the living since 1878. Here are Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapels. There are some small charities belonging to the parish, chiefly for educational and church purposes, which are now in the hands of the Charity Trustees. The market has long been discontinued. Fairs for pleasure are held on the Monday and Tuesday in Easter week, and on the 1st and 2nd of August. Quantities of malt are manufactured in the neighbourhood, chiefly to supply the London breweries. There is an iron foundry and wind and steam corn mills. In the neighbourhood are Holkham Park, the ruins of Creak Abbey and Norton Priory, and Burnham Thorpe, the birthplace of Lord Nelson. Burnham Hall, formerly the seat of the late Sir Roger Martin bart. now the residence of Mrs. Clarke, is a square brick building, situated at the west end of the town, near the church; its park, pleasure grounds and woods add much to the beauty of the scenery, and from the surrounding hills extensive views of the German Ocean and Holkham Park are obtained. The chief landed proprietors are the trustees of the late John Calthrop esq. the trustees of the late Mr. Blyth, and the owners of the Hall estate. The hills on the north of the valley are chiefly of chalk, while those to the south have strata of marl and gravel, and the valley is a mass of flintstone gravel, in which water is easily obtained: a stream of water occasionally issues from under the chalk formation, and flows from the park through the town for many months at a time. Crops of turnips, mangold wurtzel, barley and wheat are raised, and large supplies of fat cattle and sheep are sent to London. The area is 3,047 acres; rateable value, £5,780 7s. 10d.; the population of the parish in 1881 was 968.

BURNHAM NORTON is a parish and village  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-by-east from Burnham Market, in the Western division of the county, Brothercross hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The village, which is called NORTON STREET, is half a mile from the church. The church of St. Margaret is a fine structure, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, north porch and a lofty western round tower of very ancient date, containing 1 bell: it is built of flint, with stone dressings, and stands conspicuously on a hill fronting the sea, on the north: on the pulpit, which has been carefully restored, are painted the four Doctors of the Church—Saints Augustine, Ambrose, Gregory and Jerome—together with the portraits of John Goldale and Katharine his wife, the donors of it: the figures on the ancient screen are nearly obliterated: in the floor of the south aisle are memorials of the family of the late Lord Chancellor Thurlow. The register dates from the year 1550. The rectory consists of two mediocreties, one annexed to the rectory of Burnham Westgate and the other to that of Burnham Sutton, held respectively by the Rev. James Henry Lamb M.A. late fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, rector

BURNHAM OVERY is a parish and small seaport, including the pleasant village of OVERY STAITH, 1 mile east-by-north from Burnham Market, 6 miles west from Wells, 23 from Lynn and 120 from London, in the Western division of the county, Brothercross hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, Burnham rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and Norwich diocese. Overy Town (as it is called) and the parish church are situated on the road from Lynn to Wells, and near a small rivulet, which rises at South Creak and falls into the sea at Burnham Overy Staith. The church of St. Clement, situated on an eminence, appears to have lost much of its original character: it is in the Norman style, and consists of chancel (restored by the late Earl of Orford, as lay impropriator, in 1835), nave, large southern porch, and a square central tower, surmounted by a turret containing 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, annexed to the rectory of Burnham Sutton, vicarial tithes commuted at £157, with 18 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held by the Rev. Samuel Edward Blomefield B.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge: the Earl of Orford is the lay impropriator. Near the church are the remains of an ancient cross. Extensive meadows in this and the adjoining parishes of Holkham and Norton have been reclaimed from the sea by embankments. The Earl of Orford, who is lord of the manor, and the Earl of Leicester, are the principal landowners. The soil is of a fair mixed character; and of Burnham Westgate, and the Rev. Samuel Edward Blomefield B.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge, rector of Burnham Sutton. There are 32 acres of glebe, and the commutation rent-charge is £262. There are four acres of land set apart for the repairs of the church. There are some remains of a Carmelite priory, founded in 1240, the gateway of which has been restored. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor and the owner of the whole parish, except a few cottages and grass marshes. The arable land is of a superior quality, and produces excellent crops of wheat, barley, oats, turnips, mangold-wurtzel, grass and seeds; the substratum is chalk. The area is 3,226 acres of land and 670 water; rateable value, £1,844 19s.; the population in 1881 was 139.

Burnham Overy Staith is a pleasant village, about a mile from the parish church: the harbour is navigable for vessels of 80 tons up to the Staith. The Primitive Methodist chapel is a small structure of flint and brick, erected in 1860. The trade carried on is in coals, corn, oil-cake and oysters. There is a coastguard station. The sands are extensive, and are firm and safe, and the sand hills abound in rabbits.

BURNHAM SUTTON and ULPH is a parish, and consists of a small village lying a little to the south of the east end of the town of Burnham Market. Burnham Sutton is in the Western division of the county, Brothercross hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church has long been in ruins, and is covered with ivy, but the parishioners are entitled to seats in the church of Burnham Ulph, of which the rector of Burnham Sutton is joint rector. Ulph church (All Saints) is an ancient structure in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel (restored in 1879), nave and south porch, and has a bell turret at the west end containing 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, united with the mediocreties of Ulph and Norton and also with the vicarage of Burnham Overy; tithes of Sutton and Ulph commuted at £418 5s.; glebe, 14 acres; the rectory (a house formerly belonging to Lord Leicester, and known as the "Nunnery") is situated at the east end of Burnham: the living is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held by the Rev. Samuel Edward Blomefield B.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1828, is a plain brick building. The Brethren have a preaching-room here. The Earl of Orford, who is lord of the manor, and the Earl of Leicester are chief landowners. The soil is generally light and well cultivated; subsoil, chalk. The crops are wheat, barley, grass, turnips and mangold-wurtzel. The area is 1,456 acres; rateable value, £1,958; the population in 1871 was 350, and in 1881 was 319.

BURNHAM THORP (or THORPE) is a village and parish situated a mile east-by-south from Burnham Market, 5 miles west from Wells and 8½ from Fakenham, the nearest market town, in the Western division of the county, Brothecross hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, Burnham rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and Norwich diocese. The church of St. Peter, in the Perpendicular style, was repaired and beautified in the year 1842, just previously to the revival of church restoration on sound principles, and is therefore still disfigured by pews: it consists of chancel (the upper portion of the east window being filled with stained glass representing the Apostles Peter, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John), nave and north aisle (the south aisle having been destroyed) and square tower at the western end containing 1 bell: it contains several marble tablets, one to the Rev. Edmund Nelson, father of Lord Nelson, and three others to the memory of members of the family of the late and present rectors: in the chancel is a brass representing the figure of Sir William Calthorpe in a full suit of chain armour, the whole surrounded by a brass border, with an inscription bearing date A.D. 1420. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, yearly tithe rent charge

BUXTON is a parish and pleasant village on the navigable river Bure and station on the East Norfolk branch of the Great Eastern railway (called Buxton Lamas), 4 miles south-east from Aylsham and 8 north from Norwich, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient structure of flint, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, and square tower containing 5 bells, and has been thoroughly restored and reseated and a clock added: there are several beautiful stained windows. The register dates from the year 1640. The living is a vicarage, consolidated with the rectory of Oxnead, joint yearly value £230, in the gift of Sir H. Stracey bart. and held since 1855 by the Rev. William James Stracey M.A. late fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge: the glebe consists of 90 acres and the vicarage house: the small tithes have been commuted at £110 15s, and Oxnead great tithes, £180 yearly. The great tithes are £240. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels here. Buxton Reformatory, originated by the late John Wright esq. is situated in and described under Marsham. The poor have several charities left by various donors at different periods, amongst which may be mentioned Sir John Pictor's, invested partly in land, producing about £90 yearly, distributed in coals and blankets; and another of £56 yearly, left in 1693 by Thomas Bulwer, then of Buxton, for the vicar of Buxton if resident; if not, for the benefit of the poor; there is also the interest of £110 for 10 widows yearly, left by the late Mr. Pearse. Dudwick House is a mansion, in a pleasant lawn, partly surrounded by trees and shrubs, the property of Philip E. Sewell esq. and occupied by Capt. J. Robert Theophilus Hastings Parker J.P. The Hall, now converted into a farm-house, is the property Mr. Thomas Lane. There are two manors. Sir Henry Stracey bart. is lord of the manor of Buxton Levislaw, and W. M. Hazard esq. of Harleston, of that of Buxton-with-the-Members; and they, with Philip E. Sewell esq. are the chief landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, roots, barley and hay. The area is 1,274 acres; rateable value, £2,820; the population in 1881 was 556.

CAISTER-next-YARMOUTH is a large and widely scattered parish, with a station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, 2½ miles north from Yarmouth, in the Northern division of the county, incorporated hundreds of East and West Flegg, county court district of Great Yarmouth, rural deanery of Flegg, archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, situate on the sea coast. The church of the Holy Trinity is an old stone building, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, and lofty square tower containing 1 bell. The register dates from about the year 1563. The living is a rectory, yearly value £942 8s. 11d. with 5 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of C. C. Aldred esq. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Edward Gibbs Howes Murrell, of St. Aidans. Anciently there were two churches, but of St. Edmund's only part of the tower remains. There are three chapels of ease. Here are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists built in 1863. There are several charities for the benefit of the poor; the poor's allotment of 17 acres produces about £100 yearly for fuel. A cemetery of 1 acre was formed in 1879, it is under the control of a Burial Board of 9 members. Here is a coast-guard station, with an officer and 6 men; there is also a company of beachmen, or salvagers, consisting of 40 men, who have charge of the lifeboats belonging to the Royal National Institution, and who have performed many gallant services. Caister is supposed to be more ancient than Yarmouth, and takes its name from a Roman station, the foundations of which have been nearly obliterated by the plough. About 1 mile from the town are the ruins of Caister Castle, originally enclosing a space of 6 acres, built by Sir John Fastolf, who was born here, and who, during the English regency in France, signalled himself by acts of bravery during a lengthened campaign, especially at Harfleur, Agincourt and Verneuil: he received the Garter for his share in taking Granville, and participated in the capture of the Duke of Alençon: after his return to Caister he performed many acts of charity, founded several religious houses, and was a great benefactor to the poor. The only portions of the castle (which was twice besieged) standing are a lofty round tower and part of the north and west walls: it appears to have been a castellated mansion of great extent, and was entered by a drawbridge crossing a moat, supposed to have extended to the sea by means of a creek. Near the castle are the remains of a college, supposed to have been founded by Sir John Fastolf, for seven priests and seven poor folk. The manor and castle afterwards came into the possession of the Paston family, well known from the Paston letters recently published. Mrs. Clowes is lady of the manor, but the land is the property of a number of freeholders. The soil is loamy; subsoil, red sand. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The parish comprises 2,925A. 0R. 9P. of which 1,486A. 1R. 24P. are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture; rateable value, £7,454; the population in 1881 was 1,572.

CARLETON ST. PETER is a parish and village 2 miles south from Buckenham station and 8 south-east from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Loddon hundred and Loddon and Clavering union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. Here is a ferry across the river Yare, convenient to the Buckenham station. The church of St. Peter is an ancient structure of flint in the Early English style: it consists of chancel and nave, with square tower and 4 bells and south porch: it was thoroughly restored in 1849. The register dates from the year 1511. The living is a rectory, consolidated with that of Ashby, joint yearly value £350, in the gift of Sir Reginald William

EAST CARLTON is a parish and scattered village 2 miles east from Hethersett, 2 west from Swainthorpe station, and 5 south-west-by-south from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Humbleyard hundred, Henstead union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Humbleyard, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. East Carlton anciently formed two parishes and had two churches: the church of St. Peter went to decay in the sixteenth century; that of St. Mary is a small building of flint and rubble, having small chancel, nave, north aisle and low square tower with wooden spire and 1 bell. The church was thoroughly restored in 1881, at a cost of £700, the aisle appears to have been added to the original structure, access thereto being obtained by making three rough arches in the thick wall of the nave; at the recent restoration this wall was removed and replaced by three arches on pillars: the building has been re-roofed and raised to its original height, the chancel was also raised two steps, the old and dilapidated fittings have been removed and replaced by open benches; a new east window was also inserted and the church generally put in thorough repair: in the chancel is a tablet to the memory of Peter Coppin formerly rector of the parish for 40 years, who died in 1728. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is formed of the consolidated rec-

CARLTON FOREHOE is a village and parish 3 miles north-west from Wymondham station, in the Southern division of the county, Forehoe hundred and union, county court district of Wymondham, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary is a small stone edifice, in the Perpendicular style: it has a chancel and nave and square tower containing 1 bell and was repaired and re-pewed in 1839, when an organ and gallery were added. In 1876 the church was again re-pewed. The register dates from the year 1699. The living is a rectory, with Crownthorpe annexed, tithe rent charge £170, with 90 acres of glebe in this parish and 30 acres in the parish of Garveston, and £25 derived from glebe land situate in Crownthorpe, in lieu of tithes, with

CASTLE RISING is a parish  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-north-east from Lynn and 2 east from North Wootton station, in the Western division of the county, Freebridge Lynn hundred and union, Lynn county court district, rural deanery of Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, situated on the Babingley river. This parish was anciently a seaport and town of considerable importance, returning two members to Parliament, and the mayor took precedence of those of all boroughs in the county; but, having long since been deserted by the sea, it fell into decay, the market and fair became obsolete, it was disfranchised by the Reform Act of 1832, and the corporation abolished by the Municipal Reform Act. The church of St. Lawrence is a fine specimen of the Norman style, restored in 1844: the chancel, Early English, Proctor-Beauchamp bart. and held since 1880 by the Rev. Robert Thomas Whitmarsh, who resides at Ashby, near Loddon. Sir Reginald William Proctor-Beauchamp bart. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is light sandy; subsoil, sand beds. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 765 acres, rated at £1,016; and the population in 1881 was 94.

was beautifully restored in 1857: the font is also Norman: the church, which consists of chancel, nave and transept, has been further restored during the present year 1883; the transept has been enlarged and the porch which had been demolished has been rebuilt, the cost, including a new organ, is £3,000: at the entrance to the churchyard is a handsome lych gate erected in 1879 to the memory of the Hon. Mary Greville Howard. The register dates from the year 1573. The living is a rectory, with that of Roydon annexed, joint yearly value £419, with 15 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. Greville Theophilus Howard and held since 1846 by the Worshipful Charles Walter Bagot M.A. of All Souls College, Oxford, chancellor of the diocese of Bath and Wells. Trinity Hospital was founded by the

Earl of Northampton in the reign of James II. for a governance and twelve poor spinsters or widows: the income exceeds £200 yearly. The Hall is a handsome brick building, the property of the trustees of the late Hon. G. T. Howard and now occupied by Col. Sir Redvers Henry Buller K.C.M.G., V.C., C.B., J.P. and Lady Audrey Buller. The Castle, part of the keep of which remains, was built by William de Albini in 1176: the remains of a Saxon church have been found within the mounds: Isabella, the queen of Edward II. passed her widowhood here in a kind of captivity, and she died in the castle. In the village there is an old cross upon the site of the ancient market place. The trustees of the late Hon. Greville Theophilus Howard are lords of the manor and the principal landowners. CAWSTON is a parish and large village with a station on the East Norfolk branch of the Great Eastern railway, and Bluestone station, on the Eastern and Midlands railway, is at the northern boundary of the parish, 2 miles from the village; it is 12 miles north-by-east from Norwich, 4 south-west from Aylsham and 127 from London, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Agnes is a noble stone building in the Decorated Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, and a chapel for daily service, with a massive square stone tower containing 6 bells; it has a very handsome rood-screen and some stained glass in the chancel: the hammer beam roof of the nave is very good, but is in need of repair. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value tithe rent charge £1,015, with residence and 13 acres of glebe, in the gift of Pembroke College, Cambridge, and held since 1855 by the Rev. Theodore Henry Marsh M.A. of that college. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The poor have 106 acres of land for fuel, on which the Aylsham volunteers have their range. There are two trees situated in the bowling green of the "Woodrow Inn" which are great curiosities, not only each branch but each twig, bearing leaves of three different kinds of trees—namely, oak, beech and hornbeam: the trees would have been pulled to pieces years ago by persons taking branches as specimens, if it had not been stopped. Near the "Woodrow Inn," on the Norwich road, stands a small stone pillar, erected on the spot where Sir Henry Hobart the fourth baronet fell, being killed by Mr. Oliver Le Neve

CLAXTON is a village and parish 7 miles east from Norwich and 2 south from Buckenham station, in the Southern division of the county, Loddon hundred, Loddon and Clavering union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is of a debased style of architecture, and consists of chancel, nave, square tower containing three bells, and south porch: the nave is thatched and the chancel tiled, the latter having been rebuilt by the trustees of Sir Charles H. Stuart Rich bart. then a minor: it contains one interesting tomb, with inscription, belonging to the Gawdy family, and a tablet to the late incumbent, the Rev. Stephen Webster. The early registers have long been lost; the earliest preserved dates from the year 1747. The living is a limited rectory, yearly value £60, with an augmentation of six acres of land lying in Bracon Ash (a grant from Queen Anne's Bounty), in the gift of Sir Charles H. Stuart Rich bart. and held since 1862 by the Rev. George Gilbert M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel here, with burial ground of old standing.

CLEY-NEXT-THE-SEA is a coast town and parish on the river Glaven, 1 mile east from Blakeney, 10 miles east from Wells, 12 west from Cromer and 4 north-west from Holt station, in the Northern division of the county, Holt hundred and county court district, Erpingham union, rural deanery of Holt and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Margaret is a noble structure in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles with massive pillars, north and south porches, the latter a splendid feature in the building, being surmounted by a parvise, and a square embattled tower, supposed to have been built in the reign of Henry VI.: the transepts and west porch are in ruins: it contains several old tombs and brasses, among which, in the north aisle is a brass, bearing date 1429, representing John Yslington in the habit of a priest, and in the south aisle is also a fine brass of John Symonds, his wife and eight children; in the churchyard is the altar-tomb of Captain John Grieve, who assisted Sir Cloudesley Shovel in burning the ships in the port of Tripoli, in Barbary, in 1676: here is also a curious and beautifully sculptured font of the thirteenth century, representing the seven sacraments of the Catholic church, and a fine carved oak pulpit, bearing date 1611: in the sacarium under the present communion table is an ancient stone altar slab, bearing on it the five crosses; the date of this is uncertain: in the chancel are also to be seen half-a-dozen old oak seats, now formed into pews, having beneath them some curiously carved misereres. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £400, in the gift of the Rev. Everett Bishop B.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge, who resides at Wiveton, and held since 1878 by the Rev. John Chanter Blackmore, of University College, Durham. The United Methodist Free Church and Primitive Methodists have places of worship here. Here was formerly a market on Saturday. The harbour is both narrow and shallow, and forms in its course to the sea a junction with the Blakeney channel: the custom house for this and the neighbouring ports is now removed to Lynn, but there is a sub-office at Blakeney. In 1406 James, son of Robert Bruce, King of Scotland, being on a voyage to France, was driven by stress of weather on this coast, and detained by the mariners of Cley, who sent him prisoner to London. The chief trade carried on in this place is in coal, timber, oilcake and malt. W. H. Cozens-Hardy esq. J. P. of Letheringsett, is lord of the manor and chief landowner, and is owner of Cley Hall, which is occupied by his eldest son, C. W. H. Cozens-Hardy esq. J. P. The soil is light; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are on the four-course system. The area is 2,198 acres of land and 165 of water; rateable value, £3,569; and the population in 1881 was 719.

CLIPPESBY is a parish 3 miles from the Martham station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, extending to the river Bure, 15 north-east from Norwich, 9 north-west from Yarmouth, in the Northern division of the county, incorporated hundred of East and West Flegg, county court district of Yarmouth, rural deanery of Flegg and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter is an old stone building, consisting of chancel, nave, round tower and 1 bell: it contains two ancient brasses, one to the Clippesby family, and two Norman doors: in 1875 the church was restored, and the tower raised 60 feet. The register dates from the year 1737. The living is a rectory, yearly value £246, with 3 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1860 by the Rev. Henry Joseph Muskett M.A. of St. Peter's College, Cambridge. Clippesby House, the seat of the Rev. Henry Joseph Muskett M.A. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner, is a handsome white brick mansion, pleasantly situated on rising ground, with commanding prospects over a large extent of country. The soil is light loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is about 861 acres; rateable value, £1,675; and the population in 1881 was 123.

COCKLEY CLEY is a parish 4 miles south-west from Swaffham station, in the western division of the county, South Greenhoe hundred, Swaffham union and county court district, Cranwich rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and Norwich diocese. The village consists of a few detached houses. The church of All Saints is an old building, restored in 1866 by the late T. R. Buckworth esq. in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisle and a round embattled tower with 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1731. The living is a rectory, yearly value £180, and a few acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late T. R. Buckworth esq. and held since 1879 by the Rev. John William Dolignon B.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. The ancient chapel of St. Mary has been desecrated, and is now a cottage. There are a few charities, amounting to £41 yearly, principally for fuel. Cley Hall, the property of E. T. Buckworth (a minor), is a large red brick mansion, with stone facings in the Italian style, erected in 1870-71: it is situated in a well-wooded park, in which there is a fine lake. The trustees of the late T. R. Buckworth esq. are lords of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is sandy; subsoil, dead loam. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and pasture. The area is 3,939 acres, one-third of which is heath; rateable value, £1,696; and the population in 1881 was 207.

COCKTHORPE is a village and parish about 5 miles east-south-east from Wells and 5 north-east from Walsingham, in the Northern division of the county, North Greenhoe hundred, Walsingham union and county court district, Walsingham rural deanery and Norwich archdeaconry and diocese. The church of All Saints, which is chiefly in the Early English style, was repaired in 1839: it has deep chancel, nave and south aisle, the latter containing some ancient monuments and brasses; the seats are carved with the date 1642: there is 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, with that of Blakeney and the perpetual curacy of Glandford annexed, joint yearly value £506, in the gift of Lord Calthorpe, and held since 1858 by the Rev. Richard Henry Tillard M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who resides at Blakeney. Cockthorpe was the birthplace of three admirals of the seventeenth century—viz. Sir Cloudesley Shovel, in 1650, Sir John Narborough and Sir Christopher Minns. Here are traces of the ruins of a once magnificent residence: the last occupier was John Calthorpe esq. an ancestor of the present Lord Calthorpe, the lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is mixed; subsoil, marl and clay. The chief crops are wheat and turnips. The area is 514 acres; rateable value, £762 15s.; in 1881 the population was 80.—Letters through Wells, which is the nearest money order & telegraph office.

COLBY is a parish and village 3½ miles north-east from Aylsham station on the East Norfolk branch of the Great Eastern railway and 3 miles from Aylsham Town station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Giles is a structure of flint in the Perpendicular style, and has chancel, nave and south porch: the east window is decorated, with some handsome specimens of ancient stained glass, selected by the Rev. George Colby, a former rector, who also presented the altar piece, representing Moses and Aaron: the font is beautifully carved with figures of the Evangelists: there are also three memorial marble tablets to the Colby family and three to the Roper family. The register dates from the year 1554. The living is a rectory, with 7 acres of glebe and residence, tithes commuted at £361 16s. yearly, in the gift of Lord Suffield and held since 1870 by the Rev. Edward Maynard Goslett B.A., LL.D. of Trinity College, Dublin. Richard Snelling of Colby, yeoman, left £1 to be distributed among the aged poor, every Christmas day, and £1 10s. every Easter day to clothe four poor children of the parish, and charged two closes of his land in the north field of Colby to secure the payment of the legacies. Lord Suffield is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is mixed; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,101A. 3R. 35P.; rateable value, £1,871 10s.; the population in 1881 was 241.

COLTISHALL is a parish, small town and station on the branch of the East Norfolk Western Extension railway from Wroxham to Aylsham. The town is of some antiquity, on the high road between Norwich and North Walsham, 7 north from Norwich, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich: it is pleasantly situated on slightly elevated ground, within a semicircular bend on the left bank of the Bure. The church of St. John the Baptist is a building of flint and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and north porch, and an embattled tower nearly 70 feet high, containing a clock presented by R. A. Gorrell esq. in 1877, having rude figures curiously worked in the stone surrounding the western door and within the embattlements; there are 6 bells and a good toned organ: the church was restored in 1865 by subscription, at a cost of £900, and the chancel was restored at the same time by the late rector, the Rev. Joseph Thackeray, who also built the parsonage house in this parish and that at Horstead. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, recently consolidated with Gt. Hautbois; the tithes of this parish have been commuted for £218 yearly, with residence and 12 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1880 by the Rev. John Colk Girling M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge, who resides at Great Hautbois. There are chapels for the Wesleyans, Methodist New Connexion and United Methodist Free Church. The only charitable bequest is one by John Chapman, merchant, in 1718, of £10 yearly for the education of ten poor boys, augmented by a further donation of about £10 16s. a year, left in 1815 by Dr. Charles Grape, formerly rector of Coltishall: these charities are now made over to the School Board. There are several extensive malting houses, and a considerable trade is carried on in malt, corn, coals, ale and other articles. A fair is held here on Whit-Monday. Henry III. in 1231 granted a charter to the town, conferring several privileges on the inhabitants. Coltishall Hall, the seat of Richard Rogers esq. M.A., J.P. is a handsome mansion, situated near the centre of the village, and commands a fine view of the surrounding country, also of the river Bure. King's College, Cambridge, who are lords of the manor, Geo. W. Danby-Palmer esq. J.P. who resides at the Priory, Ranworth, and Mrs. Burroughes, are the chief landowners. The soil is sand and gravel; subsoil, sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips &c. The area is 1,180 acres; rateable value, £3,763 2s. 6d.; and the population in 1881 was 952.

COLTON is a village and parish, 6 miles north-west from Wymondham station, and 8 west from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Forehoe hundred and union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is a small flint building, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave, a square embattled tower containing 3 bells, and a porch on the north side; the interior was thoroughly repaired in 1852, and filled with stained windows; an organ with 12 stops was added at a cost of £250, the whole expense being defrayed by the late John Daveney esq. who left £550 invested in £3 per Cents. the interest to be applied as a salary to the organist: a new pulpit has since been added, on which a brass plate records that it was "Presented to the parish of Colton by C. Sugden esq. as a tribute of affection and regard for the Rev. H. W. Turner, the rector, 1877," the Rev. H. W. Turner gave the brass lantern and defrayed the cost of re-seating the chancel; in the church are several monuments of the Daveney family; there are also monuments to Mr. & Mrs. Jeremiah Ives, and to the families of Seaborne, Powley and Vincent. The register dates from the year 1543. The living is a rectory, tithe rent charge £305, with 50 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1877 by the Rev. Henry Whitelock Turner M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge: a rectory house was built in 1874, at a cost of £1,000. The fuel allotment of 10 acres produces £19 yearly, which is given to the poor in coals. This place is in the manor of Costessey, of which Lord Stafford D.L., J.P. is lord. Ferdinand Ives esq. Mr. Stephen Hipkin, of Honingham, and the trustees of the late Major-General Daveney, are the chief landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, chiefly clay. COSTESSEY (corrupted into COSSEY) is a parish and village pleasantly situated on the river Wensum, 1 mile south-west from Drayton station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, and 4½ miles north-west from Norwich, and consists principally of one long street, extending nearly 2 miles, with houses of irregular form and size, in the Southern division of the county, Forehoe hundred and union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Edmund is a large building of flint, and consists of chancel and nave, with square tower and low wooden spire containing 5 bells: at the south entrance is an old Norman porch, and it contains a very handsome Florid Gothic screen: there are several monuments to the Waldegrave and Jermingham families. The register dates from the year 1578. The living is a vicarage, yearly value, £175, in the gift of the trustees of the Great Hospital at Norwich, and held since 1845 by the Rev. James Williams Evans M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. The Baptists have a chapel, situated in the centre of the village. The Wesleyans have a room in which divine service is performed every Sunday. There is a charity of £2 2s. yearly value. At the eastern extremity of the village is a large flour mill, worked by the river Wensum. The Hall, the seat of Lord Stafford (who is lord of the manor and chief landowner), stands in an extensive park, close to the river Wensum. The new Hall, adjoining the old one, is of red brick, in the Tudor style, built by John Chester Buckler, of Oxford, with a tower and richly ornamented chimneys and pinnacles of the same material: it has a noble appearance, and is surrounded by plantations and over 900 acres of park with fine timber, and in which is a sheet of water: the mansion contains a choice collection of antiquities, and some fine paintings by old masters. The Catholic church of St. Walstan is a brick building, with narrow lancet windows, some of which are stained: attached is a residence for the priest. Here is a Catholic school, supported entirely by Lord Stafford. The soil is chiefly sand and light loam; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and turnips. The area is 2,770 acres, exclusive of a common of 270 acres, which has been enclosed; rateable value, £4,475; and the population in 1881 was 960.

NORTH CREAKE is a parish and village 3 miles south-by-east from Burnham Market, 7 north-east from Fakenham and 21 from Lynn, in the Western division of the county, Brothecross hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, Burnham rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; it is situated on the Fakenham road and on a small rivulet which rises at South Creake and falls into the sea at Burnham Overy Staith. The church of St. Mary the Virgin, situated near the south end of the village, is a spacious and handsome Gothic building of stone and flint, and consists of chancel and chantry, nave with clerestory and north aisle, south porch, and has a tower at the western end containing 6 bells, with sun dial: it contains an ancient font, an Easter sepulchre, and a mural monument to the Venerable Henry Bathurst (eldest son of Henry Bathurst, Bishop of Norwich), who was thirty-five years rector of this parish and archdeacon of Norwich: the chancel is known to be of the date 1301: the great east window, of five lights, contains remnants of stained glass: the hammer-beam roof was erected in the 15th century, when the nave was enlarged and clerestory added: the roof is richly ornamented, especially that of the chancel, which has figures of winged angels, and of Apostles, the latter bearing on scrolls the articles of the Apostles' Creed in Latin: about the centre of the chancel floor is a fine brass of the fifteenth century, representing the second founder, Sir W. Calthorpe, who holds a model of the church in his arms. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £1,081, with a good residence, in the Tudor style, and 176 acres of glebe, in the alternate gift of the Bishop of Norwich and Earl Spencer and held since 1868 by the Rev. John Nassau Simpkinson M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. There are four almshouses, founded by Richard Mansuer, in 1592, and endowed with £4 3s. a year, out of land, now the property of Earl Spencer. At the northern extremity of the parish are the ruins of the abbey founded about 1206 by Sir Robert de Narford and Alice his wife, and dissolved by Henry VII. and the estates granted to the Lady Margaret, Countess of Richmond, who transferred them to Christ's College, Cambridge, founded by her: several of the pointed arches and lofty pillars of the choir are still entire. SOUTH CREAKE is a parish and village 4 miles south from Burnham Market railway station, 7 miles south-west from Wells and 21 from Lynn, in the Western division of the county, Brothercross hundred, Docking union, Little Walsingham county court district, Burnham rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; it is situated on the Fakenham road and on a small rivulet which rises here and falls into the sea at Burnham Overy Staith. The church of St. Mary the Virgin, situated on a slight eminence, is a large and ancient structure of flint with stone dressings, in the Perpendicular style, and consists of a chancel, nave, with clerestory, aisles, vestry, south porch and square western tower containing 5 bells: a few of the windows in the aisles, also of the clerestory, are partially filled with ancient stained glass: the seats are open benches: there is an oak rood screen, and a large and massive iron-bound oak chest, having five fastenings, and lined with cedar: the font is octagonal, the sculpture of which is good, but much disfigured. The register dates from the year 1538, and is in a good state of preservation. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value £440 6s. with residence, in the gift of the Marquis Townshend and held since 1877 by the Rev. Isaac Bowman M.A. Trinity College, Cambridge. The Congregational chapel is a plain brick building, with a small burial-ground and residence for the minister adjoining. Isaac Lane, in 1675, left £100 for the purchase of land, the rent to be expended in the distribution of coals during the winter and 16 penny loaves every Lord's day; the present value is £40 yearly; the Sunday dole of bread is still continued; £15 a year is paid to the National school and the remainder is expended in coals and other necessities for such of the poor of the parish as are 60 years of age, and widows. Mrs. Elizabeth Pell, daughter of the aforesaid, left £100 for the purchase of land, the rent of which was to be expended in like manner: this land now lets for £15 a year. Mrs. Dorothy Woodhouse, by will, dated 1640, left 20s. to the minister in consideration of his preaching two sermons yearly, and 30s. to the poor of the parish, the half to be paid the same days the sermons are preached; the present yearly value of this gift is about 20 guineas per annum; the 50s. is still paid for the two sermons and the dole of bread, the remainder is given to the National school fund. The town land clarity is 12 acres, lets for £12 a year, which is given to the National school. There is also a fuel allotment of 23 acres of land, the rent of which, £30 yearly, is expended in coals and distributed to the poor of the parish at Christmas. Present annual value of charities £126. About half a mile south-west from the church is a remarkable Saxon fortification, the road to which is called Bloodgate, from the tradition that a great slaughter took place here in a battle between the Saxons and Danes. The Marquis Townshend is lord of the manor and proprietor. The principal landowners are the Marquis Townshend, the Earl of Leicester and D. T. Belding esq. The soil is mixed, productive and well cultivated; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips, mangold-wurtzel and seeds. The area is 4,075 acres; rateable value, £5,944; the population in 1881 was 976.

CROMER is a town, parish and bathing place on the sea coast, terminus of a branch railway from Norwich and polling place for the Northern division of the county, about 10 miles east-north-east from Holt, 9 north-north-west from North Walsham, 11 north-by-east from Aylsham, 22 north from Norwich and 130 from London, in North Erpingham hundred, Erpingham union, Holt county court district, rural deanery of Repps, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich: this fashionable bathing-place is picturesquely situated on the cliffs, which are a considerable height above the beach, and the town is sheltered on three sides by an amphitheatre of hills, partly covered with wood. Cromer was once a chartered town, but for a very long time the charter has been lost, and there is no market place: the town is well supplied with poultry, butter, eggs and fruit: Cromer has at different times suffered from the incursions of the sea, which in the time of Henry IV. swallowed up the town of Shipden, in which parish Cromer was then situated: in 1825 and 1832 large portions of the cliff fell into the sea, so as to endanger the old lighthouse, and in 1845 the old jetty was washed away and other damage done, but in 1845 an Act of Parliament was obtained for the purpose of raising money to build a jetty and breakwaters, and also for erecting a sea wall extending along the whole front of the west end of the town, with an esplanade for the use of visitors: the works have been completed at an expense of about £7,000: it is hoped that they will be an effectual barrier to the force of the waves. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a large Gothic building of cut flint with stone dressings erected, as it is supposed, in the reign of Henry IV.: it consists of nave and aisles, with an embattled tower, 150 feet high, containing a peal of 6 bells and clock: the whole edifice was richly ornamented with sculpture: the west entrance is a beautiful piece of architecture: the north porch was, until recently, much dilapidated: it is lighted by two windows and is now used as a vestry: the font is a copy of a beautiful one in Yaxham church in this county: the chancel has been in ruins many years. The register dates from the year 1689. The living is a vicarage, nett yearly value £200, with house, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1852 by the Rev. Frederic Fitch M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. Here are places of worship for Wesleyans, United Methodist Free Church and Primitive Methodists. The cemetery, which was opened in 1860, is situated on the Holt road, about a quarter of a mile west of the town; it is under the control of a Burial Board of 9 members. The town lands, of 13 acres, produce £18 yearly, which is distributed to poor widows. Cromer has some comfortable and respectable hotels and lodging houses for visitors: the beach has a fine firm sand and a level surface, which affords a delightful promenade several miles in length: on the beach are bathing machines, and there are also warm baths in the town. A pleasure fair is held on Whit-Monday. The chief business of the town is the coal trade and the fisheries for herrings, cod, whittings, lobsters and crabs. Ships are continually seen passing on the North Sea, but the coast being extremely dangerous, there are five lights between this and Yarmouth. In 1868 a life boat, with a life boat house and slipway, was presented to the town by the late B. Bond-Cabbell esq. at a cost of upwards of £2,000. A short distance from the town, in the parish of Overstrand, is situated the lighthouse, 52 feet in height and 250 above the level of the sea, and crowned with a lantern lighted by 30 patent lamps, in finely-plated reflectors, which revolve upon an upright axis: the oil expended annually is about 1,400 gallons. Cromer Hall is a fine Gothic mansion, erected by the late G. T. Wyndham esq. the first husband of the Countess of Listowel: it consists of a central tower with two wings, and was commenced in 1827, but partially burned down before it was finished in 1829: Mrs. J. Bond-Cabbell is lady of the manor and owner of the Hall and of the greater part of the land in the parish. Colne House is the seat of Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton bart. D.L., J.P. Cliff House that of Samuel Hoare esq. M.A., J.P. The area is 851 acres; rateable value, £7,369; the population in 1881 was 1,568.

DENTON is a pleasant scattered village and parish 4½ miles north-east from Harleston, 4 south-west from Bungay and 1½ north-east from Homersfield station on the Waveney Valley railway, in the Southern division of the county, Earsham hundred, Depwade union, Harleston county court district, rural deanery of Redenhall, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a handsome building of flint with stone dressings, chiefly in the Decorated style with spacious chancel, in which is a fine-toned organ, nave, aisles, low square embattled tower containing 3 bells and clock, and it has also a well-proportioned north porch, with a groined stone roof and carved crosses : a considerable sum has been expended on the improvement of this church, and in 1868 the nave and aisles were floored with Minton's tiles, and re-seated throughout with open oak benches, the chancel having been previously restored : in 1874 the aisles were re-roofed in oak and covered with lead : there are three memorial stained windows, two to the Sandby family, and one to that of Umpleby : a lych-gate of solid oak has been erected at the entrance to the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory : titles have been commuted for £769 yearly ; the glebe is 92 acres, and the church land 5½ acres ; it is in the gift of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who must confer it on one who either is or has

DENVER is a parish, village and station (for goods only), on the Lynn and Ely and Downham and Stoke Ferry railways, which here form a junction, and is situated on the navigable river Ouse, 86½ miles from London, 1 mile south from Downham Market, in the Western division of the county, Clackclose hundred, Downham union and county court district, rural deanery of Fincham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary, of great antiquity, was restored in 1870, at a cost of about £1,600, re-roofed and re-seated, with the addition of a north aisle; at the same time a clock was erected, at the cost of £100, through the munificence of Mr. John Palmer of Lynn; on the south side of the chancel is a double arched piscina in the Decorated style, dating from the 14th century; at the west end of the nave stands a square tower, in the Early English style, surmounted by a spire, and containing 5 bells: a handsome carved stone font was added in 1870. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, the tithes commuted at £889 a year, with nearly 95 acres of glebe, in the gift of Caius College, Cambridge, and held since 1852 by the Rev. William Houghton Stokes M.A. late fellow of that college. Here is a Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1864. There are 45 acres of land, producing an average rental of £65 a year, half of which is applied to the repairs of the church, and the remainder to the poor, and 3 acres belonging to the church let for £8 yearly. Edward Rogers Murray Pratt esq. of Ryston Hall, who is lord of the manor, Col. W. E. G. Lytton-Bulwer, of East Dereham, and Caius College, Cambridge, are the chief landowners. The soil is strong and light clay, and fen land; subsoil, lower green sand and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, peas, beans and roots. The area is 3,149 acres; rateable value, £5,633; the population in 1881 was 836.

DEOPHAM is a parish 2½ miles south from Kimberley station, 3 north from Attleborough station, and 4 south-west from Wymondham, comprising the small village of DEOPHAM GREEN, situated a mile south-east from the church. The parish is in the Southern division of the county, Forehoe hundred and union, Wymondham county court district, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is in the Perpendicular style, having chancel, lofty nave and aisles, with a handsome square embattled tower, having octagonal turrets, and two strong buttresses at each angle, with ornamental pinnacles on each side, and contains 5 bells: in 1864 the chancel was entirely restored and new roofed, and furnished with a new window and communion rails, and the floor paved with Minton's tiles, and in 1867 the south aisle was restored, at a cost of £240: in consequence of the dilapidated condition of the roof of the nave, north aisle, the windows of the latter and the flooring of the church, service is now held in the chancel only, which is boarded off from the rest of the building: restorations (commenced July 1882) are in progress and will be continued so long as the funds in the hands of the vicar (who is raising subscriptions) will permit: the tower is also in a very unsatisfactory state: it is estimated the total cost of restoring the edifice will be about £3,200, including £500 for the tower. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, tithes commuted at £190, with £35 a year added by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, with residence, and 23 acres of glebe in Shipdham and 6 acres in this parish, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury and held by the Rev.

Hibbert Wanklyn, of University College, Durham. The Rev. Henry Rix, who died in 1728, left £60, to be invested in land (which produces a rental of £12 yearly), the proceeds to be appropriated for teaching four poor children and for an annual sermon, the minister to receive 10s. clerk 1s. and 8s. for each child, the remainder to be given in bread to the poor parishioners. About £12 arising from 14 acres of land, awarded at the enclosure in 1814 in lieu of common rights, is distributed among the poor annually. The Primitive Methodists have two small chapels, one at Deopham Green, the other at Low Common. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are improprators of the rectorial tithes. The Earl of Kimberley, the Sutton family and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the Earl of Kimberley, the trustees of the late J. B. Graver Browne esq. and the Crown. The soil is marl; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and hay. The area is 1,646 acres; rateable value, £3,147; the population in 1881 was 424.

EAST DEREHAM.

EAST DEREHAM is a thriving market town, railway station and parish, head of a county court district and polling-place for the Southern division of the county, in the hundred of Mitford, union of Mitford and Launditch, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich, 127 miles from London by rail and 100 by road, 16 west-by-north from Norwich, 12½ east-by-north from Swaffham, 11 north-west from Wymondham and 26½ east from Lynn: it is a junction-station of the Lynn branch of the Great Eastern railway, and has communication to all parts of the kingdom.

The town is well drained by new sewerage works, and lighted with gas, and is governed by a Local Board of 12 members: the Headboroughs are the trustees of the assembly rooms and other property, and after paying certain outgoings, the balance, about £100 is paid over to the Local Board in reduction of the rates.

Waterworks were erected in 1881, to supply the town, from deep wells, at a cost of £4,000; a fire brigade was formed in 1879, and has two engines with all the apparatus by Merryweather, of London.

The place is very ancient, and is supposed to have been made a parish by Anna, who was King of the East Angles from 635 to 654; his daughter Withburga founded a nunnery here; the Saxon Chronicle records that fifty-five years after her death her body was found all whole and incorrupted as on the day of her interment, and was removed into the church: subsequent writers add that from her burial-place in the churchyard issued forth a spring of the purest water, gifted with many healing virtues: the sisterhood were driven out of their cell about the year 870, when the country was overrun by the Danes: the tomb of Withburga having become of great repute for the cure of diseases, the Abbot of Ely became very desirous of getting possession of her body, in order to translate it to Ely: he concerted a scheme for stealing it, which he carried into effect the night after a feast which the Abbot, as lord of the town, gave at his court-leet: this exploit, called in the history, "a sanctified sacrilege, a pious theft, a soul-saving robbery," was perpetrated on the 8th of July, 974. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth a fire happened, on the 1st of July, 1581, by which the whole town was destroyed; a second fire occurred on the 3rd of July, 1670, during the reign of Charles II. by which 170 houses were burnt, and property destroyed to the value of £19,500.

The church of St. Nicholas is an ancient stone building, erected on the site of the conventual chapel: it consists of chancel, nave, aisles and transepts with eastern chapels (dedicated to St. Thomas of Canterbury and St. Withburga) and a central lantern tower: the bell-tower which is square and detached from the church, was commenced about 1508 and contains a peal of 8 bells: the styles of architecture are various, the church having been erected and altered at different periods: there are vestiges of the Norman in portions of two twisted shafts on the west side of the jambs of the chancel arch; the chancel itself is Early English, built about 1250, but the tracery of the east window is of much later insertion, as well as the chancel arch; the west door with an ogee-headed niche on each side, the great window over it, and the whole of the north aisle, except the doorway, are in the Decorated style; the lantern tower standing on four fine arches, with triforium arcade and clerestory, the transepts, eastern chapels, the arches of the nave and the westernmost piers are Perpendicular: there is a beautiful font, erected in 1468, adorned with carvings of stone, representing the seven Roman Catholic sacraments and the Apostles, but the figures were mutilated at the time of the Reformation: there is an ancient carved monument chest, brass eagle and organ, which has been greatly enlarged and renewed; several brasses were formerly in the church, two only of which remain in a perfect state: Cowper, the poet, is buried in the church (1800) and there are monuments to him and his relatives, Mrs. Unwin and Miss Perowne: much has been done to beautify and preserve this venerable building: many coats of whitewash were carefully removed from the stone pillars, the entire church re-seated and repaired, the east and other windows adorned with stained glass and a reredos of carved stone, beautifully illuminated, has been added: the Sacraminum is enclosed by an oak railing, with iron standards: the pulpit was made from an ancient beam of oak, almost as hard as iron, taken from the old Vicarage house at Besthorpe; it bore an inscription, which proved it to be more than three centuries old: in the churchyard is the spring said to issue from the spot where the bones of St. Withburga were first deposited and the ancient arch, from which the water issues, is supposed to be the remains of her tomb, but the greater probability is that this erection was in very ancient times a baptistery. The register dates from the year 1679. About £1,000 has been expended on the chancel by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, on the reversion to them of the great tithes, at the decease of the last sine-cure rector. The living is a vicarage, with the vicarage of Hoe annexed, joint yearly value £536 13s. 10d. with about 60 acres of vicarial glebe and house, in the gift of the Crown and held since 1850 by the Rev. Benjamin John Armstrong M.A. of Calus College, Cambridge.

A mission church in connection with the parish church was built in 1880 in the Upper Norwich road.

The "Cowper" Congregational church, erected in the year 1874, in the Gothic style, stands in the Market place, and occupies the site of the house where the poet Cowper spent his last days: the front is faced with Kentish rag-stone with Bath stone dressings: it consists of apse, nave and aisles: the windows of the apse are stained and a beautiful window, representing the Good Samaritan, has been inserted at the west end: there is a carved stone pulpit: the reading desk and communion table are of oak, and the woodwork of the bed-room in which Cowper died has been preserved and fitted in the minister's vestry: Mr. Edward Boardman, of Norwich, was the architect of the building, the total cost of which, including lighting apparatus, was about £3,500: in front of the church is a memorial of Cowper, in polished granite, which bears the following inscription, written by the late Dean Stanley:—"This monument is erected on the site of the house where the beloved poet of Olney, William Cowper, spent the last years of his life, under the care of faithful friends. He lies buried in the parish church, having here given up his soul to God, April 25th, 1800." Then follow a few lines from "The Task."

The Baptist chapel, High street, was built in 1793.

The Primitive Methodist chapel, Commercial road, was built in 1863.

The Trinity Wesleyan church, situated in Theatre street, is a Gothic building of Kentish rag with Bath stone dressings built in 1880, at a cost of £3,500, including the erection of the Sunday schools and the minister's residence, erected on the site of the old one, the architect being Mr. Edward Boardman of Norwich; the fittings throughout are of pitch pine, and the building is heated by hot water.

The Cemetery was opened in 1869; it is about 5 acres in extent and contains two mortuary chapels; it is under the control of a Burial Board of 9 members.

The charities amount to about £400 yearly, for distribution, and there are 84 acres of fuel allotment.

The Corn Hall, erected in 1856, at a cost of more than £3,000, is a handsome building, in the Market place, and affords great facilities to merchants and farmers transacting business here.

The Assembly Rooms, built in 1756, on the site of the old market cross, form a spacious brick building, in which the magistrates hold petty sessions for the hundred every alternate Friday: there is a Reading Room and Institute in the same building.

The manufactures of the town are principally connected with agriculture: there are manufactories of agricultural steam engines and threshing and other machines and iron foundries; coach works, saw mills, breweries, maltings, and shoe factory, and there are many handsome modern shops. The market is held on Friday, and is well supplied with corn, live stock and provisions of every description. The situation of the town, in the centre of a fertile and highly cultivated district, and its distance from any other market of any consequence, cause Dereham to rank among the best markets of the county. Fairs are held in the Market place on the Thursday before July 6th and September 29th. There are four branch banks. A company of rifle volunteers was embodied in 1860, of which H. E. Hyde esq. is captain.

Quebec House, the seat of Col. William Earle Gascoyne Lytton Bulwer J.P. High Sheriff for Norfolk, 1883, situate a mile north-west from the town, is Gothic, and derives its name from having been built at the time of the capture of Quebec; it stands in an extensive lawn, which is well timbered, and is partly surrounded by plantations.

The area of the parish of East Dereham is 5,222 acres; rateable value, £27,013; and the population of the parish in 1861 was 4,368, in 1871 was 5,107, and in 1881 was 5,640, and of the town about 4,000.

DILLINGTON, in Launditch hundred, is a hamlet in this parish, one mile north-east.

DUMPLING GREEN, 2 miles south-east; ETILING GREEN, 1½ mile north-east; NORTH HALL GREEN, 1 mile north; SOUTH GREEN, half a mile, and TOFTWOOD, 1 mile south, are other hamlets.

Parish Clerk, George Philo.

WEST DEREHAM is a village, parish and station on the branch of the Downham and Stoke Ferry railway, 3 miles north-east from Hilgay station and 4 south-east from Downham Market station, in the Western division of the county, Clackclose hundred, Downham union and county court district, rural deanery of Fincham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. There were formerly two churches here, dedicated respectively to St. Andrew and St. Peter; the latter has long since disappeared, though its foundations may still be traced in the western part of the churchyard. The remaining church of St. Andrew consists of a massive round tower of ragstone, containing 5 bells, surmounted by an octagonal turret of brickwork, a chancel, nave, south porch and modern vestry: the prevailing style is Perpendicular, but the inner doorway of the porch is of Early English character, and has a well-preserved holy water stoup on its right or eastern side: the church was re-seated about 30 years ago: it contains two monuments to the Dereham family; one of them an elaborate piece of work in various coloured marbles, erected at the beginning of the 18th century: there is also a full-length marble statue of Colonel Soame, of West Dereham Grange, who died in 1706; and a slab, with arms of Gregory Lovell esq.

who died in 1693, leaving £500 to the poor of the parish; there are also marble tablets to members of the Stebbing, Roper and Catton families. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, endowed with £33 yearly, paid by the lessee of the rectorial tithes, and the rent of 26 acres of land, purchased at different times by grants from the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty: the present patron is the Rev. Leonard Blonfield (late Jenyns) M.A. in right of a lease of the rectorial tithes granted by a former Bishop of Ely; the living has been held since 1870 by the Rev. John Haldenby Clark M.A. late of St. John's College, Cambridge. The gross income of the benefice is about £102; the rectorial tithes are commuted at £225. A vicarage house was erected in 1874, on a site a little to the south-west of the church, the cost of which has been defrayed by private contributions, met by a grant from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who hold the reversion of the rectorial tithes. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The annual revenue of the parochial charities amounts to about £170, of which £25 yearly is applied by order in Chancery, 28th April, 1857, towards the support of the National school, and the remainder distributed to the poor in coal and blankets. In 1873 a valuable bed of coprolites was found in this parish. There was formerly an abbey at West Dereham of the Premonstratensian order; the buildings which occupy its site, however, are only the remains of a mansion built by the Dereham family, very few traces of the original ecclesiastical edifice being now visible. About 1564 the abbey farm was held for a time by Thomas Tusser, author of the "Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry;" and Francis Derham, the kinsman and early lover of Queen Katherine Howard, who suffered death on her account in 1542, was a member of the ancient family who took their name from this place, and obtained a grant of the abbey and its surrounding lands: the lands are tithe free: the owner and occupier is Hugh Aylmer, esq. the well-known breeder of shortthorns. DERSINGHAM is a village and parish, with station on the Lynn and Hunstanton railway, 8½ miles north-north-east from Lynn and 107 from London, in the Western division of the county, Freebridge Lynn hundred, Docking union, Lynn county court district, rural deanery of Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, situated on the Lynn and Hunstanton road. The railway station is situated about three quarters of a mile west from the village. The church of St. Nicholas is a large ancient structure of flint and stone, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, which contains some fine Decorated windows and sedilia much mutilated, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and square embattled tower containing 6 bells: the chancel is divided from the nave by an old carved oak screen, some of the tracery of which has been restored: in the south aisle is a curious altar-tomb of the Pell family, date 1607: there are also some brasses and several ancient and curious marble slabs, and an ancient font with a handsome old carved oak cover: the church was thoroughly restored between 1877 and 1879 at a cost of £5,000; Dr. Bellamy defrayed the cost of the restoration of the nave, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners that of the chancel, supplemented by £300 raised by subscription: the building was entirely re-seated with open pews of wainscot, with pulpit of the same, and a handsome brass lectern erected. The register dates from the year 1710. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £380, in the gift of the Rev. J. Bellamy D.D. President of St. John's College, Oxford, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Edward William Penny M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. The rectory house completed in 1877 is built of carr stone and red bricks, and stands on a pleasant elevation. Here are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. At the enclosure of the common, 75 acres of land were reserved for the benefit of the poor. There is a charity of about £21 annual value, arising from nine acres of land, left by three different donors, and £5 from land at Snettisham, left by Mrs. Pell in 1732: these amounts are expended in coals, which are distributed to the poor of the parish. The Old Hall is a large plain building of carr stone and stuccoed, standing in the centre of the village, the residence of John B. Goggs esq. Here are five manors, viz., Hunstanton-with-Mustrels, Ringstead-with-Holme and Northall, Holme-next-the-Sea and Hoods-in-Holme, of which H.R.H. The Prince of Wales and the Rev. J. Bellamy D.D. are lords, and they and John B. Goggs esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is light mixed; subsoil, principally chalk and carr stone. The crops are generally on the four-course system. The area is 3,472 acres; rateable value, £5,008; the population in 1881 was 1,014.

Parish Clerk, Benjamin Lines.

POST, MONEY ORDER & TELEGRAPH OFFICE & Savings Bank.—Enoch Beckett, postmaster. London & other letters are received through Lynn by mail cart; arrive at 6.30 a.m. & are dispatched at 6.10 p.m. There is also a Wall Box, cleared at 5.45 p.m.

The Church of England schools were largely added to in 1875. H.R.H. The Prince of Wales gave the site & £500; the cost of the building operations was principally defrayed by Dr. Bellamy. Alfred Firth, schoolmaster; Miss Firth, infants' mistress

DICKLEBURGH with LANGMERE is a parish and large village, situated on an acclivity, on the road from Diss to Norwich, 5 miles north-east from Diss, 2 east from the Burston station on the Great Eastern railway, in the Southern division of the county, Diss hundred, Depwade union, Harleston county court district, Redenhall rural deanery, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of All Saints is a handsome Perpendicular building, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, and square tower containing 5 bells; the interior is lofty: in 1867 the old pews were removed, and the church was re-seated with open oak benches; an organ was also presented, the chancel walls were repaired, and a new roof erected, at the cost of the late rector, the Rev. W. C. Mathison, and the east window has been filled with handsome stained glass by his widow: on the wall of the chancel entrance is a marble tablet to the Lady Platers, and one in the body of the church to George Lee esq. as well as one to Captain Starkie: two monuments have been erected in the chancel, one to Lieut.-Gen. Turner, by his surviving children and another to Captain Henry Turner, son of the above, who died in the Crimea, erected by his brother officers. The register dates from the year 1540. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted at £754, with a good house and 109 acres of, glebe, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held since 1871 by the Rev. Henry Brandreth M.A. late fellow of that college, J.P. for Norfolk. The Baptists have a chapel here. The town lands produce an income of £80, of which £24 is spent on coals, and the remainder by the churchwardens on the support of the church. The interest of a sum of £1,000, left by the late Mrs. Mathison, is also spent on charities. The rector of Dickleburgh for the time being is lord of the manor of Dickleburgh Rectory, and the land belongs to several copyholders. The soil is partly heavy and partly light; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat and barley, and some beans. The area of Dickleburgh with Langmere is 2,343 acres; rateable value, £3,574; and the population in 1881 was 829.

LANGMERE is a hamlet or township annexed to Dickleburgh, locally situated in Earsham hundred. There is no village, but several farmhouses.

DIDLINGTON is a parish 7 miles north from Brandon station and 5 east from Stoke Ferry station, both on the Great Eastern railway and 1 mile from Colveston, in the Western division of the county, hundred of South Greenhoe, union and county court district of Swaffham, rural deanery of Cranwich, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church, a stone building situate close to the Hall, consists of chancel, nave and tower, and is of the Perpendicular period, the chancel being Early English: it has been repaired and re-seated with open benches of oak by the Amherst family; the communion steps and rails are of white marble and the floor of colored marble, and there are some beautiful stained windows. The register dates from the year 1717. The living is a vicarage, consolidated with the rectory of Colveston, joint yearly value £200, with 114 acres of glebe, in the gift of W. Amhurst Tyssen Amherst esq. M.P., J.P. and held by the Rev. Henry Ray B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, who is also rector of and resides at Cranwich. There is a charity of £5 yearly for bread to the poor. Diddlington Hall, the seat of William Amhurst Tyssen Amherst esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. is a handsome building in the Italian style, situated in a finely-timbered park, with a beautiful sheet of water of nearly 50 acres in extent, dotted with several small islands: the mansion contains a good gallery of pictures by celebrated masters, a valuable library containing many rare books and manuscripts, with some valuable tapestry and articles of vertu. William Amhurst Tyssen Amherst esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. who is a noted breeder of red polled cattle, is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is light sandy loam; subsoil, chalk and sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,854 acres; rateable value, £1,257; in 1881 the population was 95.

DISS.

Diss is a parish, and well-built market town, head of a county court district, a polling-place for the Southern division of the county, and a station on the Great Eastern railway, which passes through the parish about a mile east from the town, in Diss hundred, Depwade union, rural deanery of Redenhall, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. 2½ miles north from Ipswich, 24 east from Bury St. Edmunds, 19 south-west from Norwich and 9½ north-east from London, and is separated from Suffolk by the river Waveney. The town is flourishing, and contains some good shops: it stands principally on an acclivity, encompassing a large sheet of water, or mere, of the extent of nearly 6 acres, the banks of which are laid out in gardens at the rear of the houses, which have a pleasant effect from the lower part of the town: the mere receives all the rainwater from the town, and the overflow discharges itself into the Waveney: it contains eels and a curious fish locally called the chaser, a kind of carp.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a large handsome structure in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles and porches with a fine square tower containing 8 bells, upon which a set of chimes play every four hours: the nave and aisles underwent considerable repair in 1850, at a cost of £1,700: it is lighted by twenty clerestory windows: the chancel was restored and enlarged (to its original length) in 1857 by the present rector: the exterior is of squared flints, with massive buttresses, panelled and carved with armorial bearings: it contains a very striking and beautiful reredos (erected by the present rector in 1869) of Caen stone, inlaid with coloured marbles, and bosses of spar and gold with alabaster emblems of the four Evangelists, and a black marble and gold mosaic cross in the centre: the rest of the wall, within the rails, is beautifully panelled in oak, with diapered devices in gold and colours: the architect who designed all the work is Augustus E. Browne esq. of London, a native of Diss: in 1877, the interior of the chancel was entirely refitted with oak choir-stalls, and the floor paved with black and red tiles, and the walls ornamented with painting: a new organ containing 28 stops and 1,400 pipes was also erected in the north chapel adjoining the chancel: the instrument is by Messrs. Rayson & Son, of Ipswich: a great improvement was also effected at the west end of the church, by removing the gallery in which the former organ stood: the cost of these alterations was about £800: the large stained east window, of five lights, is a memorial to the late Rev. William Manning, 46 years rector, and represents the Birth, Death, Burial and Resurrection of our Lord, with the Evangelists and other figures above: one of the south windows of the chancel is also filled with stained glass, of very beautiful design: a third was erected in 1864, to the memory of Mrs. Manning, and is a sequel to the east window: at the east end of the south aisle is another memorial window, to the late Mrs. Darby; and the adjoining one, on the south side, is to the Fincham family, of this place: in the south aisle are three other very beautiful windows, one to the memory of Mrs. Edward Wallace, daughter of the late rector, representing Ruth, Anna and Dorcas; the second to other members of the Manning family, representing scenes from the history of Joseph; and the third to the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Farrow, depicting three parables of Our Lord—the Good Samaritan, the Talents, and the Ten Virgins: in the north aisle are three more memorial windows, one to T. E. Wallace esq. representing scenes referring to the history of Nathaniel: another to the wife of J. Muskett esq. representing Our Lord blessing Children and the Instruction of Timothy: the third is to J. Muskett esq. and there is an armorial window in the vestry: the communion rails and gas standards are of an ecclesiastical pattern, in brass and iron: a handsome stone font, with oak cover, and an oak pulpit, reading desk and lectern, were placed in the church in 1858, purchased by subscription in the parish, and executed in the town: there are several monuments to former inhabitants of the parish. The register dates from the year 1551. The living is a rectory, yearly value £200, with 12 acres of glebe and house, in the gift of J. Muskett esq. in 1857 by the Rev. Charles Robertson Manning M.A., of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, and rural dean of the deanery of Redenhall.

Here are Wesleyan, Congregational, Baptist, Unitarian, Primitive Methodist and Free Methodist chapels, and the Society of Friends have a meeting house.

The Cemetery is on the Heywood road and has two mortuary chapels, in the Early Perpendicular style, connected by a screen-lodge: it consists of 5 acres, and cost nearly £3,000, and is under the control of a Burial Board of 9 members.

The town estate of 97 acres, situate at Framlingham, in Suffolk, produces £347 gross rental; the net amount of income is applied under a scheme settled by the Charity Commissioners, in 1873, as follows:—£90 to the churchwardens of Diss for repairs of the church and their general expenses, and the residue to the Local Board of Health, for the use and benefit of the inhabitants. Charities of £55 yearly value are distributed, principally in fuel.

An Almshouse, pleasantly situated on the Common, at the entrance to the town, with pleasure ground and garden attached, has rooms for thirteen aged couples or widows: at one end is a large room for the transaction of parish business; and a full-length portrait of the late rector, painted by John Roods esq. of London, which was taken at the request of the inhabitants, and paid for by subscription, is now in the vestry.

In 1854 Thomas Lombe Taylor esq. of this town, at his own cost, erected an elegant building in Crown street, to be used as a Corn Exchange, which is vested in trustees: it is in the Ionic style, with a lofty stone portico, and was designed and executed by Mr. George Atkins, of this town: the entrance-hall communicates by three doors with the Corn Hall, which is 77 feet long, 42 feet wide, and 27 feet high, and lighted from above on the same principle as at Mark Lane, except that blinds are rendered unnecessary by the use of ground glass; the whole of the ceiling is of this material, and divided into compartments; the roof is of very thick glass, and is supported by large iron girders: the interior walls are ornamented with pilasters of Parian cement, having enriched capitals, and supporting a cornice, and the door openings have dressings of Ransome's patent stone: an elegant organ, presented by Miss Taylor, has been erected in the hall by Mr. Bullen, of Pulham, for the use of the Sacred Harmonic Society of this town: adjoining the hall are two handsome rooms, the lower of which is appropriated to the use of the magistrates, in which the petty sessions are held: the upper room is used as a public library and reading-room; the library is extensive, comprising between 2,000 and 3,000 volumes, and the London daily papers and periodicals are taken.

In addition to the library in the Corn Exchange is one belonging to the Diss Book Club, supported by the leading gentry of the town and neighbourhood: there is also a free lending library at the National school.

There are several sick and benefit clubs and temperance societies established in the town, also a musical society.

A company was incorporated in May, 1864, styled "The Diss Gas Light and Coke Company Limited," the object of which is to supply the town of Diss and neighbourhood with gas. There are two branch banks, that of Messrs. Gurneys and Co. and the London and Provincial. Here is a brewery, supplied with water from a well bored through the chalk to a depth of 615 feet. The brush, mat and cocoa-nut matting manufactories of Messrs. Aldrich Brothers give employment to a large number of hands of both sexes; malting is also carried on here to some extent.

There is a weekly market on Fridays for corn, cattle, sheep and pigs, toll free: the corn market is well attended by merchants and farmers: important stock sales are also held weekly alternately at the Crown Hotel yard and the "Saracen's Head" yard, and are well attended. A fish market is held on Tuesday.

Francis Taylor esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Sir K. H. Kemp bart. H. R. Rump esq. W. Betts esq. Thomas Mann esq. F. Taylor esq. Mr. William Andrews, Mr. Charles Farrow and Mr. Charles Chase.

The area is 3,627 acres; rateable value, £11,958; the population in 1881 was 3,846.

WESTBROOK GREEN 1½ miles north and WALCOT GREEN three quarters of a mile north-by-west, are hamlets.

At DISS HEYWOOD, situated 2½ miles north from the parish church, is a chapel-school, erected in 1865 as a school for the children of that part of the parish, and licensed for divine service: the fittings are so arranged that the whole can be used on sundays for service; and during the rest of the week a portion is screened off for school purposes; it was built by subscription, at a cost of about £800.

The Earl of Albemarle is lord of the manor of Diss Heywood.

Parish Clerk, George Ford.

DITCHINGHAM is a parish and widely scattered village, and station on the Waveney Valley branch of the Great Eastern railway, next Bungay, Suffolk, to a part of which it adjoins, and is separated from it by the river Waveney, which is here crossed by an iron bridge, 13 miles south-east from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Loddon hundred, Loddon and Claverling union, Bungay and Beccles county court district, rural deanery of Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary stands on a height, and is of flint with stone dressings, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave and north aisle, with square tower containing 6 very good bells: the east window is stained, in memory of Samuel Ives Sutton esq. and there is another memorial window on the south side to Col. George Wilson; the aisle and vestry were added to the church in 1873, and the chancel was thoroughly restored in 1880. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, with 32 acres of glebe, and a tithe-rent charge of £556, in the gift of William Hartcup esq. and held, since 1881, by the Rev. John Charles Scudamore M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford: the living must be offered to a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. A cemetery of 1½ acres was formed in 1879: it is under the control of a burial board of nine members; there is a closed lych-gate, which is used as a mortuary chapel. Allhallows church, erected in 1805, as a chapel of ease, is a small building of flint, with stone dressings, in the Early English style, and has a chancel, nave and bell-turret. The House of Mercy, opened in 1850, in connection with the Church Penitentiary Association, is under the care of the sisterhood of All Hallows, and has for its object the reception of women of unchaste lives, from all parts of England; the house is a large cruciform building with a beautiful chapel in the head of the cross; it can receive 30 penitents; warden, Rev. E. P. Williams; treasurer, Sister Catherine Rotch; Miss Lavinia Cross, lady superior. All Hallows Home, founded in 1867, is an orphanage for girls of the better classes who have fallen into reduced circumstances; they are admitted at any age above

3 and under 10, with the understanding that they remain in the Home until after confirmation; the house will hold 30 orphans; respectable girls of the lower classes are also received into the Home for industrial training as domestic servants. All Hallows Country Hospital is capable of holding 20 patients, who may be admitted without restriction from any practicable distance, at a small weekly payment; incurables, convalescents and lady patients are also received at an increased charge. These institutions are under the care of the same Sisters. The poor have certain allowances; and the rent of the town lands, which are let for about £100 yearly, is applied to the various public burdens of the parish. There is a charge of £2 a year on a piece of land, which is directed to be given to the poor in bread. Here is a large silk crape manufactory belonging to Messrs. Grout and Co. of Norwich and London, in which about 300 hands are employed. The Hall, a stately mansion, stands in a beautiful park, thickly studded with fine oak and other trees, and is the property of Philip Bosard Bedingfield esq. a minor, and at present occupied by Mrs. Morrice. The Lodge, Holly Hill and Ditchingham House are handsome residences. Tindall Hall, now converted into a farmhouse, belongs to Admiral Sir George N. Broke-Middleton bart. In this parish are the manors of Pirnhow and Ditchingham, of which the Duke of Norfolk and the trustees of the Bedingfield family are respectively lords. P. B. Bedingfield esq. Admiral Sir George N. Broke-Middleton bart. and Henry Rider Haggard esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 2,077A. 0R. 32P.; rateable value, £5,381; and the population in 1831 was 1,075.

DOCKING is a parish, and station on the West Norfolk Junction railway, union town and polling place for the Western division of the county, 6 miles south-west from Burnham Market, 13 west from Wells, 12 north-west from Fakenham, 17 north-east from Lynn, and 11¼ from London, in Southdon hundred, Little Walsingham county court district, Hacham rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, and is pleasantly situated on the old road from Lynn to Wells. This place was formerly called

Dry Docking, from the great scarcity of water that prevailed here, but the deep wells now amply supply the inhabitants with excellent water of icy coldness. The church of St. Mary is a Gothic building of stone and flint, and is in good repair: it consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, organ chamber and porch, and a handsome western tower containing 1 bell: the building was re-roofed in 1875, and additions made, at a cost of over £4,000, raised by subscription: there are monuments to the Hare family; the font is large, with many carved figures much mutilated; there are 650 sittings. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a discharged vicarage, yearly value £570, with residence and about 40 acres of glebe, to which Eton College presents, on the nomination of the Bishop of Norwich, and held, since 1873, by the Rev. Hugh James Hare M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford. The great tithes are commuted at £1,114. Here are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. A Police Station was erected here in 1854, at a cost of £1,200; it is of white brick, and contains residence for superintendent, and two well ventilated cells; a sessions room was added in 1874 at the expense of the county. A Working Men's Institute was established in 1868, which is supplied with daily and weekly papers and periodicals. The common has been enclosed, four acres being reserved for recreation and four for allotments. The lord of the manor is Sir W. H. Browne folkes bart. M.P. and he and Major Humphrey John Hare J.P. Mrs. Seymour, and the trustees of John Calthrop esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is of a light sandy nature; subsoil, principally gravel or flint. The crops are wheat, barley, turnips, mangold-wurtzel and seeds. The area is 6,218 acres; rateable value, £8,102; the population in 1881 was 1,409.

Parish Clerk, Charles Goodwin.

SUMMERFIELD (anciently Southmere) is a parish  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-west from Docking, with which parish it is connected for poor-law purposes, containing upwards of 1,200 acres, which belong to Major Humphrey John Hare J.P. The foundations of the church can still be traced. The living is a sinecure rectory, annexed to Sedgeford, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and Eton College alternately, and held since 1874 by the Rev. James Ambrose Ogle M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, who resides at Sedgeford, and is rural dean of Heacham. The tithes are commuted at £350 yearly.

POST, MONEY ORDER & TELEGRAPH OFFICE & Savings Bank.—George Lee, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Lynn arrive at 7.25 a.m. & 1.30 p.m.; dispatched at 5.30 p.m. on week days; sundays at 2.40 p.m.

DOWNHAM (or DOWNHAM MARKET) is a parish, union and market town, head of a county court district, station on the East Anglian branch of the Great Eastern railway (there is also a branch line of railway from Downham to Stoke Ferry), and is a polling place for the Western division of the county, 88 miles from London, 59½ west from Norwich, 15½ north from Ely and 11 south from Lynn, in Clacklose hundred, rural deanery of Fincham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich: the town is situated on the eastern acclivity of the vale of the navigable river Ouse, over which and the neighbouring country is a fine uninterrupted view: the main streets and roads are well paved, and the town lighted with gas, and governed by a board of Improvement Commissioners of 36 members, who, under the Public Health Act, are the Urban Sanitary Authority of the district. An old wooden bridge crossing the Ouse has, through the energy of the bridge reeves, T. L. Reed and G. F. Wood esqrs. been superseded by an iron bridge with two piers of cast iron supporting the wrought iron lattice girders, and buckled iron flooring plates, at a total cost of £3,500: it was opened on the 9th of February, 1879: the engineer was Mr. David Oldfield C.E. The church of St. Edmund is an ancient pile, built in the Norman era, re-built and altered in the Early English period, and again altered extensively in each succeeding period, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, having at the western end a low square embattled tower, built of carr or rag stone, with buttresses and quoins of freestone, containing a good peal of 8 bells: in 1855 it underwent considerable repairs, at a cost of £700; since then other repairs have been carried out, a large number of sittings added, a handsome shaft for the curious old font, designed and executed by Mr. Lawrie, of this town, the plaster removed from the whole of the outside, and the walls pointed, and the belfry windows in the tower restored: a handsome memorial window of three lights has been placed at the east end of the Lady chapel by the Oakes family, of this town, in memory of their parents; the centre light has the figure of Our Saviour, in the character of the Good Shepherd, under rich canopy work, beautifully executed; the side lights, a handsome border with rich bosses, medallions, rosettes and diagonal texts of Scripture, set upon a ground of flowered quarry work, each quarry or diamond having elaborate ornaments traced thereon, and partially stained a gold colour; the effect of the whole is exceedingly good: a stained window was placed on the south side in the Lady chapel in memory of Miss Oakes, subject the Raising of Jairus' daughter; and in 1882 two more (the bequest of Mr. James Oakes, a native of this parish, who died at Madras, September 29th, 1875) were placed in the chancel, the one on the south side representing Our Saviour during His Agony in the garden of Gethsemane, and on the north side His first appearing to Mary Magdalene after His Resurrection; the last three windows are the work of Messrs. Meyer & Co. of Munich: in 1873, while building the new organ chamber, an original Norman window in situ was discovered, built up in the wall behind the chancel arch, on the north side: the large east window of five lights was placed by J. Wortley esq. of Skepton, in memory of his wife's family: in 1875 a handsome Perpendicular stained window was given by Mr. G. W. Mills, of this town, in memory of his wife, the stonework designed and executed by W. Lawrie: in 1876, while certain repairs were going on, advantage was taken to add and restore some decorations mentioned in the history of the county, which were all lost to the church, viz.:—the arms of the ancient family of the Lords Bardolph, those of Ramsey Abbey while those of Canterbury and Norwich have been added, with emblems, monograms &c. and the arms of the present lord of the manor, Thomas Leigh Hare, executed by W. Lawrie. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a discharged rectory, gross yearly value £564, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Edward Robert Franks B.A. and held since 1882 by the Rev. Arthur Simon Latter M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford; the tithes are commuted at £513 yearly, with nearly 20 acres of glebe land. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Baptists, Particular Baptists and Primitive Methodists, and the Society of Friends have a meeting-house. Mount Tabor chapel, Bridge street, erected in 1859, by public subscription, for the United Methodist Free Church, has an imposing appearance, the front having four large pillars with moulded caps and cornice: it seats about 260 persons: the school-room is at the back of the chapel. The Wesleyan chapel, in Lynn road, is an extensive edifice: in 1864 it was re-roofed, thoroughly repaired, two vestries built and the school-room enlarged, and in 1876 a new organ loft added. Zion chapel situated in Parson's lane was rebuilt in 1874. A Cemetery, with two mortuary chapels, was formed in 1856, at a cost of about £1,600, and comprises an area of two acres. There are charities of about £86 yearly value, for distribution in fuel and clothing and provisions, viz.: £66, being the proportion of Hundred Acres charity, producing about £200 yearly, and equally divisible between the parishes of Wimbotsam, Stow and Downham, and about £20, Batchcroft charity, from rent of land; an estate for keeping the church in repair, and another for the maintenance of the bridge over the river Ouse. The Literary Institute and Stanley Library, established in 1865, is founded on the remains of the Mechanics' Institute, dissolved in December, 1865, and provides in the reading-room most of the daily and weekly London papers; the weekly local papers and the principal periodicals are also taken: the library, an extensive and carefully selected one, was established from a nucleus of £50, given by the Earl of Derby, when member for King's Lynn, and supplemented by subscriptions: the members number between 80 and 90: the subscription is merely nominal. The Market place is a spacious square: the market is held every Friday. Three large fairs for horses and cattle are held yearly, on March 3rd, first Friday in May and the 2nd Friday in November; and hirings for servants are held on the Saturday fortnight before and the Saturday after Old Michaelmas Day. The Downham Market Company Limited was formed in 1856. In the market square stands a beautiful Gothic clock tower, presented to the town by James Scott esq. 1878: the shaft and lower portion is octagonal up to the dials, when the work becomes rectangular, presenting four illuminated dials, enriched with perforations filled with ruby glass: the roof has open Gothic tracery, and is surmounted by a weather vane: the clock is made to automatically turn the gas off and on at the proper time for illuminating the dials: the bell is by Warner & Son: the whole was designed and carried out by William Cunliffe, of Forest Hill and London. The Police Station has rooms for the use of superintendent and two constables, besides cells. There are two large brick yards, where a superior class of white bricks and pantiles are made. There are some extensive steam flour mills, a brass foundry and two breweries. The town is famed for its American nurseries, near the railway station, of several acres in extent, well stocked with evergreen and ornamental trees and shrubs: the inhabitants, through the kindness of the proprietor, Mr. James Bird, are allowed to make this place a promenade during the summer months. In the town are several good hotels and inns: the Crown hotel and inland revenue office, in the Market place, and the Castle hotel, High street, are old established houses, replete with every convenience. Thomas Leigh Hare and Edward R. M. Pratt esquires, who are the lords of the several manors, J. Wortley esq. Mr. Robert Haylett sen. Mr. Edward Hyde, and the trustees of the late Joseph Kemp, are the chief land-owners. The area is 2,490 acres, of which 853 acres are in the Improvement Commissioners' district; rateable value, £10,759; the population in 1881 was 3,264, of which 1,286 are in the Improvement Commissioners' district.

DRAYTON is a compact and pleasant village and station on the Eastern and Midlands line of railway, in the vale of the river Wensum, about 5 miles north-west from Norwich station on the Great Eastern line, 117½ from London, in the Southern division of the county, Taverham hundred, union of St. Faith, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Taverham and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, on the road from Norwich to Fakenham. The church of St. Margaret is a flint building in the Transition Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave, square modern tower, and a porch on the south side: the nave was restored and the chancel rebuilt in 1866 and subsequently ornamented, an east window, representing the Ascension, being presented in 1872 by a friend. The registers date from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, consolidated with Hellesdon, joint yearly rent-charge £700, with 52 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1855 by the Rev. Hinds Howell M.A. of Merton College, Oxford, proctor for the archdeacons of Norwich and Norfolk, rural dean of Taverham and honorary canon of Norwich. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. There are 50 acres of land belonging to the poor, and 3 acres, the rent of which is received by the churchwardens and spent for the repair of the church. Here is a field, called Bloodsdale, and there are the remains, restored in 1879, by the rector, of an ancient cross where tradition says a great battle was fought. Old Drayton Lodge is the ruin of a hunting lodge belonging to R. Fitch esq. situated on an acclivity half a mile south-west of the church, near the residence of Frederick A. Magnay esq. The Bishop of Norwich and F. Micklethwait esq. are lords of the manor. Mrs. Bradshaw, J. J. Winter, F. A. Magnay and Samuel Bunn esqs. are the principal landowners. The soil is sandy; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and turnips. The area is 1,322 acres. rateable value, £2,019; and the population in 1881 was 408; Deputy Parish Clerk, John Suter.

ECCLES-BY-THE-SEA is a parish and village 19 miles from Yarmouth, 9 east from North Walsham and 3 north-east from Stalham (on the Eastern and Midlands railway) which is the nearest station, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Happing, Smallburgh union, North Walsham county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich; it is united for parochial purposes with Hempstead. The church, which was dedicated to St. Mary, was destroyed by the sea before 1605, except the tower, which is still standing, but encompassed by the sands: in that year the inhabitants petitioned that their taxes might be moderated on account of this. The living is a sinecure rectory, yearly value £75, in the gift of the Rev. Henry Evans Lombe B.A.,

J.P. of Bylaugh Park, and held by the Rev. John Francis Osborne, who resides at Norwich. This was once a fishing town of some importance. The land came into the possession of the Lombe family in 1668: the Rev. Henry Evans Lombe J.P. of Bylaugh park, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is good mixed; subsoil, sand, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is now 297 acres, having been reduced from 2,000 by the encroachments of the sea; rateable value is given with Hempstead; and the population in 1881 was 18.

The church of SS. Peter and Paul has, with the exception of the tower and south porch, been pulled down and re-built in a central part of the parish: it is a large building, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, north and south porches, the east end of the south aisle is separated by an old carved screen: towards defraying the expense £1,800 has been raised by private donations: a tower and vestries are eventually to be added. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, yearly value £574 7s. 9d. with residence and 17A. of glebe, in the gift of trustees of the late Col. Marcon and held since 1876 by the Rev. Walter Hubert Marcon M.A. of St. Alban Hall, Oxford. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. There are charities, called the Poor's Fuel Allotment, of 50 acres of land, the rent of which is expended annually in coal; also £2 10s. left by Simon Woodrow—10s. for beautifying the church, and £2 to be expended among five poor widows. Here is also a clothing club, children's penny bank, reading room, circulating parish library and children's periodicals. The trustees of the late Col. J. Marcon and George Edward Frere esq. are lords of the manors of Edgefield with Ellingham and Edgefield Bacon. The principal landowners are trustees of the late Col. John Marcon, G. E. Frere esq. Constance Marchioness of Lothian and Mrs. Ballachey. The soil is light mixed; subsoil, grave and sand. The chief crops are wheat, turnips, barley and grass. The area is 2,435 acres; rateable value, £3,112 5s 3d.; and the population in 1881 was 479.

LITTLE ELLINGHAM is a village and parish, 5 miles north-west from Attleborough station, in the Western division of the county, Wayland hundred and union, Attleborough county court district, rural deanery of Breccles and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter is a small flint building, consisting of chancel and nave: the nave was destroyed and the chancel considerably injured by fire on Sunday, December 1st, 1867: the nave has since been rebuilt by subscription, and the chancel repaired, in accordance with the original design, at the expense of the rector. The register dates from the year 1649. The living is a rectory, with house, with the vicarage of Great Ellingham annexed, joint yearly value £735, in the gift of R. Berridge esq. and held since 1872 by the Rev. Samuel William Turner B.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. Here is a small Primitive Methodist chapel. The poor's allotment

ELMHAM (or NORTH ELMHAM) is a village, station on the Great Eastern railway, and parish, 5 miles north from East Dereham and 111 from London, in the Western division of the county, Launditch hundred, Mitford and Launditch union, East Dereham county court district, rural deanery of Brisley and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. A railway has been constructed from Wroxham, which terminates at BROOME GREEN, in this parish. Elmham was anciently a city and the seat of the bishops of the diocese from 673 to 1075: the church of St. Mary the Virgin is a large building of flint with stone dressings, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel with side chapels, nave, aisles, porch and square tower containing 8 bells: there are two marble monuments in the chancel to Richard Warner and Richard Miles esqrs. ancestors of the present Earl Sodes, the former of whom was lord of the manor, and built Elmham Hall; he died in 1757: the church was thoroughly restored in 1882 at the cost principally of the present vicar: the original carved pulpit of 1626 has been replaced, the chancel furnished with oak stalls, beautifully carved, and the church has been re-seated with carved oak benches: there is also a beautiful stained window at the east end, a memorial to the 4th Baron Sodes, subscribed by the county of Norfolk: the side chapels are separated from the chancel by oak screens with delicate carving: the old screen was, during the restoration, discovered lying face to the earth, serving as the floor of several pews; this has been replaced in its original position: this church was for four centuries the cathedral of the diocese. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £463, with residence and 8 acres of glebe, in the gift of Earl Sodes and held since 1867 by the Rev. Augustus George Legge M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. There are church lands of 80 acres, let at £89 yearly. The Norfolk County School is situated about 2 miles from Elmham station, on the summit of a hill near the river Wensum, standing in 57 acres of land in this and Blinty parishes: the foundation stone was laid on Easter Monday, 1873, by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the school was opened in 1874: it is a handsome range of building, in the Domestic Gothic style, consisting of great central hall, a school-room, dining hall (each being 80 feet by 40), library, class rooms and dormitories, having the head master's residence so situated as to have direct communication with all parts of the school: it of 40 acres produces £19 yearly; the town lands of 25 acres produce £13. Ellingham Hall, the seat of Thomas Johnson esq. is a handsome modern erection, standing in park-like grounds. The principal landowners are Major Colgrave, who is lord of the manor, John Cottenham Tingey esq. John Harman esq. and the Rev. William Norton. The soil is clayey loam; subsoil, clay and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,540 acres; rateable value, £2,338 10s.; and the population in 1881 was 318.

is owned by a limited liability association (capital £15,000), and is conducted on the public school system: the educational staff comprises:—the head master, second master and 6 assistants: pupils may be admitted after the age of 8 years: the Prince of Wales has marked his wish to be permanently considered a founder and benefactor by presenting £250 for annual scholarships: a scholarship of £10 yearly value has been founded as a memorial of the late Mr. Robert Overman, of Egnere, and there are seventeen other scholarships and numerous endowed prizes: the school is a centre for the Cambridge local examinations. A chapel for the use of the scholars has been erected in connection with the school. Here are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. There is a fuel allotment of 50 acres, let at £30 yearly, and charities of £9 yearly value for distribution. In the reign of Richard II. Bishop Spencer obtained a license to embattle his manor house at Elmham: some traces of the foundation and intrenchments may still be seen. In a part of the parish called Broom Close it is supposed there was a Roman station, a great number of urns, coins and other Roman antiquities having been found there. Elmham Hall, the seat of Earl Sodes, but now 1883, occupied by Gilbert McMicking esq. was built in 1727: it is a red brick mansion, and stands in a park of 300 acres, well timbered with oak, and containing a small lake: the plantations are well stocked with game and the park contains a herd of fallow deer: the estate has acquired considerable reputation for its herd of Norfolk red polled cattle, which have been kept on it for a great many years, and are still to be seen there. The parish is in two manors—viz. Elmham Nawers and North Elmham; Earl Sodes is the lord of the former and the Dean and Chapter of Norwich are lords of the latter. The Earl of Leicester owns 479 acres and Caius College, Cambridge, about 110 acres; nearly all the remainder is the property of Earl Sodes. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and hay. The area is 4,631 acres; rateable value, £7,446; and the population in 1881 was 1,090.

ELSING is a straggling village and parish on the south side of the river Wensum,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles east-north-east from East Dereham station, in the Northern division of the county, Eynsford hundred, Mitford and Launditch union, East Dereham county court district, rural deanery of Sparham and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church, of which the dedication is uncertain, is a fine flint building of the Decorated period, consisting of chancel, nave, sacristy, north and south porches, and a square tower containing 5 bells: in the chancel is a mutilated brass, in memory of Sir Hugh de Hastings, founder of the church: in the nave, which is of unusual width, stands an octagonal font, also of the Decorated period, of very good design; its canopy, once of rare beauty, is somewhat later in date than the font, with central spire, supported on traceried panels and pinnaced buttresses, the panels bearing traces of a diaper of birds, raised and gilt, and for beauty of design it ranks with that of Ufford church, Suffolk: considerable remains of a rich screen exist: the church was restored in 1876. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value £330, with residence and 17 acres of glebe, in the gift of R. C. Browne esq. and held since 1852 by the Rev. Julius John Culpeper Valpy B.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. Here is a chapel for Primitive Methodists. The church lands of 24 acres produce £30 yearly. Charities of £10 yearly value are for bread and clothing. Richard Charles Browne esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor, and the Rev. H. E. Lombe B.A., J.P. of Bylaugh Park, are the principal landowners; the former resides at Elsing Hall, a very fine and interesting moated mansion, of late Perpendicular style, the north front of rubble and freestone and the south front is a specimen of half timbered work: the entrance hall, with its porch and the chapel, are the principal ancient features: the windows of the remaining portion have been restored: it bears the arms of Lord Foliot. The soil is mixed; subsoil, mixed. The principal crops are barley and wheat. The area is 1,511 acres; rateable value, £2,317; in 1881 the population was 388.

The church of St. Edmund is an old building, in the Early English and Norman styles, comprising a chancel, nave with aisles, and large square western tower containing 5 bells; the chancel has been rebuilt, and the interior was restored in 1866. The register dates from the year 1586. The living is a vicarage, nett yearly value about £300, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely and held since 1868 by the Rev. Edward Henry Lovelock M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists and Reformers have chapels here, all erected in 1854. Inglethorpe Hall is the seat of Frederic Morehouse Metcalfe esq. J.P. who is lord of the manors of Hagbech and Inglethorpe. The principal landowners are Edward William Trafford esq. Frederic Morehouse Metcalfe esq. J.P.

Algernon and Alexander Peckover and Thomas Dearlove Dearlove esqrs. The soil is loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat and market garden produce; there is also much pasture ground. The area is 3,449 acres; rateable value, £6,668; the population in 1881 was 1,001.

ERPINGHAM is a parish and village (from whence the name of this and adjoining hundred was derived),  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles north from Aylsham station on the East Norfolk branch of the Great Eastern railway, and 7 west from North Walsham, in the Northern division of the county, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary, in the Early English style, is a noble pile of stone and flint, and consists of a chancel, nave and south aisle, with square tower containing 4 bells: it was re-roofed in 1842, at the expense of the parishioners, and was re-pewed at the cost of the late Dowager Lady Suffield. An organ was added in 1879. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, yearly value £478, commuted tithe rent-charge, and consolidated with Bickling, joint yearly value £918, in the gift of Constance Marchioness of Lothian, and held by the Rev. Frederick Meyrick M.A. late Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford, examining chaplain to the Bishop of Lincoln and Prebendary of Lincoln Cathedral. The Rev. Theodore Johnson is curate in charge here. There is a chapel for the Primitive Methodists. Part of the parish is in the Earl of Orford's manor; the remainder was formerly held by a family of its own name, one of whom was Sir Thomas Erpingham K.G. a chivalrous knight who accompanied John, Duke of Lancaster, throughout the Spanish wars of 1399, and those of Henry IV. and V. and is frequently mentioned by Shakespeare in Henry V. as being one of the English leaders at Agincourt; he was also a large benefactor to Norwich, where he caused the cathedral gate to be erected upon which his name is inscribed. The principal landowners are Constance Marchioness of Lothian, who is also lady of the manor, the Rev. George Fish, the Rev. S. M. Shephard and Robert Ives esq. J.P.; there are a number of smaller holders. The soil is loam; subsoil, red sand. The chief crops are wheat, oats and hay. The area is 1,370A 1r. 26p.; rateable value, £2,605; the population in 188 was 362.

FAKENHAM (otherwise FAKENHAM-LANCASTER) is a parish, small well-built market town, with two stations, one on the Wymondham and Wells branch of the Great Eastern railway, the other on the Eastern and Midlands line, and is a polling-place for the Western division of the county, distant 139 miles by rail from London,  $12\frac{1}{2}$  north from East Dereham,  $33\frac{1}{2}$  north-west from Norwich,  $38\frac{1}{2}$  north-east from Lynn and 16 north from Swaffham, in Gallow hundred, Walsingham union and county court district, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The town is pleasantly situated on a declivity north of the river Wensum, and contains many good houses and shops, and is surrounded by a rich and fertile district. The Wensum is here crossed by a brick bridge of three arches, built in 1833. The Lynn and Fakenham Railway Company, incorporated July 13th, 1876, which constructed a line between Fakenham and King's Lynn, is now merged in the Eastern and Midlands Railway Company. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a handsome structure, chiefly in the Decorated style, consisting of a chancel, nave with aisles, and a lofty embattled tower of the Perpendicular period containing 8 musical bells: over the western doorway is a large six-light window; on each side is a canopied niche, and above are symbols representing the dedication of the church to SS. Peter and Paul, and the initial letters of the Duchy of Lancaster: the sedilia are fine transitions from Decorated to Perpendicular: the font is octagonal, of the Perpendicular period, adorned with emblems representing the Four Evangelists, The Trinity and the Passion:

in 1864 the church was thoroughly restored by subscription the unsightly galleries removed, and the nave and aisles re-roofed and re-seated with open seats: the rector restored the chancel, furnished it with new oak stalls, re-glazed the windows with cathedral glass with enriched borders, and erected a carved reredos of Caen stone. The register dates from the year 1720. The living is a rectory, with Alethorp annexed, tithe rent-charge from Fakenham £760, and from Alethorp £60 10s. 9d. besides 80 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Master and fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge and held since 1855 by the Rev. Michael Angelo Atkinson M.A. formerly fellow and tutor of that college. Here are Baptist, Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan Methodist chapels. The Cemetery is situated on an eminence in the northern suburbs of the town, and contains a mortuary chapel: it is 4 acres in extent, and is under the control of a Burial Board of nine members. A nurses' home, for supplying trained nurses for sick and indigent persons, is due to and under the superintendence of Mrs. Robert Hamond. Miss Ann Harrison bequeathed, in 1794, the sum of £1,666 13s. 4d. in the £3 per Cent. Consols, to which the late Mr. Peckover, banker, added £333 6s. 8d. producing together £60 annually, this amount to be distributed in blankets, wearing apparel, coals and education, agreeable to the will of the former. Lady Townshend's charity now produces £24 yearly to bind apprentices, a boy and girl alternately each year, by course for ever. Shelurake's charity produces £13 yearly, and Salmon's charity, of acres, produces £5 a year. Wortley's charity gives £1 year, and is paid by Caius College, Cambridge. The Corn Hall, situated in the Market place, is a handsome brick building with stone dressings, erected in 1855, at a cost of £3,000, raised in shares: it contains a spacious corn exchange, assembly rooms, and a library of 6,000 volumes. The cattle market was formed in 1857, and is situated a little east of Bridge street. The market for corn and cattle is on Thursday, and is well supplied. A weekly cattle sale for stock is held in the market by Messrs. Beck and Long. Two fairs, on Whit-Tuesday and November 22nd, principally for cattle, are held on Hempton Green, about one-third of a mile from the town. There are three banks. The Free Library, formerly in Bridge street, has been removed to the Boys' National School. Here is a brewery, and there are some maltings, and an extensive flour mill on the Wensum. Among the provident institutions of the town are several Friendly Societies and two Lodges of Foresters, both held at the Bell inn, and one of Odd Fellows, of the Manchester Unity, held at the King's Head inn, Hempton. Sir Willoughby Jones bart. of Cranmer Hall, is lord of the manor, and courts leet and haron are held annually. The chief landed proprietors are Lord Hastings, the Rev. James Lee-Warner, of Thorpland Hall, Henry James Lee-Warner esq. of Walsingham Abbey, and George Watson esq. The area is 2,140a. 3r. 28p.; rateable value, £12,052; and the population in 1881 was 2,756 of the parish.

Parish Clerk, John William Smith.

FELBRIGG is a parish about 3 miles south-west from Cromer railway station, and 10 north-west from North Walsham station, in the Northern division of the county, North Erpingham hundred, Erpingham union, Holt county court district, rural deanery of Repps, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Margaret is a handsome building of flint with stone dressings, in the Decorated and Later English styles, consisting of chancel, and nave, with a square embattled tower: it is picturesque situated in the park and contains numerous monuments to the Felbrigg and Wyndham families, of which one, beautifully executed by Nollekens, is to the Right Hon. William Wyndham, a distinguished statesman, who died in 1810: on a large marble slab in the nave is a fine sepulchral brass, representing the figure, in complete armour, of Sir Simon de Felbrigge, who lived in the reign of Henry VI. and was one of the early Knights of the Garter. The register dates from the year 1700. The living is a rectory, with that of Metton annexed, joint yearly value £310 with 76 acres of glebe, in the gift of Robert William Ketton esq. and held since 1872, by the Rev. Robert James Simpson M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, who resides at Metton. The Hall, the seat of Robert William Ketton esq. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner, stands on a commanding height in a well-wooded park of 700 acres: it is a spacious and handsome mansion in the Early Tudor style. The soil is a rich loam, with a subsoil of red sand. The chief crops are wheat, oats and hay. The area is 1,557 acres; rateable value, £1,754; the population in 1881 was 165.

Letters through Norwich. Cromer is the nearest money order & telegraph office
 This parish is included in the Aylmerton United School Board district, formed in 1874, & the children attend at Aylmerton.

FELMINGHAM is a parish with station on the Eastern and Midlands railway from Yarmouth to Lynn, 2½ miles west-south-west from North Walsham, 5 east from Aylsham, and 13 from Norwich, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Tunstead, union of Smallburgh, North Walsham county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew has nave and a Perpendicular tower of flint, containing a peal of 6 bells, and supported by buttresses. The register dates from the year 1754. There are two benefices in this parish, a vicarage endowed with three-fourths of the vicarial tithes, yearly value £165, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich; held since 1881 by the Rev. John Wm. Cobb B.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge, as vicar, and a rectory endowed with one-fourth of the vicarial, together with one-fourth of the rectorial tithe, yearly value £185, in the gift of Mrs. William Postle, of Smallburgh Hall; the Rev. John Postle B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, has been the rector since 1852, and resides at Burgh: the remaining three-fourths of the rectorial tithes are in the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. In 1844 some Roman antiquities were found here. Felmingham Hall is the property of Mrs. Postle, of Smallburgh Hall, but is in the occupation of William Seaman Postle esq. Mrs. Postle of Smallburgh Hall, is lady of Felmingham Hall manor, and Lord Suffield of Rugge's Hall manor. The principal landowners are Lord Suffield, Frederick Hylton esq. William Postle esq. and William Primrose esq. The soil is loamy; subsoil, sand and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,816 acres; rateable value, £3,020; the population in 1881 was 305.

FELTHORPE is a parish and widely scattered village, 7 miles north-north-west from Norwich and 5 miles from Cawston station on the Great Eastern railway, in the Southern division of the county, Taverham hundred, St. Faith's union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Taverham and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Margaret is a structure of flint, and has been enlarged and partly rebuilt, and was thoroughly restored in 1878: it has chancel, nave, aisles, north porch, a square tower containing 1 bell, with some stained glass: the interior is plain: a chancel window has been inserted by Major Bouchier, in memory of his brother Col. Claude T. Bouchier: stained windows have also been recently inserted in the nave representing the miracles of Our Lord, and the floor re-paved, at the sole expense of the same gentleman. The register dates from the year 1715. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted at £274 4s. with 23 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1877 by the Rev. George Downing Dewé M.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. Brereton's charity of £42 yearly, is applied in payments to almswomen, the poor, and in repairs of church. The fuel allotment of 46 acres produces £10 yearly. Felthorpe Hall, the residence of Major James J. Bouchier J.P. is a short distance north of the Norwich road, surrounded by thriving plantations. There are four manors, three belonging to Lord Stafford, the Bishop of Norwich and E. Fellowes esq. lord of the manor of Russells, and the Rectory manor. E. Fellowes esq. and Samuel G. Buxton esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is sandy; subsoil, sand. The chief crops are wheat, roots, barley and hay. The area is 2,237A. 3R. 18P.; rateable value, £1,564; the population in 1881 was 463.

FELTWELL is a parish and large village 3 miles north from Lakenheath station, and 6 north-west from Brandon, in the Western division of the county, Grimsloe hundred, Thetford union and county court district, rural deanery of Cranwich, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The parishes of St. Mary and St. Nicholas are now united. St. Mary's church, in the Decorated style, is a beautiful edifice, consisting of chancel, nave and north aisle and tower, which is superbly wrought in stone, with various figures in sculpture surrounding the copings: the nave is divided from the chancel by a handsome carved oak screen, the chancel and east windows of the north aisle are stained: in the chancel is a piscina: the interior is light, and contains many ancient monuments: here are two brasses in the wall, representing Margaret Moundeford and Francis Hethe, of Mildenhall; also effigies of Francis and Osbert Moundeford, and the two wives of the former, dated in the sixteenth century: here are several brasses of the Newcome family: with the consent and approval of the Bishop of Norwich, this church has been considerably enlarged, and the northern arcade rebuilt, for the use of the inhabitants of the two parishes, at the sole expense of the late Rev. E. B. Sparke. St. Nicholas church is a much smaller and plainer structure, very ancient, except the upper part, which has been rebuilt with flint, and has a small round tower: it stands on a slight acclivity in the western angle of the village, and is used as a mortuary chapel only. The register book is dated, on the cover, A.D. 1559, but the first entry is in the year 1562; the first two leaves have evidently been removed many years. The living is a rectory, yearly value £1,296, with residence, in the alternate gift of the Lord Chancellor and the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1879 by the Rev. Henry Thomas O'Rorke M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. There is a chapel for Wesleyans and one for Primitive Methodists. The Moundeford charity of £486 yearly, subject to deductions for drainage rates, is derived from 612 acres of land; £255 is applied to the school, £180 in support of almshouses, and £50 distributed in clothing: there are about 70 boys who are educated free: the schools and master's residence were built at the expense of the Moundeford Charity Trust: the residence of the schoolmistress was built by subscription. There are eight almshouses, bearing the date of their endowment in 1642, by Sir Edward Moundeford, and also that of their re-erection by the parish in 1819, and there are many minor charities distributed to the poor, bequeathed by the families of Clough, Rawlins and Atmore. 360 acres of fen are called the Poor's Common, on which all the inhabitants of the township legally settled therein, not occupying lands or tenements of more than the yearly value of £10, may cut fuel under the direction of the lords of the manor, rector, churchwardens and overseers, who were appointed trustees for the management of the common by the Enclosure Act, dated 1813. At the east-end approach to the village is an ancient oak tree, of immense size, in the centre of the road, with a mound or green plot about four feet from the stem, with an iron railing for its preservation. Feltwell Lodge is a large brick building, situate in park-like grounds: it is now (1883) unoccupied. The Hall, the seat of Mrs. Newcome, is a modern brick building. East Hall, the seat of Mrs. Edward Sparke, is a fine mansion of brick, in the Elizabethan style. The Rev. William Cyril Newcome is lord of the chief or capital manor; Mrs. Newcome, lady of the manor of South Hall; the representatives of the late Rev. Edward Bowyer Sparke are lords of the manor of Wendlings, Spinwills and Duntons; and the Master and fellows of Christ's college, Cambridge, lords of the manor of East Hall; the above are the principal landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, chalk and sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley oats and turnips. The area is 13,120 acres, one half of which is fen; rateable value, £12,329 10s.; and the population in 1881 was 1,633.

FILBY is a parish 2½ miles south-west from Ormesby station of the Yarmouth and North Norfolk railway, about 6 miles north-west from Yarmouth and 17 north-east from Norwich, in the Northern division of the county, incorporated hundreds of East and West Flegg, county court district of Great Yarmouth, rural deanery of Flegg and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The name, like many of those in the Flegg district ending in "by," is of Scandinavian origin. Filby was given by William the Conqueror to Rabell, the engineering officer who had charge of the balistæ and other military engines. The church of All Saints, a structure of stone, which stands on a height overlooking the lake, has been restored, and consists of chancel, nave and south aisle, and lofty embattled Gothic tower of fine proportions with 5 bells, and contains five stained windows: it contains several monuments to the Lucas the eighteenth century, and afterwards reprinted by Mr. William Miller, of London, in eleven large volumes. Algar House is the seat of Miss Mortimer and is pleasantly situated. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is heavy; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,386 acres; rateable value, £1,935; and the population in 1881 was 283.

family, one of which, to Charles Lucas, esq. by Herrman, of Dresden, is a fine piece of sculpture: there is also the lower portion of a panelled oak screen in 1873 the church was restored, but the original thatched roof retained. The register dates from the year 1599. The living is a rectory, yearly value £505, in the gift of and held since 1848 by the Rev. Charles Lucas M.A. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The Primitive Methodists and Unitarians have places of worship here; the latter was built and endowed by Henry Dattel, in the beginning of the eighteenth century, as a Presbyterian chapel. The fuel allotment of 10 acres produces £27 yearly. This parish is famous for its excellent growth of raspberries, many hundred pounds' worth being sent to London and other towns during the season. Filby House is a mansion of white brick, the family seat of the Rev. Charles Lucas M.A., J.P. the rector, who is also the lord of the manor and chief landowner: this manor was anciently held by a family of its own name. The soil is mixed; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,425 acres, of which about 100 are plantations and 160 are occupied by a lake, forming a portion of the system of broads in the neighbourhood; rateable value, £3,153; the population in 1881 was 578.

FINCHAM is a parish and village 5 miles north-east from Downham Market, on the road to Swaffham, in the Western division of the county, Clackclose hundred, Downham union and county court district, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich: it gives name also to the rural deanery of Fincham, co-extensive with the hundred of Clackclose, and comprising 34 parishes. The church of St. Martin is a large and handsome building in the Perpendicular style, with traces of an earlier building, having chancel, nave, aisles, a lofty square tower, with quoins of freestone and battlements and a good peal of 6 bells; the ancient Norman font has a basin 2 feet 7 inches square, and is ornamented with figures representing The Fall of Man, The Offerings of the Magi, and The Birth and Baptism of the Saviour, but some of the devices are much defaced: the church has been restored and extensively repaired during the present incumbency, and several beautiful stained windows introduced: the churchyard was enlarged in 1864, by a gift of land from Mr. Hebgin, the impropricator of part of the tithes, and in 1870 the chancel was restored by Miss Hebgin: the old church of St. Michael was taken down in 1745. The register dates from the year 1541. The living is a rectory; the tithes are commuted at £690 yearly to the rector, and £325 to Miss Hebgin, the impropricator of one moiety of the rectorial tithes: there are 30 acres of glebe land; it is in the alternate gift of the Lord Chancellor and the present rector, the Rev. William Blyth M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge, rural dean, and a surrogate in the archdeaconry of Norfolk, author of "Historical Notices of Fincham," who has held the rectory since 1846. The rectory house was built in 1624, and has been often repaired and enlarged, but its original style of architecture has been preserved. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There are about 54 acres of land, producing an average rental of £40 yearly, allotted to the poor and distributed yearly in money; the poor have also a yearly rent-charge of 9s. 4d. left, it is supposed, by the Rev. Thomas Bodham, and the interest of £23 given by unknown donors. Fincham Hall, built about the reign of Edward IV. was formerly the seat of the Finchams, and though frequently repaired and modernised, some portions retain their ancient character, exhibiting specimens of the Tudor style of architecture: it is at present in the occupation of John B. Aylmer esq. Thomas Leigh Hare esq. is lord of the manor of Fincham Hall and other manors in this parish, and the trustees of Mr. Calthrop are lords of Fairswell-in-Fincham. The principal landowners are Thomas Leigh Hare esq. John B. Aylmer esq. The Hall, the Misses Aylmer, Miss Hebgin, Mr. John Brigham Barsham and Thomas Cosser M.D. The soil is chalk and rich alluvial; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley &c. The area is 2,968 acres; rateable value, £5,211; the population in 1881 was 787.

FORNCETT ST. PETER is a village and parish, with station, one mile north-east from the village, on the Great Eastern railway, 103 miles from London and 8 north from Diss, in the Southern division of the county, Depwade hundred and union, county court district of Wymondham, rural deanery of Depwade, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter is a small edifice of flint with stone dressings, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and north porch, with a fine Saxon round embattled tower containing 5 bells, and has been completely restored; it contains a curious alabaster tomb supposed to be that of the founder of the church, and probably dating from the 15th century; also some sepulchral brasses to the Baxter family dated 1484 and 1535; the original oak benches are also remarkable, the beautifully carved poppy heads of which are rich specimens of 15th century wood carving; there are two memorial stained windows in the chancel, one to the Rev. Joseph Bell, formerly curate of this parish, the other to Phoebe, wife of John Furness esq. solicitor. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a rectory, tithe rent charge £587, with 47 acres of glebe and house, in the gift of the Earl of Effingham and held since 1847 by the Rev. William Greive, Wilson M.A. late fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, J.P. for Norfolk. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Sir R. J. Harvey's charity of 30s. yearly is for poor widows. This is the head manor of the honor, liberty, or jurisdiction of the Duke of Norfolk in this county, which included 4 hundreds and 127 parishes. The Duke has disposed of several of the sub-manors. William Henry Cole esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Sir F. G. M. Boileau bart. Sir Charles Harvey bart. Rev. Dr. Jex-Blake, John Furness esq. Mr. Thomas Palmer and Miss Bradshaw. The soil is clay and good mixed soil; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 1,830 acres; rateable value, £3,302; in 1881 the population was 616.

FOULDEN is a parish and scattered village, separated from Northwold by the river Wissey, about 7½ miles south-west from Swaffham railway station, and 8 north from Brandon station, in the Western division of the county, South Greenhoe hundred, Swaffham union and county court district, Cranwich rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and Norwich diocese. The church of All Saints, at the western part of the village, which has been a noble building, is in the Early English style and consists of chancel and nave; the tower has long been a ruin, and there now only remains one side of it, with a portion of the old circular stone staircase which led to the belfry: this is in great part overhanged with ivy: the nave, which is used for divine service, is in good repair, and seems to be of the same age as the tower, but the chancel is less ancient. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a discharged vicarage, annexed to the rectory of Oxborough, gross joint yearly value £720 with house, in the gift of Caius College, Cambridge, and held since 1848 by the Rev. Alexander Thurtell M.A. formerly fellow and tutor of that college, who resides at Oxborough. There is a Wesleyan Methodist and Primitive Methodist chapels. There are charities of about £22 10s. a year for clothing, and there are about 300 acres of land, still unenclosed. W. Amhurst Tysen Amhurst esq. M.P., J.P. is lord of the manor, and E. Oldfield esq. is the chief landowner. The soil is light and clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 2,395 acres; rateable value, £3,273; and the population in 1881 was 459.

FOULSHAM is a parish and small well-built market town with a station on the East Norfolk branch of the Great Eastern railway, about 5 miles north-east from Elnham and 12 west from Aylsham, in the Northern division of the county, Eynsford hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Sparham, and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of the Holy Innocents is a large and handsome flint structure, in the Perpendicular style, having a chancel, nave, and aisles, transept, south porch, and fine Perpendicular square tower with 2 bells at the west end of the nave: it was originally built about the year 1489 by one of the Lords Morley, but partly rebuilt in the year 1770, after a fire which destroyed a number of houses and reduced the church to a ruin: in the chancel is a monument to Sir Thomas Hunt knt, who died in 1616, represented in armour, with his three wives kneeling behind him: also one to the Rev. Thomas Astley LL.B. formerly rector of this parish. The register dates from the year 1708. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted at £780, with residence and 22 acres of glebe, in the gift of Lord Hastings and held since 1876 by the Rev. Charles Henry Frost M.A. of Merton College, Oxford: The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. The charities are of the yearly value of £87 11s. 6d. There is a fire brigade. The market has been discontinued many years, but a cattle and pleasure fair is still held on the first Tuesday in May. Lord Hastings is lord of the manor and chief landed proprietor; Robert J. W. Purdy esq. of Aylsham, Charles M. Tatlam esq. the Rev. H. Evans Lombe B.A. of Bylaugh Park, William Skinner Philippo esq. of Wood Norton, and Mr. J. V. Chamberlain, of Kempston, are landowners. The soil is clay and sand; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, roots, barley and hay. The parish contains 3,226 statute acres; rateable value, £5,684; the population in 1881 was 950.

GAYWOOD is a village and parish, partly within the parliamentary borough of Lynn, to which town it forms a populous eastern suburb, and includes the hamlet of HIGHGATE: it is in the Western division of the county, hundred and union of Freebridge Lynn, Lynn county court district, rural deanery of Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Faith is a plain cemented cruciform structure, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and transepts (the north transept is used as a vestry), with a square brick tower containing 3 bells: it has a Norman doorway in good preservation. The register dates from the year 1562: here is also a list of rectors since 1302. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £650, including 13 acres of glebe, in the gift of Richard Bagge esq. and held since 1869 by the Rev. Richard Ambrose Whalley B.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge. There is a mission church at Highgate, erected in 1879. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel at Highgate. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, with school, built in 1874, at a cost of £600. There are some small charities for distribution in kind. A chalybeate spring, called Reffy Spring, is very much frequented. The Hospital of St. Mary Magdalene was founded by Petrus Cappellanus, in 1155, for a prior and twelve brothers and sisters; after being some years dissolved, it was re-founded in the time of James I. and rebuilt in 1649, with twelve tenements, and a chapel, forming a square: the revenues are about £370 a year, applied in the support of a reader, and eleven widows of the age of sixty and upwards, selected from the residents of Lynn: it is under the Charity Trustees: the corporate body of Lynn are feoffees. Gaywood Hall is the seat of Richard Bagge esq. D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is in general gravelly; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, turnips, barley, with a portion of meadow land. The Estuary Company enclosed about 300 acres of land in this parish and that of North Lynn during the year 1865. The area is 2,058 acres, of which 160 are water; rateable value, £5,451; the population of the parish in 1881 was 805.

HARLESTON or REDENHALL-with-HARLESTON, with part of MENDHAM.

HARLESTON is a market town on the borders of Suffolk, head of a county court district and polling-place for the Southern division of the county, and station on the Waveney Valley branch of the Great Eastern railway, chiefly in the parish of Redenhall, that part of the parish of Mendham which is in the town is now added to Redenhall for parochial purposes, and on the north bank of the river Waveney, 19 miles south from Norwich, 10 north-east from Diss and 99 from London, in Depwade union, Earsham hundred, rural deanery of Redenhall, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary, situated in Redenhall, about a mile from the town, was rebuilt by Thomas of Brotherton, Duke of Norfolk, and is a very handsome Gothic edifice; it consists of chancel, nave and aisles, and handsome Gothic porch, with lofty embattled tower, commenced in 1460, containing 8 bells and surmounted by pinnacles; this tower was shattered by lightning in 1616, and was afterwards braced together, since which one of the pinnacles has been struck down by lightning, but was afterwards replaced: there is a fine organ, erected in 1842; the church was completely re-seated and otherwise restored in 1858, by subscriptions of the parishioners, and the chancel roof was restored in 1864 at the expense of the late rector of the parish, the late Ven. Archdeacon Ormerod. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value £1,005, with residence, and has 30 acres of glebe attached, in the gift of the Duke of Norfolk on the nomination of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1874 by the Ven. Thomas Thomason Perowne B.D. Archdeacon of Norwich, late fellow of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The church of St. John the Baptist, Broad street, which was opened 23rd of June, 1872, as a chapel of ease, is a handsome building of stone and cut flint, in the Decorated style of the time of Edward II. and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, small north and south transepts, with apsidal east end, lighted by five single stained windows, representing scenes from the life of Our Saviour: there is also a handsome four-light window at the western end, which has for its subject the principal incidents in the life of the patron saint: each of the aisles is separated from the nave by four arches: the north transept contains a fine organ, and the south is used as a vestry: the roofs are of pitch pine, and the seats are of richly carved oak: the floors are laid with Minton's tiles: the reredos is of alabaster, picked out in colour: the site for the building was given by W. M. Hazard esq. of this town, who was also the principal promoter, and to whom the parish is chiefly indebted for this church: R. M. Phipson esq. F.S.A. of Norwich, was the architect. There are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. The charities amount to about £18 yearly. In 1871 the Rev. Samuel Titlow, of Norwich, left £800 in trust to the rectors of Redenhall and Starston, the interest to be devoted chiefly to the apprenticing of poor boys of the above ecclesiastical parishes, four-fifths to the former and the remaining fifth to the latter parish. Here are the extensive agricultural implement works and foundries of Messrs. Knights and Stacey, from which every description of agricultural work is turned out: also the works of Messrs. Moore, Holmes and Mackenzie, church bell founders and patent clapper makers. The A company of the 4th Volunteer Battalion of Norfolk Regiment assemble here. A subscription reading-room was established at the Corn Hall in 1872, but has been removed to convenient premises nearly opposite the "Swan." The Gas Works were erected in 1840. A market for corn is held every Wednesday in a handsome and commodious Corn Hall. Two fairs, formerly held on July 5th and September 9th, are now discontinued; repository sales for all kinds of live and dead stock are held every Wednesday on grounds near the town and railway station, alternately by Mr. George Durrant, Redenhall Grange, and Messrs. Chaston and Read. Gawdy Hall is an ancient and commodious mansion, with extensive grounds, the seat of John Sanicroft Holmes esq. J.P., D.L.: the hall took its name from the Gawdy family, who formerly resided here, and from whom it descended to the Wogans, and since to the present owner. William Martin Hazard esq. is lord of the manor of Harleston, and John Sanicroft Holmes esq. is lord of the manors of Redenhall, Holbrook, otherwise Alburgh, Hawkers and Coldham with Redenhall. The principal landowners are John Sanicroft Holmes, the trustees of the late Osborn Springfield and Frederick Bacon Frank esqrs. The soil is mixed; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 2,539 acres; rateable value, £5,990 15s.; the population in 1881 was 1,731, and 246 in that part of Mendham parish in Norfolk; total, 1,977

EAST HARLING (or MARKET HARLING) is a small market town, parish, polling place for the South division of the county, with station called Harling road, on the Great Eastern railway,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  miles north-west from the village, 9 miles north-east from Thetford and  $10\frac{1}{2}$  from London, situated on an acclivity above the Thet river, in Guiltcross hundred and union, Attleborough county court district, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter and Paul is situated on a slight elevation, close to the high road, at the west entrance to the town: it consists of chancel, nave and aisles: The "Harling chapel," at the east end of the south aisle, is a fine Gothic building, and in the church are 18 windows of corresponding style: the tower is lofty, surmounted by 12 small pinnacles and an elegant spire: in the Harling chapel are the marble effigies of Sir Robert Harling and his lady, enclosed by an iron railing: in the chancel is a Purbeck slab, under canopy, to Sir William Chamberlain K.G. commander in France, ob. 1462, and Ann his wife, but the effigies, which were of brass, have long been missing: there are other monuments: there is a fine toned organ, and a gallery erected for the choir: the church was restored in 1878-79 and seated with open benches. The register dates from the year 1544. The living is a rectory, yearly title rent-charge £391 with 68 acres of glebe with residence in the gift of Mrs. Wilkinson and held since 1829 by her husband, the Rev. Thomas Boston Wilkinson M.A. (1824) of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The Society of Friends have a meeting house, and at the rear is a burial ground: there is also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The town lands, of 96 acres, produce £80 yearly, which is distributed as follows—one third to the church, one third towards the support of the public school, and the remainder to an Improvement fund; also under an order of the Enclosure Commissioners, £45 the rent of 56 acres of fenland, is laid out in fuel for the poor. There is a flour mill, worked by the river Thet. A short distance north of the town is a limekiln. A corn market is held here every Tuesday. The fairs are held May 4th: the cattle and sheep fair the first Tuesday after September 12th and October 24th; lamb fair 6th July. Sir Robert Jacob Buxton bart. M.P., D.L. is lord of the manor. The Earl of Albemarle, Thomas Thornhill esq. M.P. and Cecil T. Molyneux-Montgomerie esq. are chief landowners. The soil is light loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 2,572 acres; rateable value, £4,134; and the population in 1881 was 1,062.

Parish Clerk, Thomas Morris Last.

HETHEL is a parish and village of scattered houses 3 miles south-east from Hethersett station, about 2 north from Ashwellthorpe station, 7 south-west-by-south from Norwich, and 4 north-east from Wymondham, in the Southern division of the county, Humbleyard hundred, Henstead union, Wymondham county court district, rural deanery of Humbleyard, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of All Saints is a small building chiefly of flint, consisting of chancel, nave and north aisle, with a square tower containing 1 bell: the windows in the chancel have recently been renewed at the cost of the rector. The register dates from the year 1709. The living is a rectory, yearly value £474, with 60 acres of glebe, in the gift of John Steward esq. and held since 1863 by the Rev. Henry Steward B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The rectory-house is pleasantly situated, and is surrounded by a moat, which still remains full of water. Near the church is a thorn, called Hethel thorn, which dates as far back as the time of King John, 1214. Hethel Hall, the property of Sir Francis George Manningham Boileau bart. D.L., J.P. is a modern building, occupying the site of the old Hall, which was pulled down in 1825: it is now unoccupied. Potash Farm House is at present unoccupied. John Henry Gurney esq. who is lord of the manor, John Steward esq. Sir Francis George Manningham Boileau bart. D.L., J.P. and Major Reginald Gwynne, are the principal landowners. The soil is clayey; subsoil, marl. The chief crops are wheat, beans, peas, turnips &c. HETHERSETT is an extensive village and parish on the high road from London to Norwich, with a station on the Ely and Norwich railway, 120 miles from London, 4 north-east from Wymondham and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  south-west from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Humbleyard hundred, Henstead union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Humbleyard, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Remigius, built about 1350, is a plain flint building in the Late Decorated style: it has chancel, nave, aisles, a square tower, small wooden spire, 5 bells, and a porch on the north side: it was re-seated in 1857, and the general body has been since restored, and the quasi chancel was re-decorated in 1866, and the rest of the church in 1874: an organ was given by Henry Back esq.: in the south aisle is an altar-tomb of the 14th century, with effigies of Sir R. Berney and his wife, and two stained windows to the memory of H. Back esq. and J. H. Browne esq. respectively. The register dates from the year 1616. The living is a rectory, with that of Canteloffe annexed, joint yearly value £700, with residence and 60 acres of glebe, in the gift of Caius College, Cambridge, and held since 1856 by the Rev. William Reynolds Collett M.A. late fellow of that college and rural dean. The Baptists hold a service in the British school. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. There are several donations bequeathed by different persons, amounting to £60 yearly, for the benefit of the poor of this parish, which are distributed chiefly in clothing. The Oak of Reformation, under which the two Ketts and their associates took a solemn oath in 1549 to reform the abuses of Church and State, is still to be seen on the high road from Wymondham to Hethersett. In the year 1800 the common and village green were enclosed, and the parishioners claimed and obtained part of Wymondham common as being within this parish as proved by the fact that they had buried a dead man found upon it. Thickthorn Hall or House is a modern residence, the property of the trustees of the late J. H. Gurney esq. and occupied by Frederick Elwin Watson esq. Hethersett Hall, the seat of Mrs. Henry Back, widow of Henry Back esq. J.P. is a large modern mansion on the south side of the village, near the church: it is pleasantly situated in a park of about 60 acres. The Old Hall, the seat of John Alfred Back esq. was originally built about the 16th century, but was much enlarged in 1774, and has a fine avenue of chestnut trees. Elijah C. Bailey esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the trustees of J. H. Gurney esq. Sir F. G. M. Boileau bart. D.L., J.P. also the trustees of Col. Charles Norgate, Mrs. Henry Back, William Henry Back esq. and John Alfred Back esq. The soil is loamy; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips, hay and beetroot. The area

HILGAY is a large village and extensive parish 4 miles south from Downham Market and 83½ from London, in the Western division of the county, hundred of Clackclose, union and county court district of Downham, rural deanery of Fincham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The village is on the river Wissey, which falls into the Ouse, and considerable portions of the parish lie on either side of the latter river. The Hilgay Fen railway station, on the East Anglian branch of the Great Eastern line, is 3½ miles west from the village; there is also one at Fordham on the Downham and Stoke Ferry branch, half a mile distant. The church of All Saints is a large and handsome building, with a chancel and nave in the Decorated style, and the south aisle in the Perpendicular; it is approached by an avenue of trees of great length and beauty, and has been restored: the tower is a solid brick edifice, and contains a good peal of 8 bells, re-hung in 1877, at a cost of upwards of £200: in 1881 a fine organ of three manuals and 2½ octaves of pedals was presented by the present rector: at the same time a solid and handsome oak lych-gate was added at each end of the avenue of trees, at a cost of £160, the gift of Miss Beechey. The register dates from the year 1583. The living is a rectory, yearly value £1,600 tithe rent charge, with residence and 85 acres of glebe, in the gift of Hertford College, Oxford, and held since 1872 by the Rev. St. Vincent Beechey M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge, honorary canon of Manchester and founder of Rossall school, Fleetwood: on the death of the late rector and patron, the Rev. W. J. Parkes, the advowson was sold and presented by the purchaser to Hertford College, Oxford. Here is also the district church of St. Mark, erected during the last incumbency: it is a plain structure, consisting of a nave and a turret for 1 bell: it contains an organ: the seats are all free: the Rev. Corrie Jackson M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, is curate. There are two Wesleyan and two Primitive Methodist chapels. There is a dole at Christmas of 40 sixpenny loaves, and 169 acres, yielding on the average £260 yearly, have been left for the poor; and, for the repairs of the church, 52 acres, producing a rental of about £120 yearly. Here is an ancient hall, formerly one of the seats of the Abbots of Ramsay, to whom the estate belonged before the dissolution of the monastery:

it was then (A.D. 1537) granted, with the advowson of the living, by Henry VIII. to James Howe esq. whose daughter was married to Sir John Willoughby knt. from whom it passed to the Wrays and Sandersons, and, in course of time, by sale, to G. W. Manby esq. inventor of the apparatus for saving life from shipwreck, and afterwards to William Jones, formerly Marshal of the Queen's Bench Prison, in whose family it continued till 1878, when it was purchased by Major Michael Stocks D.L., J.P. in whose hands it now is. The Rev. Phineas Fletcher, the celebrated poet, author of the "Purple Island," and other poems, was rector here from 1621 to the time of the Civil Wars. Major Michael Stocks, D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, Edmund Ethelstone Peel esq. and Sir Charles Rowley bart. are the principal landowners. The soil consists of upland and fen, the former a rich clay and gravel, the latter peat with good clay underlying. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 7,860 acres, of which 6,000 are fen; rateable value, £11,705; the population in 1881 was 684.

HILLINGTON is a parish, pleasant village and station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, 7 miles north-east from Lynn, on the Lynn and Fakenham and Wells road, in the Western division of the county, Freebridge Lynn hundred and union, county court district of Lynn, rural deanery of Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary is a plain building of stone, brick and flint in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave and tower: the tower and chancel are old, but the nave was rebuilt in 1824: it contains some ancient tombs, and an organ, built by Snetzler, in 1756, and some stained windows. The register dates from the year 1695. The living is a rectory, value £449, with residence, and 48 acres of glebe, in the gift of Sir W. H. B. folkes bart. M.P. and held since 1853 by the Rev. Edward folkes M.A. of University College, Oxford. There are charities of about £21 yearly, and the interest of £156 to be distributed annually to poor widows. Sir William Hovell Browne folkes bart. D.L., J.P., M.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The Hall, a handsome and picturesque building, was erected in 1627, on the site of a house called the Grange; it was much enlarged and beautified by the last possessor: the style is Gothic, its material carr stone, with Ketton and sandstone dressings: the gardens are extensive: at the entrance to the park are the remains of four ancient crosses: a trout stream, which has been opened out into a serpentine lake, flows through the park of 250 acres. The soil is of a light nature; subsoil, chiefly chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips, mangold-wurtzel and pasture. The area is 2,480 acres; rateable value £2,224; in 1881 the population was 285.

walls: the church interior has undergone various alterations and improvements during the past few years; a new organ was added in 1878 costing £550; in the same year a massive brass lectern was given by Lady Mary Currie; carved oak stalls were erected in the chancel, and a three-light window in the south wall of the chancel, which had been blocked up, was reopened and filled with stained glass: in the east end of the south aisle is a three-light stained window representing "The Sermon on the Mount;" it is in memory of Martin Baylie Darby, rector for nearly fifty years of the adjoining parish of Hackford and who resided at Hingham, and who died March 15th, 1880: the window was the gift of parishioners: in the south aisle are three two-light stained windows, one to the memory of Elizabeth Hodgson, who died 16th August, 1859; another, representing St.
 Peter and St. Paul was erected to the memory of Edmond

William West Clarke, a resident of Hingham who died 26th January, 1881; the other, representing an act of charity, is to the memory of Elizabeth Cockell, who died February 17th, 1879: the east end of the chancel has been raised and paved with marble mosaic work: in 1882 a handsome new 'Dossal' or hanging, under the east window was put up; it is of red silk plush stamped with a pattern and has four 'Orphreys' or stripes of silk embroidered in gold color, two with corn and grapes and two with (conventional) roses, the whole at the expense of the rector. The register dates from the year 1601. The living is a rectory, yearly value, £1,260, with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Kimberley, and held since 1873 by the Rev. Maynard Wodehouse Currie M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, rural dean. The Rev. Robert Peek M.A. formerly rector of this parish, was a man of very violent schismatic temper, who pulled down the rails, and levelled the altar and the whole chancel a foot below the church (since raised two steps); but being prosecuted for it by Bishop Wren, he fled the kingdom, and went over to New England, with many of his parishioners, who sold their estates for half their value, and conveying all their effects to that new plantation, erected a town and colony of the name of Hingham, where many of their posterity still remain: hearing that the bishops were deposed, he left the place, and came back to Hingham in the year 1646, after ten years voluntary banishment, resumed his rectory, and died in the year 1656. Here is a Congregational chapel, and one belonging to the Primitive Methodists. The fuel allotment of 34 acres produces £24 yearly, which is distributed among the resident poor of the parish in coals; and charities producing £41 13s. 11d. yearly are distributed in bread to the poor. The Market day is Tuesday. Hingham Hall, the seat of Rawdon Hunter-Muskett esq. J.P. is a large handsome brick mansion, standing in a well-wooded demesne of about 50 acres. The Earl of Kimberley is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Mrs. Hurnard is lady of the manor of Hingham Gurneys. The soil is of a mixed nature; subsoil, clay and brick earth. The chief crops are turnips, barley, wheat and mangolds. The parish consists of

GREAT HOCKHAM is a parish and village, pleasantly situate, 8 miles north-east from Thetford and 7 from Attleborough, in the Southern division of the county, Wayland union, Shropham hundred, Attleborough county court district, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. Wretham station, on the Great Eastern railway, is in this parish, about 2 miles south-west from the village. The church of the Holy Trinity stands in the park, attached to The Hall: it is a graceful building, and consists of nave and aisles, of the Decorated period, separated from the chancel by a noble arch: the tower fell early in the last century. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £276, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1857 by the Rev. John Spurgin B.D. of Clare College, Cambridge, surrogate of the diocese, J.P. for Norfolk. The Primitive Methodists have a commodious chapel. The fuel allotments of 40 acres produce on an average £17 yearly for coals or turf cutting. The Hall, the seat of Henry Thomas Partridge esq. J.P. lord of the manor and chief landowner, is a comfortable family mansion of red brick, surrounded by an undulating park of about 40 acres. The soil is of a mixed character;

HOCKWOLD-cum-WILTON, one mile north from Lakenheath station and 3½ miles west from Brandon station, is a village and parish formed by the union of the contiguous parishes of Hockwold and Wilton, the former lying the further west from Brandon, in the Western division of the county, Grimshoe hundred, Thetford union and county court district, rural deanery of Cranwich, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich; it is not far from the navigable little Ouse, which here separates the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, and is crossed by a suspension bridge to Lakenheath: in the parish of Hockwold is a considerable quantity of fen land. St. James' church, Wilton, is in the Perpendicular and Decorated styles, principally built of flint with stone dressings, and was restored in 1843: it consists of chancel, nave and tower with 6 bells, surmounted by a lofty stone spire: the chancel is divided from the nave by an ancient carved oak screen. The register dates from the year 1663. St. Peter's church, Hockwold, is a very plain which is expended in coal and clothing. George Duckett Berney esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are barley, wheat and roots. The area is 1,931 acres; rateable value, £3,029; and the population in 1881 was 372

The register dates from the year 1658. Hockwold is a rectory and Wilton a vicarage, joint yearly value £766, with residence and 80 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Master and fellows of Caius College, Cambridge, and held since 1861 by the Rev. William Wayman Hutt M.A. formerly fellow of that college, who officiates in both places, divine service being performed alternately morning and afternoon. There is a chapel for Wesleyans and one for Primitive Methodists. There are 30 acres of charity land under cultivation, worth about £40 yearly, and about 15 acres of fen land, from which the parishioners can dig turf; there is also a bequest of Mr. Adamson, a former rector, which produces £6 a year, and an annual grant of £20 provided for by a bequest of the late Mrs. Newcome. In the centre of the village is a very ancient stone cross, 15 feet in height, and resting on a circular pedestal of brickwork 4 feet high, supposed to be 600 years old. Adjoining the church is Hockwold Hall, an ancient brick building, the residence of Francis d'Arcy W. C. Newcome esq. B.A., J.P. There are two manors, one owned by Francis d'Arcy Newcome esq. and the other by the Master and fellows of Caius College, Cambridge. The principal landowners are Francis d'Arcy Newcome esq. Henry Morris Upcher esq. J.P. and Caius College. The soil is light and sandy; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 7,300 acres; rateable value, £6,252; and the population in 1881 was 809.

HOLKHAM is a parish and village, with a station on the West Norfolk, Lynn and Hunstanton railway,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles west from Wells, about  $\frac{1}{2}$  north-west from Walsingham and  $12\frac{1}{2}$  from London by rail, situate on the coast, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of North Greenhoe, Walsingham union and county court district, rural deanery of Walsingham, and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The beach of Holkham Bay is very fine, firm and elastic, and is resorted to in the summer months, being perfectly safe for bathers. The church of St. Withburga is situated west of the village, and about half a mile from the Hall, on an artificial mound, supposed to be Saxon, and near a tumulus in which bones and iron armour have been found: it is in the Decorated and Perpendicular Transition styles, and was repaired in 1767 by the Dowager Countess of Leicester, at a cost of £1,000: it has chancel with north and south chapels, nave, with clerestory, aisles, and a lofty embattled tower on the south-west angle, in which is a rich and powerful peal of 6 bells: in the years 1868-9 the church was restored and decorated, at an expenditure of nearly £9,000, by the Earl of Leicester: it has some fine specimens of oak carving: in the north chapel is a beautiful monument by Boehm, a recumbent figure of the late Countess of Leicester, to whose memory it was erected in 1871; in the south chapel is a fine monument of its kind erected to the memory of John Coke and his wife. St. Withburga, the saint to whom the first church on the site was dedicated, was the youngest daughter of Anna, King of the East Angles, and was sent to this village (which then belonged to the King) to be nursed, and lived here till the death of her father in 654; she founded a monastery at East Dereham, and died there in 743. The register dates from the year 1533. The living is a vicarage, title rent charge £200 and 19 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Leicester K.G. and held since 1847 by the Rev. Alexander Napier M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, who is also rector of Egmere and Waterden. Here are almshouses, founded in 1757 by the Countess Dowager of Leicester, at a cost of about £2,300, and endowed with a rent-charge of £50 a year charged upon the Holkham estate and an estate containing 97 acres, in the parish of Weasenham St. Peter's: they are occupied by 3 men and 3 women, who have coals, faggots, bedding, clothing, and 7s. in money each per week. Henry III. granted a market and a fair, both now obsolete. Brick and tile making is carried on at Peterstone. In the marshes, and easily accessible by a road leading from the church lodge, is a large camp, constructed on natural features of the soil, and probably used successively by Romans, Saxons and Danes.

In Edward II.'s time Holkham was a part of some consequence; subsequently, it belonged to the Boleyns and the Greshams. In the 17th century, the family of Chief Justice Coke acquired (partly by marriage and partly by purchase) the whole of the parish. The late proprietor, "Coke of Norfolk," the first Earl of Leicester, who distinguished himself as the greatest agriculturalist of his day, succeeded to the estate in 1776 and was created Earl of Leicester in 1837, taking the title from the previous creation in 1744, which had become extinct in 1759: opposite the north front of the house there is a Corinthian column, erected 1850 and raised by public subscriptions as a testimonial to the memory of the Earl. Holkham Hall, the seat of the Earl of Leicester K.G. is one of the finest seats in the county, the two fronts being each 344 feet in length, with a Corinthian portico on the south front, fronting which is a fountain, consisting of a group of figures representing St. George and the Dragon, the work of Charles Raymond Smith, while on each side of the approach on the north are a male and female lion in bronze, splendidly posed and executed by Boehm in 1872: the picture gallery is rich in fine works particularly in Claudes: the statue gallery contains some celebrated productions: the library, besides books, includes an almost unrivalled collection of manuscripts: the mansion stands in an extensive and well wooded park, which, with the pleasure grounds tastefully laid out and adorned with choice shrubs and flowers, is open for inspection every Wednesday during the summer months. Queen Victoria, when Princess Victoria, visited Holkham in 1835, with her mother the late Duchess of Kent; and the Prince and Princess of Wales are frequent visitors. The park, which is well stocked with deer and game, contains about 3,200 acres, of which 1,100 are wood, and there is a lake 1,056 yards long, frequented by large flocks of water-fowls: the whole is enclosed with a wall nearly 9 miles in length. About the year 1660, 360 acres were enclosed from the sea; and the first Earl of Leicester (created 1744) enclosed 400 more in 1722, and also reclaimed Holkham Heath and commenced the mansion in 1734; it was finished by his widow in 1760. The southern lodge of the park is approached through a massive triumphal arch of the Doric order,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles northwards from which is an obelisk 80 feet high, erected in 1729; to the left is a small temple much admired for its portico. The present Earl has reclaimed about 700 acres from the sea. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The occupiers of several houses in the parish take in lodgers during the summer and autumn. Every description of soil exists in

HOLT is a small market town and parish and station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, head of a county court district, and a polling place for the Northern division of the county, situate at the junction of several public roads, 23 miles north-west from Norwich, 18 north-by-east from East Dereham, 12 north-east from Fakenham, 10 west-by-south from Cromer and 123 from London by road, in Erpingham union, Holt hundred, rural deanery of Holt and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The word holt, in Saxon, signifies a wood, whence it is inferred that the town was surrounded by timber. In the reign of Edward the Confessor it was held in royal demesne, and after the Conquest the lordship belonged to the family of De Vaux, or De Vallibus. The town is pleasantly situated on rising ground, in the midst of a fertile district, remarkable for the purity of its air, and commands a delightful prospect of the surrounding country: in the year 1708 a destructive fire consumed a considerable number of houses and market stalls: the houses are built of brick and stone, and the streets are macadamised, paved, and lighted with gas, supplied by a limited liability company, and the town generally bears a clean appearance. The inhabitants are supplied with water from a spring on Spout Common, which is considered remarkably pure, and peculiarly adapted for the manufacture of aerated waters. The church of St. Andrew is in the Decorated and Later English styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, and north gallery, and had formerly upon its tower a lofty steeple which was a useful landmark: it contains several mural monuments, one to John Holmes, for more than thirty years master of the Grammar school, and author of a Greek Grammar; also to Edmund Hobart, the Newdegate and Briggs families: in 1864 the church was re-seated under the directions of William Butterfield esq. architect: a new communion table has just been presented (1883) by Sir Alfred Jodrell bart. of Bayfield Hall, in memory of his brother, the late Edward Jodrell esq.: it is made of cedar-wood grown on the Bayfield estate, and olive-wood brought by his late brother from Italy: the communion plate is also very interesting and good; the flagon was presented by King George the Second when Prince of Wales, and one paten by Sir R. Walpole and one by the Marquis of Townshend of that period: a fine organ added in 1882, stands at the south-west corner of the chancel; the cost, including organ-chamber, was about £500, which was defrayed by public subscription. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value £563, with residence and 57 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Master and fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge, and held since 1853 by the Rev. Edward Brunell B.D. formerly fellow and tutor of that college, rural dean of Holt. Here are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The United Methodist Free Church is a handsome Gothic building of white and red brick and blue flints, and was erected in 1862 at a cost of about £2,000, with an organ gallery at the south end of the building, containing a good organ: there are 500 sittings: the site was given by W. H. Cozens-Hardy esq. J.P. of Letheringsett Hall. Holt Hall, the seat of John Rogers esq. M.A., J.P. is a brick mansion in the Elizabethan style, situated a mile east of the town, in grounds tastefully laid out, containing a fine piece of water. Here is a Literary Institute, with a library of good useful and instructive books, numbering over 2,000 volumes, and is well supported. The market for corn is held on Wednesday, and there is a cattle sale every alternate Wednesday. The fairs, chiefly for stock, are held on April 25th and November 25th and the following days; and a statute for hiring servants is held at Michaelmas. Thomas Girdlestone, an eminent physician, and author of several medical works, and William Withers esq. who wrote several works on the planting and rearing of forest trees, were natives. Thomas Cooper, master of the Grammar school, was hanged in front of the school-house for his adherence to the cause of Charles I. In 1810 the commons and heaths that surrounded the town were enclosed for cultivation: 120 acres were allotted for the supply of fuel and pasturage to certain householders whose yearly rent is under £10, and on the east side, towards Cromer, are now handsome and thriving plantations of forest trees, interspersed with dwelling houses. Constables and other officers are chosen at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, held on December 21st. The chief landed proprietors are the lords of the four manors, viz. Holt, Holt-Market, and Holt-Hales, belonging to John Henry Gurney esq. and Holt-Pereers, of which the Fishmongers' Company, as trustees of the Grammar school, are owners; G. Barker esq. and J. Rogers esq. are also owners. The soil is light and the land in a high state of cultivation. The area is 2,991 acres; rateable value £6,225; the population in 1881 was 1,535.

HOLVERSTON is a village and parish 5 miles south-east-by-east from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, Henstead hundred and union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary was demolished some centuries ago, and no part of it now remains; a field at a short distance from the Hall is pointed out as the site. The rectory is in two parts, united to Rockland St. Mary's and Bergh-Apton. A small modus is paid in Culling Leonard, market gardener lien of tithes in each parish. The trustees of the late Col. John Marcon are lords of the manor and chief landowners; the Earl of Rosebery owns a small portion of land. The soil is mixed; subsoil, loam. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 480 acres; rateable value, £693; the population in 1881 was 18.—Letters received through Norwich. The nearest money order office & telegraph station is at Brooke.

HONING is a village and parish, with a station on the Eastern and Midlands railway from Yarmouth to Lynn, 2½ miles from Worstead station, on North Walsham branch of Great Eastern railway, and 4 south-east from North Walsham, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Tunstead, Smallburgh union, North Walsham county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, on the navigable Ant, which is connected with the Dilham and North Walsham canal. The church of SS. Peter and Paul was rebuilt of flint about 1795 (with the exception of the embattled tower), and stands most conspicuously on a height: it consists of chancel, nave and south porch, and tower in which there are 5 bells. The register dates from the year 1630. The living is a vicarage, consolidated with that of Dilham, joint yearly value £308, with 19 acres of glebe and house, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1872 by the Rev. John Alfred Laurence B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Honing Hall, built in 1748, and enlarged in 1871, is a fine mansion of red brick, situated in a park of about 60 acres: it is the seat of Edward George Cubitt esq. J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light sandy; subsoil, sand, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and turnips. The area is 1,400 acres; rateable value, £2,242; and the population in 1841 was 321.

HONINGHAM is a village and parish 8 miles east from East Dereham, on the road from East Dereham to Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Forehoe, St. Faith's union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew, 1 mile east of the village, is a flint building in the Perpendicular style, with square tower containing 5 bells: it has chancel, nave and a porch on the south side, and an organ, pre-sented by Lady Bayning: the fifth bell was presented to the church in 1878 by the Rev. W. C. Ward. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a discharged vicarage, with that of East Tuddenham annexed: it is in the gift of Lady Bayning; the vicarial tithes were commuted in 1840 at £210, and the ay improprator's at £543, joint gross yearly value tithe rent charge £655, with 102 acres of glebe and house at Tuddenham and 1 acre here; it is held by the Rev. John Robert Feilden M.A. Christ Church, Oxford, who succeeded the late Rev. T. L. Fellows in December, 1881; the Rev. Hugh Fuller-Maitland M.A. curate. A charity, producing £1 11s. 6d. yearly, is for bread. Lady Bayning, who is lady of the manor and sole landowner, resides at the Hall, a fine old mansion in the Elizabethan style, situated in a well-wooded park of 57 acres. The soil varies from a stiff clay to a blowing sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 2,563 acres; rateable value, £3,453; the population in 1881 was 330.

HORNING is a parish and village, situated by the side of the navigable river Bure, 10 miles north-east from Norwich and 3 east from Wroxham station, in the Northern division of the county, Tunstead hundred, Smallburgh union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The village consists of two streets, long and irregularly formed, nearly surrounded by fen or marsh land, where numerous windmills are constantly employed in pumping the water from the low lands, which, at certain seasons, are completely inundated. The church of St. Benet, seated on a hilly meadow, a mile south-east of the village, is an old building, consisting of nave and aisles, with lofty square tower, and was restored in 1874 by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners: at the eastern end is a handsome mural monument to the Rev. Anthony Barwick, vicar here for 56 years. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £275, inclusive of a grant by the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty of £16 yearly, and of 42 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1855 by the Rev. Augustus Pyne M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge, who has a well-built vicarage. The fuel allotment, of 30 acres, produces £14

HORSEY-NEXT-THE-SEA is a village and parish, 4 miles north from Martham station, on the Eastern and Midlands railway, about 11 north-by-west from Yarmouth, and 21 from Norwich, in the Northern division of the county, Happling hundred, Smallburgh union, Great Yarmouth county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. This parish was frequently flooded until purchased by the late R. Rising esq. who, by repairing the sea bank and draining the marshes, brought it to a high state of productiveness; he also constructed a road to Somerton, which is of great advantage to the inhabitants. The church of All Saints is an old stone building, consisting of chancel, nave, and tower, which is round at the base and octagonal above, is em-yearly. At Cowholm, in this parish, are the ruins of the Great Abbey of St. Benet's-at-Holm, founded in 1020 by King Cnut the Great, for Black Benedictine monks: this abbey, being strongly fortified, held out for some time against William the Norman; the abbot was mitred: the dignity is now united to the see of Norwich, of which the prelate is Bishop of Norwich and Abbot of St. Benet's-at-Holm. The principal landowners are the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who are lords of the manor. The soil is very rich; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 2,567 acres; rateable value, £3,648; the population in 1881 was 435.

This parish is included in Whissonsett United School Board district formed in 1873; the children attend the school there battled, and contains 1 bell: the edifice was restored a few years back, the picturesque thatched roof being retained, and is fitted with open seats: a stained window has been placed on the north side by the parishioners and friends, in memory of the late vicar, the Rev. E. P. Neale. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, with a vicarage house near the church; there is a yearly rent-charge of £83 in lieu of tithes, and about £80 yearly from lands purchased with augmentation money: it is in the gift of Robert Rising esq. of the Hall, and held by the Rev. Michael Thomas Du Pré M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The poor's allotment, 9A. 3R. 9P. was awarded at the Enclosure in 1816, and is now let for about £20 yearly, which is distributed in coals. The Hall, a handsome residence, the seat of Robert Rising esq. J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner, was built in 1845, and contains a good library and a fine collection of Norfolk birds. The soil is mixed; subsoil, clay and sand. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,830 acres, 130 of which form a sheet of water known by the name of Horsy Mere; rateable value, £1,251; the population in 1881 was 199.

HORSHAM ST. FAITH'S (better known as St. FAITH'S) is a parish and head of a union,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles north from Norwich station, 7 south from Aylsham and  $118\frac{1}{2}$  from London, in the Southern division of the county, Taverham hundred, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Taverham, and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. NEWTON ST. FAITH'S is a mile further north, on the direct road to Aylsham from Norwich. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is an old Gothic building of flint with stone dressings, and consists of chancel, nave, and aisles, with high embattled tower and 6 bells: it was restored in 1874, at a cost of over £3,000, Miss Twining giving above £1,000, and the remainder was made up by subscription: there is a beautiful eastern stained window to the Twining family, and a mediæval pulpit with painted panels; also an ancient and handsome font and screen. The register dates from the year 1620. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £101, in the gift of Viscount Ranelagh, and held since 1863 by the Rev. Josiah Descarrières Ballance M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, who is also vicar of and resides at Horsford. A parsonage house was erected in 1866, at an expense of £1,000, towards which Miss Twining and friends of London (formerly of this parish) gave £300, and the remainder was made up by subscription, aided by a grant from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and also one at Newton St. Faith's. Here were a Benedictine priory, founded in 1105, and a hospital of Knights-Templars: it formerly had a market, which is obsolete. Horsehair is manufactured here. Viscount Ranelagh is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is mixed; subsoil, marl and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and hay. The area, including Newton St. Faith's, is 2,340 acres; rateable value £5,254; and the population in 1881 was 1,082.

HOWE is a village and parish 6 miles south-east from Norwich and 5 east from Swainsthorpe station, in the Southern division of the county, in a detached member of Clavering hundred, Loddon and Clavering union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Brooke and archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary is a small ancient flint building, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, and round Saxon tower containing 1 bell; it was restored in 1864, at the expense of the late rector and the Rev. John Holmes, of Brooke; a handsome stained east window was placed in the church by the Rev. C. H. Barling, of Brooke, and there is also one small stained lancet window in the chancel. The register dates from the year 1767. The living is a rectory, with that of Little Poringland annexed, tithes commuted at £365 6s. with residence and 56 acres of glebe, in the gift of Charles

HUNSTANTON with ST. EDMUND'S.

HUNSTANTON is a parish, village and healthful sea-bathing place, with railway station at St. Edmund's, the terminus of the Lynn and Hunstanton railway, about 1 mile from the old village, 114 miles from London, 17 north-by-east from Lynn and 10 west from Burnham Market, in the Western division of the county, Smithdon hundred, Docking union, Lynn county court district, Heacham rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and Norwich diocese. The sands extend 3 miles, and the bathing is safe and agreeable. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a noble structure of flint and freestone, in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and handsome south porch, which has been restored, in memory of the late Mr. le Strange, and has a tower on the west end of the north aisle containing 1 bell; it contains an ancient Norman font, round which a pavement of rich mosaic has been laid by the present lord of the manor; a handsome pulpit has been erected; there are monuments to the le Strange family, and a brass to E. Greeve and his wife, temp. Richard III., and a stained east window by F. Preedy, erected by the younger children of the late Mr. le Strange and their mother, to his memory; the south clerestory windows are also filled with stained glass: there is daily evening prayer and weekly communion in the parish church; the north aisle, called the visitors' aisle, was erected in 1879, at a cost of nearly £800, defrayed by subscriptions, principally from visitors. The register dates from the year 1538: it is curious, however, that no entry occurs during the reign of Queen Mary: a terrier has been discovered of the time of Philip and Mary, with inventory of church furniture. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £400 nett, with residence and 19 acres of glebe land, in the gift of Hamon le Strange esq. and held since 1879 by the Rev. Adolphus Waller M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. Gibson's rent-charge of £9 is appropriated equally between the poor and repairs of church. In the village there is a good hotel, a few lodging-houses and bathing machines. Hunstanton cliff rises to the height of about 60 feet above the beach, and is commonly called St. Edmund's Point, from a tradition that St. Edmund the Martyr landed here when he came from Germany to be crowned King of East Anglia: this cliff exhibits one of the most attractive geological sections on the coast, at the base is carstone of dark brown tint below and yellow above, on this rests a band of bright red chalk, above which, forming the top of the cliff, is white chalk: near the highest point of the cliff is the lighthouse, a substantial building, completed in 1880 by the Trinity House; rising upwards of 50 feet, the light exhibited is on the catoptrical principle, and can be seen on dark nights, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of 18 or 20 miles, from the decks of vessels. The ruins of St. Edmund's chapel are situated in a field adjoining the lighthouse. The sea washes against the cliff with great force, but at low water persons may walk along the sands for a distance of nearly a mile, to a place called the Oyster Sea, where in the season are caught skate, haddocks, codfish, codlings, soles, turbot, plaice, oysters, lobsters, crabs and shrimps; and periwinkles are taken in abundance. The coast on each side of the cliff is secured against the incursions of the sea by sand heaps, called meales. Here is a coastguard station; and a lifeboat, presented by the Licensed Victuallers' Association in 1867, who also erected the boat-house. The Hall is situated in a beautifully wooded park, and is the seat of Hamon le Strange esq. D.L., J.P.; this fine mansion, in 1853, was much injured by fire; the ancient baronial banquet hall and eighteen other rooms were destroyed. Hamon le Strange esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is rich loam, and very productive; the subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The Downs, near Great Ringstead, is a delightful resort for gipsy and picnic parties. The area is 1,499 acres of land, and 795 water; rateable value, £10,127; the population in 1871 was 816; and in 1881, 1,508.

Parish Clerk, Joseph Scott; Deputy, Robert Mellows.

Wheeler esq. and held since 1871 by the Rev. Charles Henry Lipscomb of Queen's College, Oxford. There is a small charity left in 1738 by the Lady Elizabeth Hastings for the education of eight poor children. George Holmes esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is sand and clay; subsoil, mixed. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 757 acres; rateable value, £988; the population in 1881 was 92.

Parish Clerk, Philip Stone.

A Sunday school was founded by Lady Elizabeth Hastings in 1734 & rebuilt by the present rector in 1881; the children attend on week days at Brooke

St. Edmund's is a district adjoining Hunstanton. A church named St. Edmund, in the Decorated style, has been erected here, near the cliff; it consists of chancel, nave, and north aisle; a western porch has been added; there are 500 sittings, free and unappropriated; there are four services on Sundays, and Communion is celebrated on Sundays, Thursdays and Saints' days; it is a chapel of ease to the parish church, and is served by the vicar of Hunstanton and his curate. Here is a Union chapel, open to all denominations, containing 300 free seats. This place has now become a well frequented watering-place: the climate is usually dry and bracing, owing to the scanty rainfall, and the absence of fog, except at very rare intervals; in spring the east wind is less keen than in the midland counties: a pier was erected in 1870; it is supported by cast-iron columns, resting on screw piles, is 800 feet in length, and affords a commodious landing-place and an agreeable promenade. Here are three good hotels, a few villa residences, and numerous lodging-houses. The Hunstanton Convalescent Home, for men, women and children, under the patronage of their R.H.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales, was opened in a temporary building in June 1872; it is now a permanent building of Carr stone with red brick facings and Bath stone sills, capable of holding 40 convalescents, and was opened on Easter Monday, 1879, by their R.H.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales; it stands on an elevated site of about 2 acres, close to the Lynn road, with the front commanding a view of the sea, and was designed as a memorial of thanksgiving for the convalescence of the Prince of Wales in 1872; it contains 11 bed rooms uniformly furnished; there are also two large sitting rooms at either extremity of the building on the ground floor, that for men, called the Cambridge or Albert Edward ward, the other for women, called the Wisbech or Alexandra room; the dining room, called Hunstanton, 30 feet by 20, is well furnished in oak and beech; there is also a visitors' hall flanked by rooms for the committee and matron; the total cost of the Memorial building has been £7,000, including site, £1,000 of which was given by the Earl of Leicester, the rest by various donors; it is proposed at once to add a wing to hold 10 more patients: it is supported by voluntary contributions and the payment of small sums by the patients; convalescents are admissible from the Eastern and Midland counties generally and even from London. The two villages are supplied with gas and water by two private joint-stock companies with limited liability. There is a small Police Station, with residence for the sergeant in charge, and petty sessions for Smithdon and Brothercross petty sessional division are held at Beeton's rooms, St. Edmunds, the second Monday in each month at 11 a.m. and at Docking every fourth Monday at 11 a.m. For list of magistrates and places in the divisions see Docking.

ICKBOROUGH (or ICKBURGH) is a parish 6 miles north-east from Brandon station, on the road from Brandon to Swaffham, in the Western division of the county, Grims-hoe hundred, Swaffham union and county court district, rural deanery of Cranwich, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich, situate on the river Wissey. The church of St. Peter is a handsome flint building, with stone dressings, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and square embattled tower with a clock: the church, excepting the tower, was entirely rebuilt in 1865-66, at the expense of Francis, 3rd Lord Ashburton: there are two brasses, one in the nave to Francis, 3rd Lord Ashburton, and one in the chancel to the memory of Denzil Hugh Baring, second son of the 3rd Baron Ashburton: it is paved with encaustic tiles: all the windows are stained. The register dates from the year 1740. The living is a rectory, annexed to that of Langford, joint yearly tithe rent charge £248, with 30 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of W. Amhurst Tyssen Amherst esq. M.P. and held since 1881 by the Rev. Henry Chichel Hart B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. There is a charity consisting of 27 acres of land, bequeathed by the Dingle family to the poor inhabitants, now producing £21 yearly. W. Amburst Tyssen Amherst esq. M.P. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is light and sandy; subsoil, clay. The crops are chiefly barley and turnips. Two farmhouses, with a few labourers' cottages, comprise the whole village. The area is 1,599 acres; rateable value, £859; and the population in 1881 was 182.

INGHAM is a parish and village 2 miles from the navigable Ant,  $\frac{1}{2}$  from Stalham station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, 16 north-east from Norwich and 9 south-east from North Walsham, in the Northern division of the county, Happing hundred, Smallburgh union, North Walsham county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The lordship of Ingham was possessed by a family of the same name, of whom Oliver de Ingham was living in 1183 and John de Ingham in the reign of Richard I. Sir Oliver de Ingham, great grandson of the last, and Seneschal of Gascoigne and Aquitaine and Lord Warden of the Marches of Guyenne, in the reign of Edward III. had two daughters and co-heiresses, the younger of whom, Joan, conveyed Ingham to her second husband, Sir Miles Stapleton, of Bedale, in Yorkshire, who founded a chantry in the church of Ingham, consisting of a warden and two priests, performing service in honour of the Holy Trinity: this became a priory of the order of the Holy Trinity, and to which the church, having been rebuilt, was made collegiate, and appropriated by Thomas Percy, Bishop of Norwich, A.D. 1360. Ingham Priory became in time the head house of its order in this country, and even imparted to it the name of the order of Ingham, by which it was thenceforward known, as well as by those of the order of the Maturins and of the Trinitarians: at the Dissolution the priory lands were granted to Sir William Woodhouse, of Waxham, who afterwards exchanged the priory grange manor, appropriate rectory, and lands with William Rugg, Bishop of Norwich, for the priory of Hickling and other possessions, and they are still attached to the see: a portion of the walls of the priory still remains. The church of the Holy Trinity is a large and handsome Gothic building: it consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and south porch, with lofty tower: the chancel has been restored by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the nave and aisles by the vicar, at a total cost of about £3,000: under an arch on the north side of the chancel lies the sculptured figure of Sir Oliver de Ingham, Marshal of Guyenne: on the side of the tomb was the following inscription:—

"Monsieur Oliver de Ingham gist icy, et Dame Elizabeth sa compagne, que luy Dieu de

INGOLDISTHORPE is a village and parish on the Lynn and Hunstanton road, 10 miles north-north-east from Lynn and 1 mile east from Snettisham station on the Lynn and Hunstanton railway, in the Western division of the county, Smithdon hundred, Docking union, Lynn county court district, rural deanery of Heacham, Norfolk archdeaconry and Norwich diocese; it is watered by a small rivulet called the Ingol, which flows westward to the Wash, and from which the village takes its name. The church of St. Michael is a large building of flint and stone, in the Later English style, and consists of chancel, which is a fine specimen of the Perpendicular, at the east end of the church, by the rood-loft, is an altar monument, with sculptured figures of Sir Roger de Bole and Margaret his lady; the knight is in complete armour, his head resting on the head and body of a Saracen, coupe and at his feet is a hound, with its paw on a gauntlet: his arms, argent, two bars with a canton gules, over all a fesse sable, are yet visible on his surcoat, and her robe is checkered with his arms and her own: it is remarkable that both figures wear the mantle of some order, having as a badge on the right shoulder a cross pattée, of which the upper limb was removed to make room for a motto, but which is no longer legible: the inlaid brasses in the chancel, which were among the richest in the county, were all stolen in 1800, when St. Mary's chapel was pulled down to save expense of repairing its roof, and the church laid open. The register dates from the year 1801, the previous register having been destroyed by fire. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, including glebe with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1873 by the Rev. Nathaniel Wilson. Here is a Baptist chapel. The poor have an interest in 17 acres of land in this parish, the rent of which, £26, is given in money; also a charity of £5, left for poor widows, and a charity called need money arising from land, and producing 30s. yearly. A fair for cattle and stock is held annually on Trinity Monday. The Hall, the ancient seat of the De Ingham Stapletons, has been modernised: there are portions of the old hall standing and the estate and hall are the residence of Alfred Borrett esq.: Ingham House, owned by George Walter Whittle esq. but unoccupied, is a substantial white brick house Mrs. Coustos, formerly Mrs. Whaites, is lady of the manor. The principal landowners are Alfred Borrett, George Walter Whittle, Robert Ives and William Wenn esqrs. The soil is good mixed; subsoil, sand, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,503 acres, rateable value, £2,566; and the population in 1881 was 452.

LANGLEY is a parish and widely scattered village, 1 mile north from Loddon, 3 miles south-west from Buckenham Ferry station and 10 south-east from Norwich, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Loddon, Loddon and Clavering union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Michael, a handsome edifice in the Perpendicular style, consists of chancel and nave, with square tower containing 4 bells, and south porch: it was thoroughly repaired and decorated with stained glass in 1803, chiefly at the cost of the late Dowager Lady Beauchamp. The register dates from the year 1695. The living is a vicarage, valued in 1831 at £25, having been augmented, from 1772 to 1824, with £400 of Queen Anne's Bounty, in the gift of Sir Reginald W. Proctor-Beauchamp bart. and held since 1853 by the Rev. Henry Alfred Barrett M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, rector of Chedgrave, and rural dean. The fuel allotment of 40 acres produces £60 yearly for coals. Here are almshouses for six poor widows, erected in 1861 by the late Sir Thomas B. Proctor-Beauchamp bart. in the memory of his parents. Here are the ruins of Langley Abbey, founded in the year 1198 by Roger Fitz Roger: a stone cross upon which are four statues formerly stood near the Abbey, but has been removed into Langley Park. The Hall, the seat of Sir Reginald William Proctor-Beauchamp bart. J.P., D.L. lord of the manor and principal landowner, is a splendid mansion, erected in 1740, standing in a park of 800 acres; it contains many valuable paintings, statues, busts and other articles of vertu. The soil is fine mixed; subsoil sand, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 2,696 acres; rated at £3,932; the population in 1831 was 308.

Parish Clerk, George Ellis.

LARLING (or LARLINGFORD) is a scattered village and parish, 8 miles north-east from Thetford and 1 mile north from Harling Road station on the Great Eastern railway, in the Southern division of the county, hundred o

Shropham, Wayland union, Attleborough county court district, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Ethelbert, which stands in a field, a quarter of a mile north from the village, is an ancient structure, enclosed by a strong wooden fence and consists of chancel, nave, and north aisle and a rectangular tower of flint: the south entrance is a fine specimen of Norman architecture: the church contains two marble monuments, one at the northern side of the communion table to William Woodley esq. many years lord of the manor, and the other at the south side to George John Cerjat esq.; and under the chancel window is a spot of ground, fenced in, containing the remains of the Rev. Philip Leach, rector of the parish 35 years and rector of East Winch 42 years: the church was restored in the year 1867, by subscription (the chancel at the sole expense of the rector): it was re-roofed, re-seated, and re-paved: during the restoration a very ancient altar stone was discovered under the communion table, which has been restored to its original position and near the south entrance an old stoup was brought to light and replaced in its original position. LODDON is a small market and union town, parish and polling place for the Southern division of the county, 5 miles from Buckenham Ferry and Reedham station, 7 from Beccles, 10 south-east from Norwich, 15 south-west from Yarmouth, and 112 from London, in the hundred of Loddon, county court district of Bungay and Beccles, rural deanery of East Brooke, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich, situated on the river Chet. The town is lighted with gas by a company. The church of the Holy Trinity is a large structure of flint with stone dressings, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, square tower containing 8 bells, and south porch: it has a fine-toned organ, presented by T. Reynolds in 1821: the east window is stained; here is an ancient stone font, much defaced by the Puritans: in the south aisle is a curious painting representing Sir James Hobart and his wife, kneeling, with views of Loddon church and St. Olave's bridge, and an inscription beneath states that Sir James built the church, and his wife the bridge: in the north aisle is a marble altar-tomb, with a recumbent figure of Lady Williamson, who died in 1684. The register dates from the year 1566. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £280, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich, and held since 1849 by the Rev. John James Smith M.A. and formerly fellow and tutor of Caius College, Cambridge, who resides at Penalley near Tenby, South Wales: in 1841 the rectorial tithes were commuted for £520 yearly. The parish is in the charge of the Rev. Caleb Baskett Mayhew, curate. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The Town Hall, erected in 1870, is a handsome building of red brick, in the Italian style, and is used for meetings and entertainments. The town estate consists of a house, and a farm of 83 acres, the rent of which, £185, is applied chiefly in the service of the church. An engine house has been built by the parish on its own land, and a fire engine placed there by the Norwich Union Fire Office. In the 28th Edward I., J. Seagrave obtained for the town a charter for a market, to be held every Tuesday, for corn, and a fair for stock on Easter Monday and on the first Monday after November 22nd. G. W. D. Palmer esq. is lord of the manor. The land belongs to several owners, amongst whom are John Crisp esq. J. W. Gilbert esq. George Riches esq. and Captain Clarke. The area is 2,952 acres; rated at £5,134; the population in 1881 was 1,145.

LOPHAM.—The villages and parishes of North and South Lopham form the straggling town of Lopham, 7 miles west from Diss station and  $4\frac{1}{2}$  south-east from East Harling station; they are in the Southern division of the county, Guiltcross union and hundred, Diss county court district, rural deanery of Rockland, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The town is noted for the manufacture of linen, diaper, dowlas and huckaback, principally by small manufacturers, who traverse the neighbouring shires to sell them.

North Lopham.—The church of St. Nicholas is a fine large edifice, with square tower, built principally of flint: at the south entrance is an old Norman porch, and the outside of the church and round the buttresses exhibit many Latin inscriptions: the chancel was thoroughly restored in 1862. The earliest registers date from the year 1558. The livings of North and South Lopham form a consolidated rectory, yearly value £619, and held since 1861 by the Rev. John Fitzherbert Bateman M.A. formerly fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, instituted 1861; the present rector is also patron, but is bound to present a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here: there is also a Wesleyan chapel, with burial ground, and a school room, which is now let to the School Board. A cemetery of a quarter of an acre was formed in 1871, at a cost of £150, and is under the control of the Burial board of nine members. The town lands and charities are applied by the trustees according to a scheme established by the Charity Commissioners in 1870, for the benefit of the most deserving and necessitous poor of the parish, also in gifts to those of their children who attend school regularly and pass the Government inspection, and to the maintenance and repair of the church. The land is chiefly the property of the Duke of Norfolk; H. E. Garrod esq. is lord of the manor. The land is of mixed and heavy soil; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 2,000 acres; rateable value, £3,149; the population in 1881 was 674.

The village of South Lopham, the adjoining parish, is a mile south from that of North Lopham. The church of St. Andrew is in a field: it is a very old building, with tower of great beauty arising between the nave and chancel, and is of Norman origin: there is a tablet relative to a charity left by William Branch Elliott esq.: the chancel was thoroughly restored in 1866, and the fine Norman arches of the interior of the tower thrown open: the rest of the church was restored and re-seated in 1874, and in 1878 an organ was obtained for the church by voluntary subscription. The register dates from the year 1554. The living is consolidated with that of North Lopham. The town lands and church charity are applied by the trustees, according to a scheme sanctioned by the Court of Chancery, to the maintenance of the church and schools of South Lopham; the yearly surplus, not exceeding one-fourth of the net income, to be distributed amongst the poor who have not received parish relief for six months previously. H. E. Garrod esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Buckenham esq. and Mrs. Jarrett. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and turnips. The land comprises some kindly working loams resting on clay subsoil, and some of a heavy kind, all of which are good corn-growing lands. About a mile east of South Lopham, in the fen or low lands, is Lopham Gate, where there are two springs, from which flow the Little Ouse and Waveney; the former takes a course through Thetford, Brandon and Lynn, and the latter flows to Yarmouth, and both divide the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk. The area is 1,937 acres; rateable value, £2,919; the population in 1881 was 529.

LUDHAM is a parish and small town, near the navigable Bure, 2 miles south-west from Potter Heigham station, on the Eastern and Midlands railway, 13 from Norwich north-east-by-east and 13 from Yarmouth north-west, in the Northern division of the county, Smallburgh union, Tunstead hundred, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich; it formerly had both a market and a fair, granted by Elizabeth to Bishop Redman; the market is given up, but the fair is held on the Thursday and Friday after Trinity Sunday, chiefly for pleasure. The church of St. Catherine is a handsome stone building, in the Later English style, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, with a square embattled tower containing 5 bells: the chancel, which is separated from the nave by a richly carved screen, was thoroughly restored in 1861. The date of the earliest register is 1583. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £298, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich, and held since 1855 by the Rev. Henry Walker M.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. Here are Baptist and Wesleyan chapels. About £60 is annually divided among the poor, the proceeds of land given at the Enclosure. This place, after the dissolution of the abbey of St. Bene't-at-the-Holme, to which the manor belonged, was given by Henry VIII. to the Bishop of Norwich, who converted the Grange into an episcopal dwelling: the greater part was burnt down in 1611, but the

LYNFORD is a parish, 5 miles north-east from Brandon station, 7½ north-west from Thetford and 93 from London, in the Western division of the county, Grimshoe hundred, and Thetford union and county court district. There was a church here, but it has been destroyed some centuries; there is no incumbent, nor is it ecclesiastically connected with any other parish. The inhabitants attend the church at West Tofts. The Catholic chapel, erected in 1879, at the expense of Mrs. Lyne-Stephens, and dedicated to Our Lady of Consolation and St. Stephen, is a handsome flint building with stone dressings, consisting of nave without aisles, having a tiled roof and a small cupola: under the east window is a fine stone reredos and the floor within the altar-rails is laid with mosaic work: it is seated with open carved oak benches, having a handsome oak screen at the end: the roof inside is of stained oak, the beams of which rest upon carved stone corbels: at the entrance door is a fine marble piscina: the Rev. Michael Dwane is the priest in charge. Lynford Hall, the seat of Mrs. Lyne-Stephens is a magnificent residence of red brick with stone dressing in the Elizabethan style, approached by a handsome carriage drive, situated in a small park, nearly enclosed by wood, and surrounded by 2,000 acres of common land covered with gorse, forming an excellent preserve for game which abounds here. Mrs. Lyne-Stephens is lady of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is light sand, and is severe windy weather it drifts, though not so much as formerly, every part of it which is not heath and wood having been brought into cultivation. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,508 acres; rateable value, £608 11s. 9d.; the population in 1881 was 109.—Letters through Mundford R.S.O. which is the nearest money order office

LYNN.

LYNN, KING'S LYNN, or LYNN REGIS, is the chief town in West Norfolk, and the great seaport of all the eastern lowlands: it lies on the east bank of the Great Ouse, near the junction of the river Nare, 2 miles from the Wash, 99 from London by railroad and 98½ by road, 41½ north-east from Cambridge, 26½ north-west-by-west from Dereham, 11 north from Downham Market, 26½ north from Ely, 48½ west-by-north from Norwich, 14½ north-west-by-west from Waffham and 15½ north-east from Wisbech: it is a parliamentary and municipal borough, with separate jurisdiction and quarter sessions, a seaport, market and poor law union town, polling-place for the Western division of the county, and head of a county court district, in the hundred of Freebridge Lynn, rural deanery of Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich.

This is a terminus of the Great Eastern, Great Northern, and Midland Companies, having direct railway communication with London, Cambridge, Ely, Wisbech, Peterborough, Hunstanton, Wells, Norwich, Spalding, Grimsby, and Hull: and, by way of Cambridge, Peterborough and Stamford, to all the principal towns in the north and west of the kingdom. The Eastern and Midlands railway has its terminus at present in a portion of the Great Eastern station at Lynn, but an independent station in Austin street is now (1883) in course of construction. This railway company has been formed by the amalgamation of the Lynn and Fakenham, Yarmouth and North Norfolk, Midlands and Eastern, Peterborough, Wisbech and Sutton and Yarmouth Union Companies, and by means of it the towns and districts of North Walsham, Aylsham, Melton Constable and Fakenham are brought in direct communication with Lynn and an alternative route is provided to Norwich and Yarmouth. The celebrated Norfolk broads are easily accessible by this railway.

Lynn passed into the hands of the ecclesiastics before the Norman Accession, at which period it was already a port, with considerable customs and many salt works: in the reign of William Rufus, Bishop Herbert founded the church and priory of St. Margaret; and the priory of Norwich obtained the grant of a fair to be held at Lynn on the feast of St. Margaret, with various other privileges, in the time of Henry I.: in the reign of Henry VIII. much of the ecclesiastical property passed to the crown, and the name of the borough was changed from Lynn Episcopi to Lynn Regis.

During the Civil Wars, in the reign of Charles I. the Mayor and Burgesses of Lynn declared for the Royal cause, and placed the town in a position of defence against the attack of 18,000 Parliamentary soldiers, under the command of the Earl of Manchester: the town was closely besieged from August 28th to September 26th, when the garrison, consisting of 5,000 men, was obliged to surrender: during the siege, on Sunday, September 3rd, 1643, when the minister and congregation were assembled for divine worship, a sixteen pound shot was fired from West Lynn into St. Margaret's church, where it did no further harm than to shatter a pillar into pieces and disperse the people: after the siege the town was garrisoned for the Parliament, and so remained during the Civil War.

The town is very ancient, but was not of much importance prior to the Norman Accession. King John visited Lynn in 1205, and on the petition of John Grey, Bishop of Norwich, that monarch granted Lynn a charter to be a free borough. The borough has sent two members to Parliament since the 26th of Edward I. and has had no fewer than nineteen charters, granted during the reigns of John, Henry III. Edward I. Edward II. Edward III. Henry V. Henry VIII. Edward VI. Philip and Mary, James I. Charles II. and George II.: the first governing charter, which appointed and fixed the municipal corporation, was granted by Henry VIII. and the government consisted of a mayor, twelve aldermen, eighteen councillors, recorder, and town clerk. Under the Municipal Corporation Act the borough is divided into the north, middle and south wards, and the corporation consists of a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors: other officials are the high steward, recorder, town clerk, coroner, treasurer, sword-bearer, town crier, and sergeants-at-mace. The mayor and ex-mayor, with other justices, are included in a separate commission of the peace, under which petty sessions are held on Mondays and Thursdays at the Guildhall. The borough court for the trial of civil actions has been superseded by the county court, and the courtleet, formerly held by the corporation as lords of the manor, has not been held for several years past. The revenue of the corporation is about £4,000 a year, besides which there are large charitable endowments, under the management of the Charity Commissioners. The corporation possesses an elegant enamelled cup and cover of silver, double gilt, weighing 73 ounces, and holding about half a pint: this cup was presented by King John. The sword that is carried before the mayor is said to have been the gift of Henry VIII.; besides which four silver maces (gilt), are carried before the mayor on all public occasions. Among the possessions of the corporation is the ferry over the river Ouse. There is a local police force. The borough gaol, having been abolished as such a few years since, is now used as a lock-up, convicted prisoners being sent to Norwich.

The port of Lynn, from its position in relation to the inland navigation connected with it on the one hand, and its free communication with the German Ocean on the other, is of considerable importance, especially in the corn, timber, and coal trades. The harbour is formed in a wide reach of the Ouse river, and is very deep: it will hold upwards of 300 vessels: the tide rises 22 feet: the entrance to it was formerly rendered difficult by the tortuous course of the channel, and the variety of shifting sandbanks: this, however, has been remedied by the improvements made by the Norfolk Estuary Company: the upper streams are under the care of the Conservators of the Ouse outfall, and have been much improved. The harbour of Lynn, and other local works, are under the government of the corporation and several bodies of commissioners. The number of vessels belonging to this port is 100, of the aggregate tonnage of 9,200, employing 600 seamen, besides small craft, lighters, and 120 fishing-boats. The exports are principally corn, wool, sand, and coprolite to British ports, and coals, machinery, implements and manufactured goods for the foreign trade. The imports are principally coal, timber, wine, maize, barley, linseed, cotton seed and oilcake, and a great variety of raw and unmanufactured goods from the Continent by a line of steamers between Hamburg and Lynn. The wine trade here is as ancient as the time of Henry III. The fisheries are shrimps, cockles, smelts, soles, cod and whelks; above 60 tons of shrimps alone are sent to London yearly. There are maltings and breweries, corn mills, iron and brass foundries, agricultural implement manufacturing, cork-cutting establishments, machine makers and millwrights, seed crushers, coach makers, rope and sail makers, and coir yarn and matting factory.

The Dock, constructed by Mr. Lawrence, from designs of Mr. Brunlees, was begun in 1867 and finished in 1869; it is situated at the north end of the town, adjoining the harbour, and contains about  $6\frac{1}{2}$  acres of water area: the form is an irregular quadrangle, the southern side 780 feet in length and the northern 590; the width from south to north, between the edges of the quays, about 440 feet; at the water surface the width is 420 feet, and the average depth of the dock is 31 feet: the inclination of the slopes forming the sides is  $\frac{1}{2}$  horizontal to 1 perpendicular, the slopes being faced with solid concrete blocks: small craft are able to approach near the edge; but to accommodate vessels of large draught, substantial timber staiths or projecting quays have been constructed; each staith is 32 feet long, projecting somewhat beyond the base of the slope, and its floor or deck is furnished with rails leading on to a turntable upon one of the two lines of railway by which the dock is entirely encompassed: there is a continuous covered timber wharf, 250 feet long, on the south side, furnished with steam cranes, at which the continental steamers load and discharge their cargoes: there is a powerful hydraulic lift at the end of the dock for the shipment of coal from the Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire coal-fields, and this branch of the export trade is very extensive: with these appliances there is accommodation for the direct loading or delivery of several vessels of an average tonnage of 1,000 each: the total capacity of the dock is about 50,000 tons: the work of excavation brought to light some interesting relics of antiquity, more or less remote; from the drift have been taken out many tons of bones of animals extinct in this country—such as the elephant, wild boar, tiger, elk, wolf, beaver, and others of far greater antiquity: a fine collection of specimens is preserved, together with British, Roman and Saxon pottery, and other objects brought to light after an interment of many centuries: the dimensions of the lock are:—width, 50 feet; length between gates, 200 feet; depth, 30 feet: the platforms on which the lock gates work are 9 feet 6 inches below low water of average tides, and with the surrounding walls comprise an immense mass of substantial masonry: the stone used is the Bramley Fall, a very hard and durable millstone grit: a branch railway, three-quarters of a mile in length, owned by the Dock Company, connects the dock with the Great Eastern, Midland, and Great Northern railway systems: the dock was formally opened by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, on the 7th July, 1869, and named the Alexandra Dock: in 1877 an Act was obtained authorizing the Dock Company to considerably extend the dock accommodation, by adding another basin 1,000 feet long by 400 feet wide, connected with the old dock by a short canal, and shut off by a pair of lock gates, thereby forming an inner dock, which with the surrounding land for the storage of timber and the erection of sheds, covers about 70 acres: this additional dock was commenced in 1881 and opened for traffic in 1883, affording facilities for increased trade at the port, and adding much to the prosperity of the town.

The town on the land side is encompassed by a fosse, formerly defended by a strong embattled wall, flanked by nine bastions: fragments still remain of the wall, together with the south gate, a fine Gothic tower, with a lofty pointed archway for carriages and two smaller ones for foot passengers: near the fosse, on the east side of the town, is an octagonal two-storied chapel, called the Red Mount, formerly much visited by pilgrims and others.

The town is about a mile and a quarter in length, and more than half a mile in breadth; its eastern suburb is interspersed with villas and thriving plantations. The streets and lanes are generally narrow, but clean and well paved, and there are many excellent shops and good hotels. Near the London road are public walks, planted with trees and shrubs; one of these extends from Guanoel terrace, at the south end of the town, to the Red Mount and from thence along the site of the town wall, of which the remains are fast disappearing, as far as the Railway Station: this pleasant promenade has a range of lofty lime and chestnut trees on each side, forming a shady avenue with recessed seats at convenient distances, one of which is surrounded by a group of trees called the Seven Sisters.

The Marshland Iron Bridge, over the river Ouse, connecting Lynn with West Lynn, built by the Ouse Outfall Commissioners, at a cost of £20,000, opened the 30th July, 1873, is a wrought iron lattice girder bridge, 500 feet between the abutments, having a roadway 25 feet wide, and supported upon four piers.

The municipal borough consists of the parishes of St. Margaret and All Saints or South Lynn: the parliamentary borough includes part of Gaywood.

St. Margaret's church, formerly that of a priory, is a fine structure of freestone with two large towers at the west end, 86 feet high, one of which was formerly surmounted by a spire, which being blown down in 1741, destroyed in its fall the nave and the lantern which rose from the four arches at the intersection of the transept and nave: the building now consists of chancel, nave, aisles and transepts: the church, though curtailed from its original dimensions, is still a noble pile, 240 feet long and 132 feet broad, and is lighted by 70 windows: it is chiefly in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, but the nave and aisles were rebuilt in a debased style, though of excellent material and workmanship, in 1747, when the whole edifice was new roofed and thoroughly repaired: the pews and galleries have since been cleared away: the chancel has a peculiar east window, and contains several carved stalls, some ancient memorials, and curious old brasses; the chapels adjoining the chancel were dedicated to the Trinity and St. Stephen: two chapels on the south side have been taken down: one of the towers contains a clock and a peal of 8 bells: this church has undergone very extensive alterations, £7,000 having been expended upon it, nearly the whole of which was raised by public subscriptions: the work, so far as the nave and aisles were concerned, was under the direction of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, while that of the chancel was undertaken by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who placed it in the hands of their architect, Mr. Ewan Christian. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, annexed to the rectory of North Lynn, the joint gross yearly value of the title rent charge is £690, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich and held since 1882 by the Rev. Benjamin Dale.

St. Nicholas, a chapel of ease to St. Margaret, is a fine but rather plain structure, in the Late Perpendicular style, 200 feet long and 78 feet wide, with a open work roof: it has a very large stained east window: the font, of finely-wrought stone, standing on a pyramidal flight of steps, was presented by Bishop Harsnett in 1627: the tower contains a peal of 8 bells: a leaden spire, designed by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. was erected by public subscription in 1869.

St. John the Evangelist is an ecclesiastical district, formed in 1846 out of St. Margaret's parish. The church, in Blackfriars road, is in the Early English style, and was opened on September 24th, 1846: it contains 1,008 sittings, 800 of which are free: the cost of the edifice was about £5,000, which was raised partly by subscription and partly by a grant from the Society for Building and Enlarging Churches; the corporation gave the site. W. Salvin esq. was the architect. The register dates from the year 1846. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £150, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1879 by the Rev. Sydenham Lynes Dixon T.A. King's College, London.

The Catholic church, in the London road, is a handsome structure, in the Decorated style, dedicated to St. Mary: it was erected in 1844, from a design by A. L. Welby Pugin esq. at a cost of £2,500: the east window is stained: in 1852 a north aisle was added, and a residence for the priest built. The Rev. Stodart Macdonald is the priest.

The Wesleyan chapel, Tower street, was erected in 1812, at a cost of £4,500. The Wesleyans have also two smaller chapels in the town, one on the London road and the other in North street. The Congregational chapel, New Conduit street, is a brick building, was erected in 1838, at a cost of about £3,000, and contains about 900 sittings. The Stepney Baptist chapel, Blackfriars road, was erected in 1841, at a cost of £2,000: the building has been rescaled and beautified at an outlay of £700. The Union Baptist chapel, Market street, was built in 1859, at a cost of £3,000, by persons who seceded from various Baptist and Independent congregations: it is a cruciform building in the Early English style, having a small tower and square spire, and contains 500 sittings. The Methodist New Connexion chapel, Railway road, is a brick building, erected in 1852, at a cost of about £2,000: it will seat 890 persons. The Primitive Methodists have erected a large chapel in the London road, at a cost of about £2,000: it is a brick building in the Italian style, with 800 sittings,

It was opened in 1857: adjoining are large schoolrooms, chapel, called the Free Christian church, belonging to the Unitarians, was erected in 1875: it is built of white bricks, with red brick bandings and Bath stone dressings, in the Middle-Pointed style. The Society of Friends have a meeting house in New Conduit street.

The Salvation Army barracks, in Wellesley street, will sit between 800 and 900.

The Borough Cemetery is on the Hardwick road and covers about eight acres of land: it has two chapels united by an archway, capped by a slated spire; also mortuary, and curator's lodge: it is under the control of a Burial Board of 11 members.

The Grammar school was founded by Thomas Thoresby, the reign of Henry VIII. and is under the control of the town council: the school-room and master's house have been rebuilt: the mastership is endowed: there are no free scholars; there are some small exhibitions of about £30 yearly: the Prince of Wales gives a gold medal. The Rev. B. Slight M.A. is the present head master. Eugene Aram, who was usher of Lynn Grammar school, under Mr. James Knox, was apprehended here in 1759 for the murder of Daniel Clarke, committed at Knaresborough, in Yorkshire, in 1744, and for which he was executed at York.

The Guildhall, formerly the hall of the Trinity Guild, is situated in Saturday Market place: it has a fine Gothic window and Renaissance porch of flint and stone: the assembly Rooms form a part of the building, and open out by means of folding doors, so as to form an elegant apartment, 87 feet long by 22 feet broad and 22 feet in height: adjoining these are the council and magistrates' rooms: a few full length portraits adorn the walls. Here is preserved the Red Register of Lynn, said to be the oldest paper book in existence, and many other ancient muniments of the Corporation.

The Corn Exchange, Tuesday Market place, is a large glass-roofed brick building, with stone front; it was erected in 1854.

The Custom house, Purfleet quay, is a building of freestone, erected in 1683, in the Italian style, with a curious pyramidal roof, from which rises a small open turret, terminating in a pinnacle at the height of 90 feet: a statue of Charles II. is placed over the entrance.

The Athenæum, erected in 1854, is a brick building, situated in Baxter's plain, in the centre of the town, and contains several local institutions for the promotion of literature, science and art. 1st. The Stanley Library and Reading Room, founded by a munificent grant by the present Earl of Derby, formerly member for the town, principally for the working classes, and since amalgamated with the older subscription library, containing 16,000 volumes, the lowest scale of subscription being one shilling and three pence per quarter; 2nd. The Museum, a spacious hall and gallery, particularly rich in ornithology, and to which J. H. Gurney esq. was a munificent contributor: the museum is supported by subscription, but is freely open to the public; 3rd. The Conversazione, a society which works by lectures, papers and discussions; 4th. The Church of England Young Men's Society. Besides the apartments specially appropriated to these several societies, the Athenæum comprises numerous rooms and offices, which are let for general purposes; and a very fine hall, 84 feet long by 42 feet broad, which is used for concerts, lectures and exhibitions in connection with the associated societies, and is also let for the general purposes of a public room. The Athenæum was built by public subscription and loan, but fell into the hands of mortgagees; it is now private property.

The Lynn Public Baths are situated on Common Staith Quay; the building is of brick, and comprises hot and cold, salt and fresh water baths, also shower and swimming baths; they were opened on the 4th July, 1856.

The Pilot Office also on Common Staith quay, is a building of red brick, surmounted by an octagonal tower 50 feet high: it was erected in 1863.

The Water Works, which are very ancient, have been modernised and improved of late years, and are the property of the Corporation. The water supply is from a stream, having its rise in the chalk strata at Gayton and Grinstead.

The Gas Works, Southgate, were established in 1825, by Mr. Malam: they have been sold to and are now worked by the King's Lynn Gas Co.: since they were first erected they have been considerably enlarged.

The Savings Bank, in St. James street, is a well-designed red brick building, in the Tudor style, and was erected in 1860, at a cost of about £2,000.

The Theatre is in St. James' street; the corporation are part proprietors with other shareholders.

Lynn is a great market for cattle, corn and other agricultural produce, which are brought here for shipment: the markets are held on Tuesday and Saturday; the former are for corn and cattle and are the principal markets; there are three market places, one of which is for live-stock only, and the others are called the Tuesday and Saturday Market places: in the latter is a market house for butchers, in the former the corn exchange, meat, poultry and fish market: in the centre of the Tuesday Market is a handsome pillar, combining gas lamp and public fountain, the gift of Mr. Malam, and erected at a cost of about £300: the cattle market adjoins Broad street, and is near the railway terminus, where there are very extensive cattle and sheep pens; it is held on Tuesday, and is very largely supplied with sheep and cattle. A pleasure fair, called the Mart, commences on St. Valentine's Day, and lasts for a fortnight; another, called the Cheese fair, was held on the 17th of October, but was abolished in 1878: cattle fairs are held on the second Monday in the months of April and November; the former principally for sheep, of which nearly 20,000 are sometimes penned.

The West Norfolk and Lynn Hospital, near the London road, is a spacious building of white brick, established December 1834, and erected at a cost of more than £3,000: in 1847 two wings were added, called the Harwood and Hanksinson wards: the building will now hold 52 inmates: it is supported by voluntary contributions; a separate ward for contagious cases was erected in 1877 as a memorial of the late Rev. John Freeman, the biographer of Kirby the entomologist.

The following are the almshouses in the town:—

Framingham's Hospital, situated in the London road, is a handsome brick building with stone dressings, having convenient apartments for twelve inmates; a chapel is attached to it: the hospital has a lawn in front and a small garden behind for each inmate: it was founded in 1676, and derives its name from Alderman Framingham; it has a revenue of £500.

St. James' Hospital, St. James' road, was founded in the fourteenth century, but rebuilt in 1772; it has a chapel and twelve houses, and the revenue is about £150.

The Wesleyan, or Smith's Almshouses, St. James' road, are for eight poor women above sixty years of age; they were founded by Benjamin Smith esq. in 1822, who also endowed them; the endowment is about £30 yearly.

Elsden's Almshouses, in South Lynn, founded in 1842, have an income of £122; they are for eight persons.

Valinger's Almshouses, South Lynn plain, are for four poor women of South Lynn parish; they were founded in 1811 by Thomas Valinger; the yearly endowment is about £34. The other charities of the town are considerable.

St. Margaret's Library was founded in 1617, and contains about 1,700 volumes of ancient literature.

Near St. James' street and the Theatre is a fine hexagonal tower, the only remains of the Grey Friary, founded in 1264.

The following eminent literary men were natives of Lynn, viz:—Capgrave, a Franciscan friar, author of the "Chronicles of England," and other works; Nicholas, or Friar Nicholas, a musician and astronomer, who died in 1360; William Sautre, or Santer, a Wickliffite priest, who was burnt at Smithfield in 1401; William Gale, an eminent member of the Augustine order, who died in 1507; Sir Benjamin Keene, an ambassador, who died in 1757; and W. Whittingham, a bookseller, editor of one of the editions of the County History, who died in 1818.

All Saints' church, the parish church of SOUTH LYNN, is an ancient cruciform structure in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, transept and bell turret, containing 1 bell; in 1860 this church was thoroughly repaired and re-seated; it formerly had a tower, which fell in 1763. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1855 by the Rev. William Leeper M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. The gross income is £507 with house.

SEECHE is a hamlet of South Lynn, distant 2 miles south. A licensed school chapel was erected here in 1863: it is a Gothic building of flint and brick, and serves for this hamlet and for that of Saddlebow, a part of the parish of Wiggan-hall St. Mary's, the church of which is situated on the opposite side of the river Ouse, about 3 miles from this portion of the parish.

WEST LYNN is a suburb and parish on the west bank of the Ouse, with which there is a communication by a ferry and a bridge. GAYWOOD is also a suburban parish, and includes Highgate and Albion Place. The Directory of these suburbs will be found under separate headings.

The area of the parish is 2,898 acres, inclusive of 55 acres of water; rateable value of St. Margaret's parish, £7,475; and the population in 1881 was—All Saints, 5,088, and St. Margaret's, 13,451; total, 18,539. The population of the municipal borough in 1881 was 18,539; and of the parliamentary borough, 17,226 in 1871, and 18,451 in 1881.

SOUTH LYNN forms part of the town of LYNN, which see.

WEST LYNN is a village, parish and station on the Lynn and Sutton Bridge railway, situated on the west side of the Great Ouse river, opposite the town of King's Lynn, with which it communicates by a ferry for foot passengers. There is a bridge, called the Marshland Iron Bridge, over the New Cut on the south side of the harbour, and carriages have to go round by this bridge, thus making the distance to Lynn by road nearly 3 miles. West Lynn is in the Western division of the county, hundred of Freebridge Marshland, union and county court district of King's Lynn, rural deanery of Lynn and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter was erected soon after the destruction of one which was washed away by an inundation in 1271, on a piece of ground which the then rector, William Pakenham, procured for that purpose; it is in the Late Perpendicular style, having transepts, nave, square tower with 1 bell: there is a fine brass to Sir Adam Outlawe, who died in 1503: the east window is stained in four compartments, and represents The Three Marys at the Tomb of Our Saviour; it was erected in July, 1840, to the memory of Amelia Walker, of North Lynn, by her three sisters: there is an ancient stone octagonal font with the seven sacraments of the Catholic church in relief upon it: the seats are of carved oak. The register dates from the year 1695. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £500, including 28 acres of glebe, in the gift of Joseph Phipps Townsend esq. M.A. and held since 1863 by the Rev. Frederick Jackson M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here are Baptist and Wesleyan chapels. There are charities amounting to £12 a year. The land is all freehold. The trustees of the late Christopher Goddard, Sir William Hovell Browne folkes bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. William Clifton esq. the Dean and Chapter of Ely and the Ouse Outfall Board, are the principal landowners. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay and silt. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and peas. The area is 1,205 acres, of which 435 are water; rateable value, £1,409; the population in 1881 was 91.—Letters received from Lynn, which is the nearest money order & telegraph office.

MANNINGTON is a parish 5 miles north-west from Aylsham station on the East Norfolk branch of the Great Eastern railway, in the Northern division of the county, with Eppingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry of diocese of Norwich. The church is in ruins. The living is a discharged rectory, consolidated with that of Ippinge, joint yearly value £272, in the gift of the Earl of Orford, and held since 1856 by the Rev. Peter James Elwin, of St. Bees. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor and sole landowner, and resides at the Hall, an ancient irregular building of stone and black flints, lying very low and surrounded by a moat. The soil is light; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, turnips, barley and grass. The area is 548 acres; rateable value, £572; the population in 1881 was 8.—Letters through Norwich. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Aylsham.

MARHAM is a parish and village, 8 miles north-east from Downham Market, 4 south-west from Narborough station and 7 west from Swaffham, in the Western division of the county, Clackclose hundred, Downham union and county court district, rural deanery of Fincham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of the Holy Trinity is a large building, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle and a lofty square tower, built with oolite freestone, containing a good peal of 6 bells: about the year 1844 the church was re-roofed and some beautiful stained windows added, some of which were presented by Henry Villebois esq.: 20 years later the churchyard was considerably enlarged, and in 1867 the north wall of the nave was restored: in 1875 the whole of the interior was restored and reseated at a cost of £1,500; of this amount £250 was contributed by St. John's College, Cambridge, for chancel improvements, the remainder of the expense being defrayed principally by Henry Villebois esq. and by subscription: in the church is a very ancient tomb, with recumbent effigies made from the native chalk of John Steward esq. and Annie his wife (daughter of Humfrey Shouldham esq.), who were buried here in 1603-4. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of St. John's College, Cambridge, which holds the impropriation of the rectorial tithes, and held since 1868 by the Rev. Henry Josiah Sharpe M.A. late fellow of that college: the tithes were commuted in 1840, the rectorial at £640, and the vicarial at £371 yearly, with 11 acres of glebe: annexed to the vicarage is a house, with 2½ acres of land: also land in the parish of Rockland, producing about £55 yearly. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. In 1799 two poor allotments were awarded under the Enclosure Act, containing 200 acres of fen land: in 1869-70 a scheme was devised under the authority of the

MARLINGFORD is a parish and scattered village in the Yare valley, 6 miles west-by-south from Norwich and 5½ north-west from Wymondham station, in the Southern division of the county, Forehoe hundred and union, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Hingham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of flint and rubble in the Decorated and Early English styles: it has a chancel, nave, north aisle and square tower containing 1 bell and south porch: in 1881 the church underwent thorough restoration, the whole roofed with tiles (it having been previously thatched), at the same time the south porch was renewed, and the north aisle rebuilt on the old foundations, the chancel was refitted, the whole at a cost of over £1,000: the south entrance is through a Norman arch: there is likewise an old Norman font (restored), a new pulpit, two piscine, and the staircase formerly leading to the roof lost was restored and now gives access to the pulpit. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a discharged rectory, with residence, and about 35 acres of glebe, tithes commuted at £162, in the gift of Thomas L'Estrange Ewenesq. and held since 1880 by the Rev. George Richards D.D. of Pembroke College, Oxford. Marlingford Hall, a Tudor building, is the seat of Benjamin Edgington Fletcher esq. who is the lord of the manor and with the Rev. H. E. Lombe B.A., J.P. and J. W. Rose esq. chief landowners. The soil is various; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, barley

MARSHAM is a parish and considerable village 2 miles south from Aylsham station on the East Norfolk branch of the Great Eastern railway and 3½ north-west from Buxton station on the Great Eastern railway and 10 north from Norwich, on the road to Norwich, in the Northern division of the county, South Erpingham hundred, Aylsham union and county court district, rural deanery of Ingworth and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of All Saints has a chancel, nave and square tower containing 8 bells, an ancient screen, and font carved with the sacraments of the Catholic Church and figures representing saints, confessors and St. George and the Dragon: the chancel has memorial stones of the Norris and other families. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £281, in the gift of the Earl of Lichfield: the Rev. John Gunton B.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge, has been incumbent, since 1844, by whom, assisted by Queen Anne's Bounty, a rectory-house has been built; there are about 66 acres of glebe, and the tithes have been commuted for £344. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. Buxton Reformatory is situated in this parish, but adjoining the parish of Buxton: it was originated by Sir Edward Buxton, and Messrs. George Kett, John Henry Gunney, and John Wright, but chiefly by the latter gentleman, under the following circumstances:—Previous to this establishment being opened, young boys were sent to Buxton Old Union, where tradesmen from Norwich and neighbourhood went to procure apprentices for their various trades from among them; on one occasion a chimney sweeper, wishing to have a boy from there, picked out several successively as likely to suit him, but, in each case, their parents objected; at last, a little boy was pointed out to him who had no friend or relation to care for him; he was one of the "waifs and strays" of this world, so the master sweep was told he would have no trouble about him; no one would inquire what had become of him; "the sweep" was then about to remove the boy, but the late John Wright esq. happened to be present at the time, and, turning round, said—"What! because this boy is friendless is he to be forced into a trade where boys who have friends are not allowed to be placed? No! he shall not:" this was the incident which first made him think of endeavouring to found this establishment, and, as he used jocularly to remark, "Buxton Reformatory sprang from soot;" he then, in conjunction with the above-named gentlemen, had a meeting in St. Andrew's hall, Norwich, and the result was the opening of this place in 1853, it was then for boys or young men who had been confined in Norwich Castle, and who, wishing to lead a different life, volunteered to come here for a short term till they could quit their career of crime and lead an honest life; it was taken over by Govern-

MARTHAM is a village and parish, and a station on the Eastern and Midlands railway, about 10 miles north-north-west from Yarmouth, in the Northern division of the county, incorporated hundred and union of East and West Flegg, county court district of Great Yarmouth, rural deanery of Flegg and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The village is large, and delightfully situated on rising ground above the marshes, having several handsome and well-built houses, with some good shops. The church of St. Mary is a fine structure, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch, and a lofty square tower of fine proportions, with embattled

ment and certified for criminals in 1855: it is a square red brick building, with the governor's house in front and in the centre is a large courtyard; it has a beautiful view from all sides, and has a flower garden in front: there is a large plot set apart for a playground in fine weather, also a covered playground for use in bad weather: the boys are instructed in seamen's duties, for which purpose there are two masts rigged in the playground, and they are also taught shoe-making, tailoring, farming and agricultural duties; for the latter purpose there are 40 acres under cultivation by spade: it is calculated that from 90 to 95 per cent. of the boys sent here are reclaimed, as shown by inspector's report, and the success of the institution is proved by the fact that the majority of the boys, years after they have left the reformatory, correspond with the governor, who frequently has visits from inmates, while others, who are too far off to visit him, send photographs of themselves, wives and families, and it is interesting to look upon some of their cartes as taken when they were brought here, and as they appear now: the boys attend church in the parish; there is room for from 55 to 60 boys in the Reformatory, and at present there are 46; the expenses average about £1,000 yearly. The charities are £36 12s. 7d. yearly. There are 181 acres of heath land allotted for fuel. Here is a building used for the purpose of lectures and entertainments, called the Mutual Improvement Institution. Bolwick Hall, the seat of Charles Louis Buxton esq. J.P. is locally in the parish of Aylsham, but for postal purposes is more conveniently given here. Marsham Hall, occupied by the Rev. Charles Benjamin Leupolt, rector of Brampton, is a large plain white building, resembling an old-fashioned, substantial farm-house. William Forster esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Charles Le Neve esq. Thomas Henry Case esq. and Charles Louis Buxton esq. J.P. The soil is sand and loam; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, roots, barley and hay. The area of the parish is 1,819 acres, about 333 of which are taken up by woods and heath: rateable value, £2,370; the population in 1881 was 554.

parapet and containing 6 bells and south porch; it is chiefly of the Early Perpendicular period, and was probably erected in the reign of Richard II.: the whole has been restored, and the chancel, which is in the Florid Gothic style, entirely rebuilt in 1855, at a cost of nearly £8,000, given by Mrs. Catherine Alice Dawson, now Mrs. Major Longley, daughter of the Rev. George Pearce M.A. the late vicar, as a memorial of her husband, the Rev. Jonathan Dawson M.A. to whom there is a raised altar-tomb: the east window is very handsome and stained: a stained window was placed in the chancel to the memory of Mrs. Pearce by the family; the font, ch is ancient, is octagonal, and sculptured with the Seven aments of the Catholic church and The Last Judgment, panels: the ancient stained glass is very curious: the ing of the old doors of the porch is very good. The reter dates from the year 1558, and is in an excellent state reservation. The living is a discharged vicarage, yearly rent-charge £363 17s. 9d. with residence and 8 acres glebe, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich and since 1876 by the Rev. George Merriman M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford; the great tithes belong to the Dean and apter of Norwich. Roger Gunton, in 1160, gave the arch to the prior and convent of Norwich "for the re-ption of his soul." The Baptists and Primitive Metho-ists have chapels here. There are charitable bequests for benefit of the poor of the parish: also 78 acres of land, which were awarded at the Enclosure in 1812. Richard nights, John Love, jun. and the Rev. B. Rising are the chief landowners, and there are a number of small landowners in the parish. Alfred Mabot Wiseman esq. is lord of the manor. Martham Broad, extending over several res, is in the north of the parish. The soil is light mixed; soil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 2,644 acres; rateable value, £6,569; the population in 1881 was 1,097.

CESS, 1 mile west, and DAMGATE, 1 mile east, are ham-

SCHOOLS:—

A Free school was founded here pursuant to the will of Christopher Amis, who left £110 for that purpose in 1622; this sum with several small donations was laid out in purchasing the school-house & 5A. 1R. of land, which were exchanged at the Enclosure in 1812 for 7A. 3R. 7P. now let for £17 10s. a year, £15 of which, with the use of the house & garden, form the emolument of the master for teaching fifteen poor children; the remaining £2 10s. is expended in insurance & repairs. The Charity Commissioners issued a new scheme in 1883 for the management of the three charities (Creasy, Bowman & Amis), & named it the Martham Educational Charity. The funds are applied in paying the school fees & in gifts of clothing to about 60 children, who attend the board school, the remainder is distributed to the poor of the parish in coals.
A school was erected near the church in 1852 by the Rev.
G. Pearse, & is now used in addition by the School Board
A School Board of 5 members was formed in 1872; James Cooper, clerk to the Board

GREAT MELTON is a parish between 2 and 3 miles west from Hethersett station,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  south-west from Norwich and 4 north-north-west from Wymondham, in the South-eastern division of the county, Humbleyard hundred, union of Henstead, Norwich county court district, rural deanery of Humbleyard, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. Great Melton consists of two distinct parishes, St. Mary and All Saints, consolidated in the reign of Queen Anne. All Saints church was suffered to go to decay in accordance with Act of Parliament in 1710, since which the church of St. Mary has been in use, but in consequence of its recent dilapidated condition it has been demolished and All Saints church rebuilt, and a new north transept and vestry added: the present edifice is built of flints with stone dressings and is in the Decorated style (sufficient indications having existed shewing that to be the original architecture dating probably from the middle of the 13th century), except the new south porch, which was known as Perpendicular and of the date 1455: the present church consists of chancel, nave, north transept, south porch and the square tower, which alone remained of the original structure, this has been thoroughly restored and contains 3 bells: the chancel contains an Early English window removed from the church of St. Mary: the cost of restoration has been about £1,600. The registers date from the year 1557. The consolidated living is a rectory, with residence and 20 acres

Michael James Anderson M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, who resides at Hockering. Thornton's charity of £10 yearly is for clothing, and the fuel allotment of 18 acres let at £25. George Duckett Berney esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Edward Bowyer Sparke esq. and the Rev. John Shouldham. The soil is mixed; subsoil, chiefly clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 608 acres; rateable value, £1,667; the population in 1881 was 145.—Letters received through East Dereham. who is also rector of Shottesham, near Norwich, where he resides; the Rev. Theodore Budd, of St. Bees, is curate in charge. Here are a few modern plantations and a small decoy of nine acres. Many of the Paston letters were written from here, Margaret Paston, wife of John Paston, having inherited this place from her father, John Mauteby. Robert Fellowes esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is loamy; subsoil, sand and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,917 acres, chiefly arable, including 260 acres formerly extra-parochial; rateable value, £3,431; the population in 1881 was 121. The parish is a contributory district to the Filby and Runham School Board with two members.—Letters received through Yarmouth. Filby is the nearest money order office; telegraph offices at Ormsby & Caister.

building of brick and stone with four fronts, the interior of which, together with the chapel, is highly finished: there is a fine collection of valuable paintings: it was granted by the Norman Conqueror to the Bishop of Thetford, of whom it was held by Roger de Lyons, whose descendants assumed the name of Mealton, and sometimes signed themselves De Constable, from the office which they held under the bishop: this has been the seat of the Astleys for centuries; it stands in an extensive and well-wooded park, which is stocked with red and fallow deer: this was the second park in England where the red deer were introduced. Lord Hastings is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is light; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, turnips, barley and grass. The area is 2,710 acres; rateable value, £2,410; the population in 1881 was 118.

MENDHAM is a parish in Hoxne union, partly in this county but principally in Suffolk, and particulars will be found in "Kelly's Directory of Suffolk."

MERTON (anciently called Mere-tune, or Mere-town) is a parish 2 miles south from Watton station, 10 north from Thetford and 12 from Attleborough, situated on the road from Watton to Thetford, in the Western division of the county, hundred and union of Wayland, county court district of Attleborough, rural deanery of Breccles and archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter is situated in the park, about 300 yards north-east from the Hall: it is a structure of flint, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, tower and north and south porches: the chancel and nave are in the Decorated style, and have windows of uncommon beauty: the tower is circular and probably Early Norman; there are 3 bells: the pews are of oak, with carved poppy heads, and afford 160 sittings, many of the windows are filled with modern stained glass: there is a very fine brass still remaining, and also the blank matrices of many others, which tell of spoliation or neglect: the font cover (a handsome canopy of carved oak, the gift of Lord Walsingham) reaches nearly to the roof and is a copy of the old cover, which had fallen to decay. The register dates from the year 1564. The living is a rectory, yearly value £174, with 16 acres of glebe, and rectory house, a mile and a quarter north-east of the church, erected in 1851 by Lord Walsingham, the patron of the living; the present rector is the Rev. George Crabbe B.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge, who was presented in 1851. There are 5 acres of town land and 5 cottages, the rents of which are applied to parochial purposes. singham, is a noble mansion of red brick, in the Elizabethan style, built about the year 1613, on the site of a house which had been in the possession of the de Grey family since the middle of the fourteenth century, and previously of their ancestors by the female line, the Baynards, to whom the property was granted at the Conquest: some portion of the older buildings still remains: the house stands in a park about 2 miles in length, which, near the mansion, is studded with fine timber: the grounds are chiefly remarkable for the large collection of pines and firs, and for a noble oak of great antiquity, which measures 23 feet 4 inches in circumference at 6 feet from the ground. The Merton Hall estate comprehends the whole village of Merton, with the adjacent villages of Tottington, Sturston, Stanford and part of the parishes of Thompson and Watton. Lord Walsingham is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The land in this parish is naturally light and poor, on an average, perhaps, two feet of sand, with a clay or marl subsoil; but by bringing clay to the surface (for which purpose there is a clay pit in nearly every field), the soil has been much improved. The parish comprises 1,964 acres; rateable value, £1,575; and the population in 1881 was 170.

Parish Clerk, Robert Blanchflower.

METHWOLD is a parish and town, 4½ miles north-west from Stoke Ferry station on the Great Eastern railway and 6 north-west from Brandon, in the Western division of the county, Grimshoe hundred, Thetford union and county court district, rural deanery of Cranwich, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich, on the road from Brandon to Lynn. The church of St. George consists of a Perpendicular nave and aisles, and a Decorated chancel, the two side walls of which have also been pierced for Perpendicular windows: the tower, also Perpendicular, is surmounted by an octagon in stone, which carries an elegant stone spire, and has the bases of pinnacles remaining at its angles. The register dates from the year 1686. The living is a discharged vicarage, yearly value £340, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1873 by the Rev. John Denny Geddes B.A. of Hertford College, Oxford. There is a large Wesleyan chapel, built chiefly of flint in 1837; also a chapel for Primitive Methodists, a building of brick and stone, built in 1866. The charities amount to £67 yearly. There are six almshouses erected in 1880 by Mr. W. J. Coote, who left the rent of one dwelling-house for keeping them in good repair. Here is a reading and news room well supplied with newspapers and periodicals. Here is a sub-branch of Gurney's bank, at Thetford, open every Monday. A flourishing market for cattle and corn is held here on Mondays, and a fair for cattle is held on April 23rd. The warren which formerly covered 1,500 acres, is about half under cultivation, the remainder being used as a sheep walk. The Crown, in right of the Duchy of Lancaster, is owner of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is a mixture of fen peat, light loam, sandy and strong gault; subsoil, chalk and sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 13,912a. 3r. 9p.; rateable value, £12,083; the population in 1881 was, in Methwold High Town 902; in Hythe 190; and on the Fen 301; total 1,453.

METHWOLD HYPHE, 1½ miles west-by-north of the town, is part of the parish, and consists of a few farmhouses and one public-house. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. There are also a considerable number of houses along the Sams cut, in the south-western division of the fen, amounting to a hamlet, and generally known as POPPYLOT: a road was constructed through this district from Feltwell to Southery and opened in 1881.

MUNDESLEY (or MUNDSELEY) is a parish, bathing-place and pleasant little village on the coast, commanding a fine view of the North Sea, 8 miles south-east from Cromer and 5 north from North Walsham railway station, in the Northern division of the county, North Erpingham hundred, Erpingham union, North Walsham county court district, rural deanery of Repps, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich: it is much frequented by visitors as a watering place during the summer, having a very fine beach for bathing. Although no port, it is a landing place, where vessels load and unload on the beach cargoes of coal, corn and timber: some fishing is carried on. The church of All Saints, partly in ruins, is seated on a lofty part of the cliff and was originally a fine building, but the tower and chancel have gone to decay: a very small portion of the nave is, however, in sufficient repair to have divine service performed in it. The register dates from about the year 1725. The living is a rectory, tithe-rent charge £170, with about 6 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Duchy of Lancaster, and held since 1858 by the Rev. Edward Thomas Scott. A Mission chapel was erected in 1845. Lord Suffield is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are William Thomas Mullen esq. John Mack esq. and George

NARBOROUGH (or NARBURGH) is a parish, station on the Lynn and Dereham railway, and very ancient village, in the Western division of the county, South Greenhoe hundred, Swaffham union and county court district, rural deanery of Cranwich, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich: it is delightfully situated on the south bank of the river Nar, which is navigable for small craft from Lynn, from which place Narborough is  $8\frac{1}{2}$  miles east-south-east,  $10\frac{1}{2}$  from London and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  north-west from Swaffham. The church of All Saints is partly in the Early English and partly in the Perpendicular style: it was entirely restored and re-seated in 1865, and consists of a chancel built of flint, nave of great antiquity and aisles, with square embattled tower with 1 bell: it contains several monuments, principally to the Spelman family, which are much admired: there are two stained windows in the south aisle, one in memory of the father of the present vicar, the other to the late Herbert C. Marriott esq.; there is also one in the north aisle, of mixed glass, some of which is old, and the shield of the Spelman arms is contained in it. The register dates from the year 1596. The living is a vicarage, second church, which was dedicated to St. Ethelbert. The allotment for the poor is 3a. 2r. let at £6, they have also a yearly rent-charge of 29s. left by Thomas Spooner in 1680, together with 10s. left by a donor unknown. Viscount Canterbury, who is lord of the manor, Jonathan Farrow esq. and Edward Stephen Osmond Clarke esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, sand and brick earth. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,527 acres; rated at £2,253; the population in 1881 was 295.

consolidated with Narford, joint yearly value £508, with residence and 120 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1864 by the Rev. William Edward Allfree M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. The Wesleyans have a chapel, built by Henry Boyce esq. Here are some charities, amounting to £45 yearly, left by the Rev. Henry Spelman, late vicar. A very considerable trade is carried on by the Messrs. Marriott, as merchants in coal, corn and timber. Traces of a high entrenchment connected with a fosse and rampart may be traced for 8 miles. Narborough Hall, the property of Joseph Critchley Martin esq. lord of the manor, is a noble ancient building, situated in a well-wooded park: the other principal landowners are J. L. Marriott esq. Henry Boyce esq. W. G. Winearls esq. and H. Villebois esq. The soil is sandy; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 3,154 acres; rateable value, £3,765; and the population in 1881 was 435.

NEATISHEAD is a parish and village  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Wroxham station on the Northern Walsham line of the Great Eastern railway, and  $10\frac{1}{2}$  north-east from Norwich, situated between the navigable Bure and Ant, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Tunstead, Smallburgh union, North Walsham county court district, rural deanery of Waxham, archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich. The church of St. Peter is a small ancient building of flint and stone: the present building forms only a part of the original one, which, being in a very dilapidated state, a great portion was taken down in 1790, and the remainder, which is very little more than the original chancel put into good repair: the church had originally a tower with 3 bells, which, being in a bad state, were, at the time of the above-mentioned restoration, put away and 1 new bell put up in their stead: within the last few years a new east window of cathedral tinted glass was added, by subscription, and six almost entirely new side windows of the same, were put in by R. Allen esq. of Saxlingham, all being strictly in the style of the original ones—good Perpendicular—and the roof was boarded and stained inside, besides other improvements. The register dates from the year 1676. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, including 46 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1859 by the Rev. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The fuel allotment consists of 12 acres. Opposite the church is a beautiful building, in the Swiss Cottage style, erected in 1873, by their Royal Highnesses for the extra guests at Sandringham. The public road has been diverted through the village, in order to enlarge the park. A number of picturesque cottages have been built in this parish by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, principally for the use of persons employed on his estate at Sandringham. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is sandy and chalk; subsoil, chalk, carr stone and gravel. The land is cultivated on the four-course system. The area is 1,230 acres; rateable value, £1,516; the population in 1881 was 329.

NORDELPH, see UPWELL.

NORTHWOLD is a parish and village, 3 miles south-east from Stoke Ferry station of the Great Eastern railway,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  north from Brandon, and 95 from London, on the road from Theiford to Lynn and on the river Wissey, in the Western division of the county, Grimshoe hundred, Thetford union and county court district, Cranwich rural deanery, Norfolk archdeaconry and Norwich diocese. The church of St. Andrew is a building in the Perpendicular and Early English styles, having chancel, nave and aisles, and tower, built in the fourteenth century, containing 8 bells and a modern clock: the tower and church are built principally of flint, and the tower has various devices inlaid with this material, and its top ornamented with eight pinnacles: the roof of the nave is of oak, painted and richly gilt and ornamented with angels with extended wings. The register dates from the year 1650. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £896, with 66 acres of glebe and house, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1880 by the Rev. William Cowper Johnson M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge, hon. canon of Norwich. There is a large and handsome Wesleyan chapel, and one for Primitive Methodists. There are almshouses for 9 poor people, erected by the late Mrs. Norman in 1874 in memory of her husband, the Rev. Charles Manners Richard Norman M.A. late rector of this parish, and endowed by her with £500 £3 per cent. Consols for keeping them in good repair. The charities are of £170 yearly value, and there were 118 acres of fuel allotment, which were by the Enclosure Commissioners allotted to the cottages. A fair is held yearly, on the 30th of November and following day. There is a large chalk pit in this parish. The village is most pleasantly situated, and contains several very pretty residences. The old school is now used as a village hall, where parochial meetings and entertainments are held. Here is a reading room, endowed by the late Mrs. Norman with £500 £3 per cent. Consols; it has a library of 150 volumes. H. S. Partridge esq. who is lord of the manor, R. Carter esq. and W. Amhurst Tysen Amherst esq. M.P., J.P. and Mr. John

NORWICH.

NORWICH is in the east centre of the oval which forms the shape of the county of Norfolk: it is on the navigable river Wensum, just above the junction with the Yare: it is a city and county of itself, the seat of a bishop's see, municipal and parliamentary borough, assize town of the shire, place of election and polling place for the Southern division of the county, a union and county court town and railway station; it is 113½ miles from London, 20 west from Yarmouth, 48½ east-by-south from Lynn, 23½ west-north-west from Lowestoft, 53¾ from Ely, 68½ from Cambridge, 45½ from Ipswich, 62½ from Colchester and 43 from Bury St. Edmunds.

There is connection with the general railway system of the county by the Great Eastern railway and its connections, and local railways to Yarmouth, Lowestoft, Lynn, Wells, Hunstanton, North Walsham and Cromer, also the new Eastern and Midlands railway to Lynn. There are two independent channels to the sea, by the river Yare to Yarmouth and by the Waveney to Lowestoft. As a manufacturing city, no less than by its great population, it is one of the most important places in England.

Norwich has not lacked historians, and all concur in ascribing to it an origin of considerable antiquity: in 575 it is said to have been fortified by Uffa, the first king of the East Angles, who built the castle and made it his residence; and in 642 Anna, king of the East Angles, kept his court in the royal palace at the Castle. In the time of Alfred the Great it was attacked by the Danes and became the capital of Guthrum. The place rose to importance, and had a mint; and in the reign of Edward the Confessor it had 25 churches and 1,320 burgesses. In 952 Eldred made Norwich a borough, governed by a sergeant or officer, appointed by the king to keep his courts and collect his revenues. In 1094 Bishop Herbert de Losinga moved the see here from Thetford, and founded and endowed the cathedral and built the episcopal palace. In 1336 a number of Flemish weavers, driven out of their country by an inundation, settled here, and greatly improved the worsted and clothing trades: in 1565 a further immigration of artisans took place, in consequence of the persecutions in the Netherlands. In 1348 Norwich was visited by a pestilence, which carried off 57,000 persons in seven months out of the then population of 70,000. In 1403 the city received a new charter from Henry IV. by which it was for ever to be governed by a mayor and sheriffs elected by the citizens, and thereby became a county of itself. William Appleyard was the first mayor of Norwich. In 1413 the sixty common councilmen and twenty-four aldermen were first instituted, who constituted the corporation.

The city and county of the city is now governed by a corporation, consisting of a mayor, sixteen aldermen and forty-eight councillors, with a sheriff, under-sheriff, recorder judge of the borough court, town clerk, clerk of the peace, coroner, gaoler, superintendent of police, four sergeants-at-mace, water bailiff and bellman. The revenues of the corporation, exclusive of the amount received from borough rates, are about £12,000.

There is a separate commission of the peace for the city, holding quarter sessions and daily sessions: the borough court is held every day: there are also a court of pleas and court of conscience.

The city returns two members to Parliament.

In 1867 an Act of Parliament was obtained for draining the city, which has been completed at a cost of about £120,000: the plan was to construct two main drains, one on each side of the river Wensum, to carry the sewage to Trowse, where a pumping station has been erected to pump the sewage over land, at Crown Point, that has been purchased for that purpose.

The Cathedral of the Holy Trinity, founded by Bishop Herbert Losinga, in 1096, after the removal of the see from Thetford to Norwich in 1094, is a stately edifice, principally in the Norman style, and invaluable as an illustration of the pure Norman ground plan, which it retains in a manner almost unchanged since its erection. (1.) The choir with its aisles, the transept, and the central tower, were completed by the founder, who carried his work as far as the altar of the Holy Cross (afterwards St. William's) in the nave; Bishop Everard, who succeeded him in 1120, continued the nave and aisles westward, and in 1150, the remains of St. William, the boy saint (crucified by the Jews in 1137, or March 10th, 1144) were translated into the apse; a fire in 1171 damaged the structure, but it was repaired by Bishop de Furber (1151) and John of Oxford, bishop from 1175, finished the work continued by Everard; in 1243-58, Bishop Walter de Suffield erected a Lady chapel at the extreme east end; this building, a rectangular structure of considerable size, 57 by 36 feet, was, however, removed by Dean Gardiner in the 16th century to save the cost of repairs. Violent conflicts between the monks and the populace, which broke out on August 11, 1272, resulted in the partial destruction of the cathedral and its adjacent buildings, but in 1275, the citizens were ordered to pay 3,000 marks towards its restoration, and on Advent Sunday, 1278, it was reconsecrated by Bishop Walter (or William) de Middleton (1278-88) in the presence of Edward I. and his queen; a spire of wood, covered with lead, erected by Bishop Ralph Walpole in 1295, and blown down by a terrible storm of wind, January 15, 1362, was superseded in 1364-9 by a new spire of stone, finished by Bishop Thomas Percy (1354-70) and repaired by Bishop Walter

Lyhart (1445-72); the cloisters, begun by Wulpole in 1297, were finished in 1430, the south walk being the work of Bishop Salmon (1299-1325) who also erected the greater part of the chancel house, the palace hall, three bays of the gallery, and a chantry chapel: about the middle of the 14th century two chapels, one on the north side and the other on the south side, were erected, about midway between the transepts and the side chapels of the apse, openings being cut through the walls, and Decorated stone arches, supported on columns, inserted so as to connect these, like the other chapels, with the aisles; St. Andrew's chapel, on the north side, is entirely destroyed, and that on the south side, the Beauchamp chapel, built by Bishop Lyhart, has lost its original character, having been altered from the Decorated to the Perpendicular style during the 15th century: considerable alterations were made in the upper part of the presbytery in the middle of the 14th century, about which time Bishop Percy erected the present clerestory. Bishop James Goldwell (1472-99) spent 2,200 marks upon the repairs of the spire (struck by lightning in 1463), the erection of a chantry chapel, and the reconstruction of the vaulting of the choir, to sustain which, he reared a series of flying buttresses, adding a clerestory in the Perpendicular style: in the middle of the 15th century Bishop Alnwyk built the present west entrance to the nave and the large window over it, and his successor, Bishop Lyhart, the stone vaulting of the nave; and early in the 16th century the north and south transepts were vaulted with stone by Bishop Richard Nix (1500-36). (2.) The cathedral, as at present existing, is a cruciform structure, consisting of apsidal choir of four bays, with aisles and lateral chapels; transepts, with an ancient apsidal chantry or sacristy projecting eastward from the north wing, nave of fourteen bays, and a central tower with spire, 315 feet in total height, and containing 5 bells; the total length, formerly, with the Lady chapel, 464 feet, is now 407 feet, the width, including the aisles, 97 feet, and the height to the centre of nave vaulting, 69 feet; the vaulting over the presbytery is 83 feet in height from the floor; the breadth across the transepts 178 feet, and the height of vaulting 73 feet. (3.) The choir terminates eastward in a pentagonal apse, the lower portion of which still retains the double-arched entrance, which formerly led to the now destroyed Lady chapel; westward, the choir is continued two bays into the nave, but the stalls do not reach further than the lantern; these, 62 in number, are of oak, in the Perpendicular style, canopied and pinnacled, and have curious misericords; in the central bay of the apse, upon a small platform, are fragments of the Bishop's throne, and on the pavements and the nearest pillars traces of the three steps which led up to it, according to the Basilican arrangement; the clerestory is mixed Decorated and Perpendicular, a vaulting with elaborate bosses covering the central avenue; the windows, each of four lights, are set between canopied niches; the choir aisles are continued round the apse, forming an eastern processional path, which opens into two radiating chapels of circular form, each with a semi-circular apse projecting eastward. The Jesus chapel on the north, and St. Luke's on the south, the latter serving also as the parish church of St. Mary in the Marsh, which originally stood a short distance south-east of the cathedral, within the precincts, and was destroyed in 1563; its Perpendicular font now stands in this chapel; opening from the south choir aisle is the Beauchamp chapel, a Decorated work, and there was a corresponding chapel of St. Stephen attached to the north choir aisle, which has at the east end an Early Decorated porch-like gallery, probably the chamber of an anchorite, and once communicating with an exterior building, called the Sanctuary men's chamber, or Relics chapel; the eagle lectern is Late Decorated; a rich screen on either side of the choir, with niches, canopies, and an open parapet rising to the floor of the triforium, conceals the pillars and aisles, and the choir screen of Bishop Browne encloses it at the west end. (4.) The transept is without aisles, but has in the north wing the eastern apsidal chapel of St. Anne; the corresponding chapel in the south wing has given place to a Decorated sacristy of the 15th century, vaulted, with an upper chamber; the vaulting bosses of the transept exhibit, in a series of nearly 90 sculptures, the story of the Nativity, but the work is later than and inferior to that of the nave; the south wing is finished on the exterior with square embattled turrets on either side the gable, arched at the summit, and terminating in crocketed pinnacles. (5.) Above the crossing, raised on massive piers, rises the magnificent tower, the loftiest and richest example of a Norman tower in England; it consists of four stages, three of which are surrounded with arcading, and the fourth displays patterns of lozenges and circles alternately; the Decorated battlements are adorned with shields, and at the angles are square embattled turrets, with crocketed spirelets, of the same date as the great octangular spire, which is adorned with a double row of circles, five on each face, richly crocketed, and capped with an elegant finial. (6.) The nave, in its simple majesty, is the largest, grandest, and most interesting of any in this country, but is out of all proportion, as regards length, to the rest of the fabric; on either side are seven double bays, with piers, alternately round and square, supporting an open triforium, of disproportionate size, the arches of which, heavy and circular, are too nearly of a height with those of the arcade below; the painted windows of the clerestory, each of two lights, appear through the centre arch of an arcading, with three arches in each bay; and above these spreads a superb vaulting of stone, of Perpendicular date, adorned with 328 elaborately sculptured bosses, illustrating the history of the world, from the Creation to the Doom, which have been admirably described in the fine work published by Dean Goulburn in 1876. (7.) The south aisle is of uncommon height and has three storeys, with an embattled parapet; in the north aisle is a door leading to the green-yard, where there was anciently a preaching cross; both aisles have been filled with late tracery. (8.) The west front, although possessing the advantages afforded by a surrounding open space and forest trees, is wanting in dignity and importance, and consists simply of a gable between two turrets crowned with spirelets, while on either side extend the ends of the aisles, three storeys in height, with embattled parapets, and the original Norman turrets flanking each angle; the chief entrance is through a recessed doorway within a square head, with four canopied niches, above which is a rich Perpendicular window of nine trefoiled lights, filled in 1854 with stained glass, as a memorial to Edward Stanley D.D. Bishop of Norwich, 1837-49; a small light is set in the head of the gable, which terminates in a cross. (9.) The cloisters adjoining the cathedral on the south side, and in part occupying the angle between the nave and south transept, date from 1297-1430, and are only inferior in size to those of Salisbury, being 177 feet in length on the west and east sides and 176 feet on the north and south, with a height of 15 feet; at the north-west angle are a slype, and outer or great parlour; in the west alley are the Early English door of the guest-house and the lavatories, formed by enclosing arches recessed in the wall, with a low screen, panelled and enriched with carved foliage, while at the back are narrow canopied niches, enclosing pedestals; in the East alley are the processional door, with radiating tabernacles, three niches for book amburies, and the beautiful triple doorway of the now destroyed chapter house, which projected 80 feet eastward and had a polygonal apse; the vaulting of the cloisters is particularly fine, and has richly sculptured bosses; the dark cloister at the south-east angle led to the infirmary; three late Norman pillars of its hall, built by Bishop John of Oxford 1175-1200, still remain; west of the cloisters are a guest hall and cellarer's apartments, and between these intervenes a Norman building, the purpose of which is unknown; on the south side were the refectory and kitchen. (10.) Immediately opposite to the west front of the cathedral is the Erpingham gate, erected between 1411 and 1420 by Sir Thomas Erpingham; it is a very early example of the ornamental Perpendicular flint work, peculiar to the eastern counties, and forms a stately structure, with two demi-octangular buttresses profusely sculptured, and has thirty-eight small statues, as well as shields, figures of birds and foliage, and over the entrance the effigy of the founder, with his motto, "Yenk," i. e. "thank"; the chancel chapel of St. John the Evangelist, standing obliquely between this gate and the cathedral, was built by Bishop Salmon in 1316, and consists of a chapel built over a crypt, which has a double row of columns 14 feet high, and many-foiled round windows; some distance south of these stands St. Ethelbert's or the Court Gate, built by the citizens about 1272, with a hanging or upper chapel of black flint in the Decorated style. (11.) On the north side, in St. Martin's plain, is the Palace or St. Martin's Gate, erected by Bishop Alnwyk, about 1430; near it is the Bishop's Palace, a considerable pile, dating from the foundation of the church, and embracing almost every subsequent style: very extensive restorations and alterations have been carried out by the present prelate, Dr. Pelham, under the able guidance of Ewan Christian esq.; and the private chapel which stands a little in advance of the palace eastward, was built by Bishop Salmon about 1320, and was thoroughly restored and refitted: during the prelate of Bishop Hall (1641-61) this chapel suffered much from the hands of the Puritans, who destroyed all the paintings, demolished all the stained windows, and stripped and sold the lead from the roof; it was, however, restored by his successor, Bishop Reynolds (1661-76) about the middle of the 17th century: in the palace gardens are the remains of a Decorated chapel, 130 by 30 feet, and of the Palace hall 100 by 60 feet, built in 1299-1325, and destroyed by Cromwell, as well as the basement of a gate-house erected by Bishop Salmon, and a kitchen of the 13th century. (12.) The principal monuments in the cathedral are those of the following: Bishop Herbert Losinga, ob. 1091, a modern altar-tomb erected in 1682; Prior W. Walsham, 1218; Sir Thomas Erpingham, 1420, low tomb; Sir Thomas Wyndham, vice-admiral, 1421, an altar tomb; Bishop John Wakeryng, 1426; Bishop James Goldwell, 1499, with canopied effigy; Sir William Boleyn, 1505, great-grandfather of Queen Elizabeth; Sir John Hobart, attorney-general to Henry VII; Bishop Richard Nykke or Nyx, 1536, a flat tomb, arched over, with the iron work for the sacring bell of the chantry chapel; Bishop John Parkhurst, 1575; Lady Elizabeth Calthorp, 1582; and Chancellor Miles Spencer, an altar tomb of the 16th century on which the tenants formerly paid their rents; there is also a statue in Carrara marble, by Chantrey, to Bishop Henry Bathurst, who died in 1837. (13.) In the sacristy the table of the reredos of the Jesus chapel (1380-1400) has pictures on panel, of the 14th century, in five compartments, representing the closing scenes in the Life of our Lord; the heads are treated in the Italian manner, and the grouping is that of the Siennese school. (14.) Many important internal restorations have been carried out in recent years by Dr. Goulburn, the present dean, and a new clock with chimés, presented by Mrs. Goulburn, has been placed in the tower.

The parish churches are numerous and all ancient.

All Saints, in Westlegate street, is a small flint building, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle and a tower containing 3 bells: the church has a richly-sculptured octagonal font and a few mural tablets, and will seat 150 persons. The register dates from the year 1573. The living is a rectory, consolidated with St. Julian, net yearly value £250, with 163 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Rev. Henry Clement Sculthorpe B.A. vicar of Beeley, Derbyshire, and held since 1868 by the Rev. William Kant LL.B. of London University and M.A. of Glasgow.

St. Andrew's, in Broad street, in size the second parish church in the city, is a large flint and stone Perpendicular structure, rebuilt A.D. 1506, consisting of a chancel, lofty nave, aisles and square tower containing 10 bells: there are several ancient monuments, one to Sir John Suckling and his wife; another to Francis Rugg, thrice mayor of Norwich: there are sedilia, a credence, a fine-toned organ and several stained windows: a fine clock, with Cambridge chimés, has been lately (1883) added. There are sittings for 700. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £265 from 121 acres of glebe land, in the gift of the parishioners and held since 1856 by the Rev. Arthur Charles Copeman M.B., T.A.K.C.L. honorary canon of Norwich cathedral, rural dean of Norwich and Bishop's commissary.

St. Augustine's church, in St. Augustine street, is a plain ancient building, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and square tower. Sittings for 240. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value £170, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter and held since 1877 by the Rev. William Alexander Elder B.D. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge.

St. Benedict's church, in St. Benedict's street, is an ancient building of flint, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle and a round tower with octagon top containing 3 bells: the edifice has been restored. King Edward the Sixth's Grammar school is situated west of the cathedral: it was founded in 1547: by decree of the Court of Chancery, in 1858, the school was changed in its arrangements and it is under the management of 16 trustees or governors: the Rev. Canon Heaviside is now chairman and J. J. Colman esq. M.P. vice-chairman of the governing body; the foundation is divided into a "Grammar" and "Middle" school, with entirely distinct school buildings and masters: the fees payable at the Grammar school are £16 10s. yearly, and at the Middle school £6 6s. a year; several valuable exhibitions and prizes are provided for from the endowments: admissions are obtained by application to the governors: boys are eligible when eight years of age; the masters also take boarders: the Grammar school is in the Close: the Rev. O. W. Tancock M.A. is head master: many names of eminence are to be found upon the list of pupils; amongst others, Archbishops Parker and Tenison, the late Sir James Brooke, Rajah of Sarawak, and Horatio Viscount Nelson, who for a short time was a pupil of the school: a statue to his memory has been placed in the Upper cloister, facing the portico of the school: the Middle school is in Bridge street, of which Thomas Richmond Pinder esq. LL.B. is head master.

The Diocesan Training Institution situated on St. George's plain, was founded in 1852, for training schoolmistresses, and is under Government inspection and in connection with the National Society: it is supported by grants from the Committee of Council on Education and voluntary subscriptions.

The Boys' Hospital, St. Edmund's, endowed with about £1,600 a year from estates and funded property, provides for the education of 100 boys; and the Girls' Hospital, New Lakenham, has an income of about £900 from estates and funded property, for the maintenance, education and training for domestic service of between 30 and 40 girls. Norwich Asylum and School for the Blind was first started by Thomas Tawell esq. of this city, who, about the year 1805, purchased a mansion in Magdalen street, with four acres of garden ground attached, and offered them as the basis of an institution for the benefit of the indigent blind; this establishment was enlarged in 1872, and now receives 50 inmates. The Hon. and Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Norwich is the president. Norman's Charity school, founded by Alderman Norman in 1723 for the sons of persons related to himself or his first wife, endowed with over £700 a year, provides for the education of about 90 scholars, and each foundation scholar, in addition to a free commercial education, receives a payment of £8 yearly, and at the age of 14 an apprentice fee of £15, and at the age of 22 a gift of £10 to commence business with. Here are schools for nearly all denominations.

There is a Magdalen Asylum or Female Home, and many minor charities for distribution in money and kind.

The Guildhall is a large and ancient building, chiefly of flint, and was built in the fifteenth century: it contains portraits of early mayors and benefactors, a sword presented by Nelson, and the city regalia. The assizes and quarter sessions for the city and daily petty sessions are held here. The city police and fire brigade occupy the basement.

St. Andrew's Hall, whose history, like its architecture and internal decorations, is so completely a combination of civic and ecclesiastical, was the nave of the conventual church of the Black Friars, and now forms one of the finest Gothic halls in the kingdom: it contains a numerous collection of civic portraits: it is used for the musical festivals and city feasts, and for political, religious, or commercial meetings, permission from the mayor and town council being first obtained: an organ by Messrs. Bryceson has been erected in the hall.

The Corn Exchange was built in 1826, at a cost of £6,000, and is in the Grecian style: the roof is glass: it contains full-sized portraits of the founder, John Culley esq. and Thomas W. Coke, afterwards Earl of Leicester.

The Castle is of ancient foundation, and from its elevated position is one of the most striking buildings in the city: it consists of some Saxon arches, and a great Norman keep, 110 feet long, 92 feet wide, and 70 feet 9 inches high, surmounted by battlements: this keep, with the other buildings, to which additions have been made, is now used as the county gaol: around the castle are some well planted gardens and a common terrace walk above, commanding a panoramic view of the city and neighbourhood: the principal remains of the ancient building are the shell of the keep, a massive structure on the summit of an artificial eminence, and Bigod's tower, a fine specimen of the Norman style: over the fosse, an ancient stone bridge of one circular arch, of 40 feet span, is still entire, and is considered to be of Saxon architecture: the outer walls, of which only some small portions are remaining, formerly enclosed an area of 23 acres, on part of which the new county gaol was erected: it contains 225 cells, and was erected in 1822. There are remains of the White Friars' convent, and of the Benedictine nunnery at Carrow: also curious houses, called Falstaff's Palace and Surrey Houses.

The Shire Hall, adjoining the Castle, is a spacious edifice, erected in 1822: the assizes and quarter sessions for the county are held here: this being the county town, the election of knights of the shire regularly takes place here. There is a subterranean passage and ascending shaft communicating with the gaol in the Castle.

The County Police Station is to the north-west of the Shire Hall.

The Volunteer Drill Hall, situate in Chapel Field, is a large building, in the Castellated Gothic style, built of flint and red brick, opened in the year 1866: it is 144 feet long and 62 feet wide: the tower is part of the old city wall.

The Agricultural Hall, at the top of the Prince of Wales road, has been built in the Italian style of red stone and red brick, and has in front a pediment with the arms of the city cut in red stone: the entrance is under a glazed light iron roof, supported on columns: the basement of the building contains kitchen, dining room, &c.; on the ground floor to the left are the buffet and ladies' room, and on the right the board room, secretary's and other offices: the main hall gives 120 feet of length and 98 feet width, with pens of wrought iron, all movable: the floor is paved with wood blocks on concrete and blue Staffordshire tiles: on three sides of the hall are galleries supported by strong iron columns with rolled iron girders and joists: an ornamental cast iron railing runs round, and cranes are provided on the east and west sides for raising exhibits: the entrance for stock is at the south end and west side, and there are side doors in the main front for approaching the music and assembly rooms above: the semi-roof over the main hall is constructed of wrought-iron, the girders, supports, and spandrels being filled with ornamental scroll-work, surmounted by a skylight the length of the hall: ventilation is established by louver ardings on either side: this part of the hall is lighted by three and cornice, and the galleries by star pendant burners: the staircase from the main hall to the galleries are of pitch-pine, with turned ornamental balusters, newels, and massive-moulded hand-rails: over the main entrance and offices is the music, or concert or assembly room, which is approached from the left of the front entrance by a stone staircase, and runs the whole length of the front, while it is 48 ft. in width: a stage has been erected: there are seats for an audience of some 800. The room is lighted by nine windows in front and by small lunette lights above, and by six brass gaseliers: the roof over the main hall has been executed by Messrs. John Butler and Sons, of Stanningley, near Leeds: the bricks were supplied by Mr. Charles Cunneill, of Totton, and the ornamental and moulded bricks by Mr. Tanton from his works at Cossey: the stone carving was the work of Mr. Allen of Cathedral street: the slates for the roof by Ashton and Green: the building is heated by hot water, in pipes and coils which are concealed by ornamental cast-iron, with marble tops: the cooking apparatus is capable of providing for 100 or 200 persons, and with the ironwork generally throughout the building is the work of Messrs. Barnard, Bishop and Barnards of the Norfolk Iron-works. Messrs. Lacey were the contractors for the erection of the building, and J. B. Pearce esq. the architect.

The General Post Office at the top of Prince of Wales' road is a handsome building with portico, built by the late Sir Robert Harvey for a bank.

Chapel Field has been converted into beautiful gardens by the Corporation, in the centre of which is an elaborate iron pavilion, designed by the late Thomas Jeckyll esq. and manufactured by Messrs Barnard, Bishop and Barnards, which was exhibited at the Paris and Philadelphia Exhibitions. The Police Band performs here every Thursday during the season.

The Market place is about 600 feet long and 340 feet wide, and contains butchers' stalls, and a fish, butter and vegetable market. A statue of the Duke of Wellington is in the centre of the Market place. There is a seed and skin market. The markets are held every Wednesday and Saturday, the latter being for corn and cattle: it is held on an open space called the Castle meadow, opposite the Castle, and is usually thronged with cattle. A large fair for horses and cattle, called Tombland Fair, is held on the day before Good Friday and pleasure fairs are held at Easter and Whitsuntide.

Bethel Hospital is in Bethel street, erected in 1718 by Mrs. Chapman, agreeably to the request of her deceased husband, the Rev. J. Chapman, rector of Thorpe, near Norwich, for the habitation of poor lunatics, and not for natural born idiots: for its endowment she left, by will, all her personal estates to seven trustees, giving to them the sole management of the asylum, for as many poor lunatics as the revenue will afford: the building has been enlarged at different periods, and will now hold 80 patients; the income is about £2,000 yearly.

Heigham Hall, situated at Upper Heigham, is a private lunatic asylum, with extensive grounds; John Ferra Watson is the proprietor.

The Norfolk County Lunatic Asylum is at Thorpe, under which place a description will be found.

The Norfolk and Norwich Hospital was founded in 1770, it was rebuilt in 1882: the first stone having been laid by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, 17th June, 1872: the new hospital has been constructed partly on the old site and partly on the piece of land known as Flint House; the building is on the Pavilion system, the plan in the form of H, the administrative block being in the centre, facing St. Stephen's road, and containing an entrance hall, library and consulting room, surgery, dispensary, board-room and secretary's office, waiting and porter's room; the outpatients' department is now entirely distinct from the working portion of the hospital, and has been formed in the old north-east wing, which has been further adapted for the purposes of the anatomical museum and nurses' dormitories: in the rear of the new building is a Gothic chapel. The new building was opened by their R.H.H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, on Monday, August 20th, 1883.

The corporation of Norwich have built a Lunatic Asylum for the city, at Hellesdon, distant about two miles, to supersede the one formerly used in Infirmary road: the new building was erected to hold 350 patients and the administrative portion is large enough to work an asylum for 500 or 600 inmates: the plan is on what is known as the "block system"—detached buildings connected together by communicating corridors and surrounded by airing courts—and there is one peculiar feature in the arrangements which has never been carried out in any other lunatic asylum; i.e. the upper floors are entirely empty during the day and the ground floor during the night, thus giving perfect ventilation to each story every twelve hours: the cost of the works has exceeded £60,000, including the purchase of the site and furniture: the architect is Mr. R. Makilwaine Phipson F.S.A.: there are about 50 acres of land attached to the asylum, the cultivation of which is entrusted to the patients, under direction, with very satisfactory results: the building is lighted by gas supplied from the Norwich gas works: the water is pumped up by steam from a well 100 feet deep on the premises: there are about 100 single rooms, and the other 250 inmates are associated together in dormitories containing from 4 to 16 patients each: in 1861 a mortuary and stables were built near the entrance lodge, also two semi-detached cottages for the artisans: the asylum was opened and organised by the first and present superintendent, Dr. William Harris F.R.C.S.

St. Giles', or the Great Hospital, Bishopsgate street, St. Helen's, is of ancient foundation and contains 93 aged men and 88 women, who are boarded and lodged; the income is about £7,000 a year.

Doughty's Hospital accommodates 24 poor men and 19 women, and was thoroughly restored and some new buildings added in 1869.

The Norwich Public Subscription Library is on Guildhall hill, and contains 50,000 volumes, and a Law Library, with 4,000 volumes.

The Dean and Chapter Library is in the Close, and consists of 3,200 volumes for the use of the clergy.

The Norwich Free Library at the corner of St. Andrew's and Duke streets is a large and handsome building, erected and opened in 1857 at an outlay of £10,000: it includes large rooms for the Museum and Literary Institution: a Lending Library on the ground floor, of 7,000 volumes, open every day except sundays and thursdays, from 11 a.m. till 3 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.: a spacious reading room on the first floor (measuring 45 ft. by 31) contains the books known as the City Library, 1,800 volumes, and a reference library of 1,100 volumes, also a good supply of London and provincial newspapers, reviews, magazines, periodicals and directories: this room is open every day except sundays from 10 a.m. till 9.30 p.m. The School of Art is situated at the top of the building, where classes are held in connection with South Kensington, as also the instruments of the Norwich Meteorological Society.

The Norfolk and Norwich Literary Institution was established in 1822 and contains a valuable collection of upwards of 27,000 volumes; the annual subscription to subscribers without shares is £2 2s. and to shareholders £1 11s. 6d.; the original price of the shares was £5 5s.: a complete alphabetical catalogue of the entire collection was issued early in 1870 and an appendix, with recent additions, is published annually; the number of subscribers is 300.

The Norwich Medico-Chirurgical Society has a library of about 5,000 volumes of medical and surgical works.

The Norwich Museum was founded in 1824 as a scientific collection only; but in 1845 and subsequent years, it was gradually thrown open to the public: it contains collections of curiosities from foreign countries, a very fine ornithological collection, of which the raptorial, or birds of prey, is considered to be one of the finest in Europe: there are numerous specimens of birds frequenting the broads or meres of the county: there are various anatomical specimens of extinct animals, a very fine collection of fossils, the products of the county, many of which have been dredged from the German Ocean by the Norfolk fishermen; these include many bones and teeth of the elephant, mastodon &c.

The Theatre is large and convenient. Noverre's Assembly Room, 70 feet by 35, is hired occasionally for concerts, for which it is well adapted, having been built on acoustic principles, well ventilated and opens on a well-kept lawn, with conservatory and ante-rooms, with spacious entrances and separate ways of egress. Norwich is a good school of music and has several local societies for its cultivation. There are horticultural exhibitions. Norwich has produced several eminent painters, particularly Old Crome.

Norwich is within the Eastern military district, the head quarters of which is at Colchester.

The Cavalry Barracks, at Pockthorpe, occupy the site of the old manor house: they are handsome red brick buildings, surrounded by a high wall, enclosing an area of 10 acres, constructed for 440 men of all ranks, and about 300 horses. There are also barracks for the West Norfolk Militia, which forms the 3rd Battalion of the Norfolk Regiment, the depot of which is Yarmouth.

There are four banks and a savings bank. Messrs. Gurneys, Birkbeck, Barclay and Buxton, in Bank plain; the National Provincial Bank of England in London street; the London and Provincial Bank Limited, in the Old Hay-market, and Lacon (Sir Edmund K. bart.), Lacons, Youell and Co. Market place. The Savings bank is at the corner of Old Haymarket.

A Chamber of Agriculture was established in 1868.

The most flourishing period in the recent history of Norwich manufactures occurred during the middle of the last century, when fabrics of almost every kind were made, and, next to Manchester, London and Glasgow, it was one of the largest seats of the weaving trade, which has derived fresh vigour from the introduction of the factory system. The chief productions are bombazines, crapes, gauzes, challis, mousselin-de-laine, fillover shawls, silk shawls, bandannas, camlets, mohair, paramattas, poplins, barèges, glove cloths, sewing cotton, coach lace, horsehair, sacking and sailcloth. There are several large foundries; agricultural implements, steam boilers, galvanised wire netting, iron fencing and iron gates are extensively made here, and the proximity of the city to the rivers Wensum and Yare gives great facility for transit. There are also dyehouses, foundries, machine works, tanneries, five large breweries, malikilns, coach works, rope works, chemical works, soaperies, paper mills, artificial manure works, extensive brick, tile and drain pipe works; the boot and shoe trade employs some thousands of hands and now has become one of the staple trades of the city. The goods are chiefly exported by the rivers to Yarmouth and Lowestoft, and the rail affords facility for the rapid transit of goods to the metropolis.

Here are the extensive premises of Messrs. J and J. Colman, who employ nearly two thousand hands in the manufacture of mustard, starch, blue and corn flour; the Carrow works are situated just outside the King Street Gates, on the banks of the river Wensum. A short distance from the gates a school has been erected by Messrs. Colman for the children of the workpeople in their employ.

The Norwich Vinegar Works and distillery of Messrs. Hills and Underwood, situated in the Prince of Wales's road and close to Thorpe station, are by far the largest of the kind in East Anglia, and were established in 1762, when a small manufactory for vinegar was erected on a part of the site now occupied by the present extensive range of buildings: the business has gradually increased until it has reached its present proportions: it includes the distillation and rectifying of gin, a branch scarcely less important than the manufacture of vinegar. British cordials and liqueurs are also manufactured here: the demand for these articles in foreign countries and the colonies is rapidly increasing, and thousands of casks of vinegar and gin are annually exported by this firm: the purity of the vinegar manufactured here is undoubted; at the Great Exhibition of 1851 Messrs. Hills and Underwood received the only prize medal awarded for vinegar, and within the last few years they have introduced several modern and important improvements in their works, which have elicited testimonials from the most eminent chemists of the day: the size and number of the vats remind visitors of those seen in the great breweries in the metropolis: it is only by thus becoming acquainted with the details of the manufacture of this article that we are able to realise what we before vaguely comprehended, the vast importance of the manufacture of an article in such common use as vinegar: the vinegar brewery and distillery form a handsome block of buildings, the whole, including yards and store-houses, covering an area of several acres: the proprietors also carry on an extensive trade in wine and all kinds of spirits; their house in London, the centre from which their large trade in the western, midland and southern counties is carried on, comprises extensive vaults, stored with thousands of dozens of choice wines, and large stocks are also kept in the bonded warehouses in London, Norwich and Yarmouth.

At St. Miles' Bridge are the extensive iron works of Messrs. Barnard, Bishop and Barnards, whose artistic productions in iron and brass have a wide reputation: they are manufacturers of the Slow Combustion or Norwich Stove, known as the Country Parson's Fire Grate, also manufacturers of galvanised wire netting, horticultural and garden requisites &c. &c.

Messrs. Boulton and Paul, of Rose Lane Works, are also extensive manufacturers of wire netting and horticultural buildings, and every requisite for the garden.

The British Gas Light Company have extensive works at Bishop's Bridge and St. Martin's at Palace.

The Waterworks Company serve the city with a continuous supply of good water obtained from the river.

The railway communication is chiefly by the Great Eastern Company, who have three stations, at Thorpe, Victoria and Trowse; the latter is a large and important cattle station; on the departure side of the line are 15 lairs and 19 loading pens, capable of storing 2,000 head of beasts and 4,000 sheep:

on the down side are 9 lairs and 13 pens, which will store 1,500 beasts and 3,000 sheep: the lairs and pens combined cover an area of nearly 7 acres: a new bridge over the line has recently (1883) been built at Trowse at a cost of £15,000.

The new Eastern and Midlands Railway Company have also a station here, called the City station.

Earlham is a parish and village  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles west from Norwich station, situated on the river Yare, over which is an old stone bridge of one arch, within the county of the city of Norwich. The church of St. Mary is a flint stone building, in the Early English style, has chancel, nave and north transept, a square embattled tower, and the whole edifice is enveloped in ivy: the chancel is divided from the nave by a richly-carved oak screen: there is a handsome stained memorial window to John Gurney esq.; a leaden roof was constructed in 1745, and the interior repaired in 1834: near the communion table is a fine ancient monument to the Bacon family richly sculptured in marble; it was many years in St. Giles' church, London, but was obtained by the brother, Walter Bacon esq. and transferred to its present site near the family vault. The register dates from the year 1621. The living is a vicarage consolidated with Bowthorpe, yearly value £120, in the gift of F. Bacon Frank esq. and held since 1849 by the Rev. John Hervey Payne B. A. of Caius College, Cambridge. The Hall, which stands a little south-east of the church, is an old and picturesque mansion: it is in the midst of a park, ornamented with trees and plantations and is the property of Frederick Bacon Frank, esq. but is now occupied by the Rev. William Nottidge Ripley M.A. The principal landowners are Frederick Bacon Frank esq. who is lord of the manor, and the trustees of the late John Gurney esq. The area is 1,255 a. 1r. 34p.: rateable value, £1,555; and the population in 1881 was 238.

Eaton is a parish and suburb of Norwich extending 2 miles south-west, bounded by the Yare, containing a large number of handsome villa residences, occupied by the merchants and traders of the city, within the county of the city of Norwich. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient flint building, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave, covered with thatch, having a tower and 3 bells: the parents of Henry Kirke White, the poet, were interred in this church: the sacramental cup is of date 1634, and there are sedilia and a piscina. The register dates from the year 1568. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 and house and 43 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich and held since 1875 by the Rev. Wm. Melville Pigot M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. A district church named Christ Church was built by subscription, and was opened on the 4th of November 1873: it is a handsome cruciform building of flint with brick and Bath stone facings, in the French Gothic style: it consists of nave and transept, and has a stained east window, and a pretty spire containing 1 bell. There are several nurseries here: that of Messrs. Ewing and Co. covers an area of 40 acres, which are open to the public free on week days. The Norfolk and Norwich Cricket Club have their ground here. The Dean and Chapter of Norwich, who are lords of the manor, and the trustees of the late Richard Hanbury Gurney esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is light and sandy; subsoil, sand and gravel. The crops are of the usual kind. The area is included in Norwich; gross estimated rental, £8,019 4s.; rateable value, £7,055; and the population in 1881 was 1,237.

Parish Clerk, Charles Chamberlain.

POST OFFICE.—William Webb, receiver. Letters are received by foot post from Norwich at 8 a.m. The nearest money order office is at Norwich.

INSURANCE AGENT.—Norwich Union Fire, J. G. Burton National School (mixed), supported by voluntary contributions, with Government grant & small weekly fee from scholars: Frederick Holloway, master; Mrs. Elizabeth Holloway, mistress.

Heigham is a parish and hamlet within the county of the city of Norwich, forming a populous suburb on the north, situate on the river Wensum. The church of St. Bartholomew, standing on an eminence 1 mile north from Norwich Market place, is an ancient flint building, in the Perpendicular style: it has chancel, nave, south aisle, square tower and 3 bells; in 1878 the nave, aisle and tower were restored, the old porch and vestry removed and a north aisle with organ-chamber and vestry erected; the enlargement and restoration were done in memory of Bishop Hall. There are 930 sittings. The register dates from the year 1570. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich and held since 1875 by the Rev. Frederick Taylor. Heigham is celebrated as the retreat (at the time of the Rebellion) of the much persecuted Bishop Hall, who lies buried in the neel of St. Bartholomew's church. The Dolphin Inn, which was his residence, is an interesting relic of ancient times, and has much in it to attract the notice of the antiquarian and archaeologist, as well as the lover of the picturesque.

Lakenham is a parish within the county of the city of Norwich, extending  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles south, situated on the Yare. There are two churches. The parish church of St. John and Saints, situated 1 mile south from the Market place, Norwich, stands on a hill north of the river Yare: it is an ancient building of flint, in the Perpendicular style, and consists of chancel, nave and tower with 3 bells: there is a spire. The register dates from the year 1568. The living is a vicarage, annexed to that of Trowse Newton, of the yearly value of £361, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter. It held since 1860 by the Rev. Alfred Pownall M.A. of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge. Edward William Trafford is lord of the manor and the chief landowner. The soil is gravel; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat and rye. The area is given with Norwich; rateable value £15,000; the population in 1881 was 6,378. Parish Clerk, John Calton.

POST OFFICE.—William Chettleburgh, receiver. Letters received from Norwich, the nearest money order & telegraph office; arrive at 5.15 a.m.; dispatched at 6 p.m.

New Lakenham, south of Norwich, is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1845 out of Lakenham parish. St. Mark's church is a handsome flint building, in the Perpendicular style: it has chancel, nave, and an embattled tower with pinnacles and 3 bells: it contains a wooden lectern, a copy of the one in Shipham church: the chancel windows are stained: there are 900 sittings, most of which are free. The register dates from 1844. The living is a vicarage, yearly value, £150, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter and held since 1873 by the Rev. John William Colvin M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Oxford.

Thorpe Hamlet is a suburb on the east of Norwich, and was constituted a separate ecclesiastical parish in 1852. The church of St. Matthew was erected in the year 1851, and is built upon land, the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich: it is well placed on the slope of a hill close by the river Wensum, and is a solid structure, built of Kentish flint and stone, in the Norman style: the interior is plain and simple: in the apse are stained windows, representing the four Evangelists and the Call of St. Matthew; in the north transept are two stained windows representing the Parable of the Good Samaritan and of the Vineyard Labourers: the church is seated with open benches, and has sittings for 600, which 337 are free. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the rector of Thorpe St. Andrew, and is held since 1874 by the Rev. Richard Deane Pierpoint M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge; the commutation rent charge, in lieu of tithe throughout the district, belongs to the rector, but the surplus fees belong to the vicar: there is no endowment, with the exception of a sum of £1,011 7s. 7d. £3 per cent. Consols, standing in the name of the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, and producing the yearly sum of 30 6s. 8d., which is appropriated in perpetuity towards the support of the minister: in addition to this the minister is entitled, by the deed of endowment, to all the pew-rents derived from 263 sittings in the church, after the deduction of £5 10s. yearly towards the repairs and expenses incident to the performance of divine service: also £95 yearly from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The schools and vicarage house are both built on land abutting upon the church, the gift of the Dean and Chapter: there are three excellent schools for boys, girls and infants, under Government inspection: the school-rooms are commodious and well ventilated, and will hold from 400 to 500 children: they are built of flint, and were erected in the year 1853. The vicarage house is a good substantial structure, built, like the schools, of flint: it was erected in the year 1863.

The area of the city of Norwich is 4,772 acres; rateable value, £267,750; and the population in 1871 was 80,386; and in 1881 was 87,842, as follows:—
